YOUTH WHO KILLED KIDNAPED BOY, 6, SOUGHT BY POSSE

ASSASSIN TELLS PRIESTS AND FLEES

Takes Churchmen to Scene and Escapes—Lad's Companion Names Wealthy Man's 20-Year-Old Son.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—Hunting a youth who went last night to a Catholic church and told two priests he had attacked a boy and left him dying in a hay loft, police today ordered the apprehension of Harold J. Croarkin, 20 years old, son of a wealthy flour dealer, in connection with the death of 6-year-old Walter Schmith.

The boy disappeared last evening. Some hours later a young man entered a room of St. Vincent's Church and told the Revs. L. J. Sweeney and C. J. McCarthy he had attacked a boy in the hay loft of the Devon Riding Academy. The priests thought the young man demented, but finally accompanied him to the loft. He fled soon after they found the unconscious lad on the floor, and with a fractured skull. The boy died an hour later at a hospital, reviving only to give his name.

Other Boy Tells Story.

Search for Croarkin was ordered when George Hingle, Negro stablemaster, named him as having been at the barn last night with two boys. One of the boys, Anthony Horwick, 15, was found by a Police Sergeant who said he had named Croarkin and declared Walter was the other boy. Anthony said him, the officer said, that Croarkin gave them candy but later sent him on an errand, and that when he returned the stable door was locked, though he heard someone inside.

Miss Agnes Furlong, 22 years old, a friend of Croarkin, tonight told the police Croarkin appeared at her home last night shortly after 6 o'clock, seeming greatly excited and almost hysterical. She said he asked her and her brother to accompany him to the home of a priest, explaining he desired to make a confession because he had only about 24 hours to live." The girl said she and her brother did not go with him because they believed him intoxicated.

Croarkin, his mother told police, did not come home last night.

Victim's Friend Missing 3 Days.

Search was begun tonight for Richard Popishel, 14-year-old schoolboy friend of Walter Schmidt. Young Popishel has been missing since Wednesday.

Efforts by officials to identify Croarkin positively through the priests with whom he communicated were unsuccessful when the clergymen refused to reveal the confession made by the youth. They gave much information to police and to the Coroner, but regarded as inviolable the obligation of the church to hold in complete confidence information given in the nature of a confession, even though it was not surrounded by all the formalities of that rite.

The priests did not testify at the inquest, which was postponed after the boy had been identified. They were present, however, and talked privately with the Coroner.

Salesman Under Observation.

Croarkin, police said, was under observation recently in connection with another attack upon a child. He has been a salesman for his father's firm.

The owner of the riding academy property, Nicholas Wietor, a banker in the Devon avenue district of the North Side, took personal charge of a posse mustered to search for the boy's assailant. The child had been struck on the head, apparently several times, the police said, possibly with a chair rung which lay nearby. A bag of candy lying near the spot where the body was found corroborated the story of Anthony Horwick that Walter had been lured thus to the hayloft.

The boy failed to come home last night from school, where he was in the first grade. His parents reported his absence several hours before the priests found him dying.

When the slayer came to St. Vincent's church, he shuffled toward the Rev. Mr. Sweeney in insane fashion, the clergyman said, and indicated he wanted to make a confession. The priests still doubted his story when they went with him to the hayloft. When they found the boy, and while they were considering what to do with the man in view of the sacredness of the obligation of secrecy, their informant slammed the door of the barn and escaped in the darkness.

English Papers Hush Expose of Strike Plot

LONDON, Dec. 18.—During the coal strike last autumn, A. J. Cook, leader of the miners, charged that there had been an attempt to kidnap him at Nottingham. The newspapers cited his story at great length as a sample of the reckless statements Cook was making. Now, however, Cook's charge seems to have been well founded, being confirmed in part by disclosures at the inquest into the case of Maj. Paul Grattan, who was found dead in the Engineers Club recently.

At the inquest yesterday before Coroner Inglesby Oddie, F. L. Raphon, wealthy tire manufacturer, who employed Grattan, appeared to testify, showing possible cause of suicide. He previously had discussed his testimony with Oddie. Oddie refused to let him testify.

"I know what you want to say," said the Coroner. "It is all bosh."

Then the Coroner tried to induce other witness say that Grattan had been in trouble financially although it was testified that Grattan had been offered a $5000-a-year job in America by Raphon. Oddie, after hearing that Grattan had lost a little money on horse-races, ruled: "That's enough — that plainly was the cause of suicide."

After the inquest it was learned that Raphon wanted to testify that Grattan with others planned to kidnap Cook to "get him out of the way" until the coal strike was over. Grattan and his friends, according to Raphin, followed Cook around the country waiting for a favorable opportunity to carry out their plot.

It is now said that Grattan killed himself in fear that exposure of his kidnaping plot would bring sympathy to Cook and start a scandal involving the higher-ups behind Grattan, and fear of exposure led Raphon to offer Grattan a position in America to get him out of the country.

This sensational story was printed today on the front page of Lord Beaverbrook's Express. It was not mentioned by any of the other ten London newspapers. Not even Beaverbrook's Evening Standard mentioned it.

This is merely an obvious, easily demonstrated piece of the voluntary censorship "for King and Country" constantly exercised by English editors, especially during the last few weeks regarding China.

ALCOHOLISM DEATHS IN NAVY INCREASE RAPIDLY EACH YEAR

Figures for 1925 Are Highest Since Days Before Volstead Act Was Passed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Deaths in the Navy from alcoholism have made a rapid increase, according to the Navy's annual report, made public today, the increase dating from the time of the enactment of the Volstead act. A total of 1287 deaths were attributed directly to alcoholism from 1918 to 1925. In 1925, 277 deaths from alcoholism were recorded, against 73 in 1918.

The yearly figures showed a steady annual increase, 1925 figures being the highest of the seven-year period.

Woman Had Originally Purchased Rare Volume for Trifle.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—A first edition of John Bunyan's "Book for Boys and Girls" sold yesterday in England for $10,500, says an official British wireless dispatch picked up by the New York World's station. The only other copy of the edition known to exist is in the British Museum.

"Romance is attached to the event," says the dispatch. "The book was with a number of others bought by a woman at Hemel Hempstead for a half crown some years ago. It was only recently that her daughter, who is a post-office worker, showed it to the local librarian. He submitted it to Hodgson, a book auctioneer, who recognized its rarity and auctioned it."

KILLS BROTHER'S WIFE IN BARBER SHOP CHAIR

American Bride of Gypsy Sweetheart Accused of Over-friendliness With His Father.

By the Associated Press.

SCHUYLER, Neb., Dec. 18.—An 18-year-old American girl, who yielded to the romance of a gypsy sweetheart and became his bride 10 months ago, paid with her life for failing to heed his stern demand that she be not "too friendly" with anyone, not even his father.

The girl, Fannie Mason, had her last argument with her husband last evening when he accused her of "too friendly" relations with his father. As she left the gypsy camp, she was followed by her husband, Duffy Mason, and his brother, Ted. As she sat in a barber's chair having her hair shingled, Ted shot her through the head.

Today, the brothers were formally charged with first degree murder by County Attorney George Wertz, who termed the shooting "the worst case of cold-blooded murder I ever heard of."

The father-in-law, Frank Mason, 60 years old, told the County Attorney he had never been more than a father to his daughter-in-law.

"I loved her only as a father and tried to protect her against my sons who had repeatedly threatened her," he said.

For some time the brothers have accused the girl of being over friendly with their father. A violent quarrel is said to have occurred at the gypsy camp, near Leigh, when the young wife and the elder Mason returned Friday afternoon. Mrs. Mason had visited a sister at Fremont, Neb., where the father-in-law joined her. They went to Omaha Thursday, passing the night at a hotel. The father-in-law said they occupied separate rooms.

After the shooting the brothers walked into a soft drink parlor. Ted brandished his pistol, shouting he had "just killed a woman, and might shoot some more people." Authorities were called and both brothers were taken to the county jail here. They offered no resistence. In their cells today they were silent.

10 NEW CRUISERS PROPOSED IN BILL OFFERED IN HOUSE

Action Follows Conference With Coolidge to Whom Secret Letter on Navy Was Sent.

$105,000,000 FOR WARSHIPS SOUGHT

Congressman Butler Sure Other Countries Are Violating Spirit of Arms Pact.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Acting on testimony that American naval strength is dropping behind that of other nations, Chairman Butler, (Rep.), Pennsylvania, of the House Naval Committee, today introduced a bill to authorize an appropriation of $105,000,000 for the construction of ten 10,000-ton light cruisers.

Drafted hurriedly after the chairman and four committee members, two of them Democrats, had conferred at the White House for nearly an hour last night, the bill was introduced after Butler had represented that the proposed expenditure was in harmony with the President's national defense program.

Butler made no reference in the measure to the three light cruisers authorized by Congress last winter for which the budget bureau failed to recommend an appropriation.

Secret Letter to President.

It was this situation that prompted an immediate inquiry by the committee. After several days of hearings it drafted a confidential letter to the President on the state of the navy. This letter has not been made public.

Butler had no statement to make with reference to the three cruisers already authorized. The act providing for them expires this year. Should funds not be provided by that time, it would be necessary for Congress to extend the law authorizing their construction.

Representative Britten, of Illinois, ranking Republican on the committee, asserted that he had not attended the White House conference but thought that the administration would "make a mistake" if it sanctioned ten new cruisers and failed to provide funds for three already authorized.

"If it doesn't appropriate for those three cruisers now authorized," Britten said, "the authorization of ten additional ones would appear to the world as a big bluff."

Questions Other Nations' Faith.

Butler asserted he was convinced other countries were "violating the spirit" of the Washington arms conference treaty and that the committee was a unit in the decision that American naval power must be maintained at a strength in keeping with the dignity of the nation.

The bill, referred to the Naval Committee, would limit the cost to $10,500,000 for each cruiser, exclusive of armor and armament, and would provide that the cruisers have the "highest practicable speed and the greatest desirable radius of action." Only one limitation would be placed upon their construction. This would be:

"That in the event of an international conference for the limitation of naval armaments, the President is hereby empowered, in his discretion, to suspend in whole or in part any or all construction authorized in this act."

Butler asserted he alone was responsible for this limiting clause. Other committee members conferring with the President, were Representative Andrew of Massachusetts and Coyle of Pennsylvania, Republicans; Vinson of Georgia and Drewry of Virginia, Democrats.

Wilbur Is Pleased.

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur said he was much pleased with Butler's bill.

When the last comparative figures were filed by the Navy, the United States stood third in modern cruiser strength, with ten ships of 7500 tons each. Great Britain had 40 and Japan 19. These figures, however, failed to take into consideration construction programs under way in several countries.

The ten additional cruisers called for by the Butler bill would be exclusive of eight already authorized. Congress has appropriated money for starting work on only five of these.

HOUSE PASSES ALIEN PROPERTY BILL, 279 TO 66

Provides for Immediate Return of 80 Per Cent of Seizure in Custodian's Hands.

GERMANY TO GET THE REST LATER

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—The alien property bill, by which the administration hopes to settle claims of American and German nationals against the two Governments growing out of the World War, was passed today by the House and sent to the Senate.

Offered as a compromise [illegible] able to both the claimants [illegible] all members of the Ways [illegible] Means Committee, which [illegible] it, the bill was approved by [illegible] of 279 to 66.

Opposition came large[illegible] Democrats who contende[illegible] amounted to confiscation [illegible] man property now held by [illegible] property custodian, and [illegible] ised its failure to provide [illegible] bursement of American [illegible] German securities which [illegible] value with the fall of the [illegible]

The Republican majorit[illegible] vented any material changes [illegible] bill, warding off a last minu[illegible] tempt by Representative [illegible] (Rep.), New York, to force immediate return of all property held by the custodian, instead of only 80 per cent. Under the bill the remaining 20 per cent will be held as security until all American claims against Germany are satisfied.

Terms of Restitution.

As described in the committee report accompanying the bill, it would provide "for the immediate payment in full of the claims of American nationals against Germany not in excess of $100,000, and for the payment in full, but in installments, of the remainder of such claims; for the payment in the immediate future of 50 per cent of the claims of German nationals for ships, patents and radio stations and for the payment of the remainder of such claims in installments, but the total amount is not to exceed $100,000,000, less administrative expenses; for the immediate return of 80 per cent of German property held by the alien property custodian and for the eventual return of the remainder."

It would provide also for creation of a "special deposit account," from which the payments are to be made, with exception of the 80 per cent of German property, which will be made from funds held by the custodian.

The special deposit account would be composed of the following items:

"Twenty per cent of the German property temporarily retained by the Allen Property Custodian (estimated at $40,000,000); the German assare of the unallocated interest fund (approximately $25,000,000). Payments heretofore or hereafter received from Germany under the Paris agreement in satisfaction of the awards of the Mixed Claims Commission ($14,000,000 to date and $10,700,000 a year hereafter); an appropriation authorized to be made in amount equal to the awards for the ships, patents and radio stations, $50,000,000 of which is to be immediately available."

Coolidge to Name Arbiter.

The value of ships and other property seized by this Government will be determined by an arbiter to be appointed by President Coolidge. The measure specifies that valuation must not exceed $100,000,000. Proponents of the bill contended the Government had used the ships and had sold some of them, and that the payment out of Treasury funds was justified.

The bill passed out of the House amid sharp exchanges between Chairman Green (Rep.), Iowa, of the Ways and Means Committee, who had charge of the measure, and Representative Cox (Dem.), Georgia.

Green declared Cox had impugned the motives of the committee when he had described the measure as "dishonest" and a "miserable compromise of principle."

Senator Borah (Rep.), Idaho, who had planned to lead the fight against the bill in the Senate, was called to the Treasury today and requested by Secretary Mellon to withdraw his objection.

The Foreign Relations Committee chairman agreed to study the House bill but gave warning that he would oppose it if it contained any semblance of confiscation of German national's property.

FIVE PAN-AMERICAN FLIGHT PLANES TO START TOMORROW

By the Associated Press.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Dec. 18.—Five huge motors in the Pan-American planes purred at Duncan Field here today, ready to be off on their long journey through the uncharted air ways of South America. They are scheduled to start Monday.

A wet field prevented any practice flights and the hours were spent in tuning up, inspecting, overhauling and making certain that the last bolt was in proper shape. Each officer made a final check up on his scanty kit.

Rain this morning soaked all the flying fields, preventing a flight to Media Lake, 35 miles from Duncan Field.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—The Coast Guard schooner Lincoln, formerly a rum runner, recently confiscated by a Federal Court, was destroyed by fire with a loss of six lives today, several miles southwest of Cape Lookout Lightship, off the coast of North Carolina, the Navy epartment was advised by the Coast Guard Cuter Modoc. Two of the crew were rescued.

A message from the British Steamer Defender, intercepted by the Modoc, said she had picked up Gordon J. Schultz and Howard Carter, only survivors of the fire. The schooner burned to the water line and went down. The cause of the fire was not learned.

The Lincoln was a supply ship, based at Cape May, N. J., and was carrying oil and gasoline. She was destroyed so quickly that Coast Guard officials here believe the fire probably started with an explosion. Apparently there was no time to launch the two life boats she carried.

A high wind helped to hasten the ship's destruction. All the Coast Guard vessels in the vicinity have been ordered to join in a search for bodies of the dead.

Carter's mother, Mrs. Rosa Weaver, lives in Ann Arundel County, Maryland and Schultz's mother is Mrs. Mary Schultz, 2236 Homan avenue, Chicago.

POLICE IN AMBUSH FIRE ON PAIR IN OIL FILLING DEPOT

ONE ESCAPES BUT IS CAPTURED LATER

Dead Man Identified as Harry Edwards of Cleveland — Prisoner, Ex-Convict, Confesses.

Two city detectives, hiding in the Standard Oil filling station at 2747 Washington boulevard, opened fire on two robbers who entered the place at 9:05 o'clock last night. They shot to kill, and one of the robbers, wounded in the neck and near the heart, fell dead on the sidewalk outside. The other escaped, unwounded, but was caught an hour and a half later, through investigation of a memorandum found in the dead man's pocket.

The detectives, Charles Rowland and Bryan Kilfoy, had stationed themselves in the washroom, at the rear of the filling station, 15 minutes before the robbers appeared. The robbers' visit was anticipated because of robberies at other centrally located filling stations in the last two nights.

Harry Edwards of Cleveland, O., was the man killed, according to his captured companion, Marty Johnson, of 2517A Mullanphy street, a former convict. Johnson, who confessed his part in the attempted robbery, said he and Edwards had robbed nine or ten filling stations, beginning Thursday night, and had taken about $300. They had met at a "home brew joint" in the 3800 block on Olive street.

Prisoner Tells His Story.

"Edwards got the car we were using," Johnson told police when asked about the Dodge touring car which was found near the scene of the attempted robbery, and which was seen at some of the scenes of previous robberies. "I don't know where he got it," Johnson continued. "I had no gun, and he went into the place ahead of me. When the detectives jumped out and began firing, I ran out and got back to the home brew joint. I picked up a girl there, and went home in a taxi."

Johnson said Edwards, who was armed, had told him that he would not "stand for" being arrested.

Policemen were waiting at the Mullanphy street house, having found Johnson's name and address on a slip which recorded payments on a suit of clothes and which was in Edwards' pocket. Johnson, who is 22 years old, has served 14 months in Leavenworth prison for an automobile theft, and a 6-month workhouse term for manslaughter, having killed a youth in a fist fight. He is now under bond on the charge of holding up a Negro woman and taking her diamonds.

Detective Rowland, telling of the occurrences at the filling station, said he and Kilfoy went there because the conspicuous location of the place, at the northeast corner of Washington boulevard and Leffingwell avenue, seemed to make it likely that the robbers would come there.

Rowland Describes Ambush.

"We told them come in," Rowland said, "and one of them told the manager of the place, 'Put 'em up, put 'em up,' talking fast. He ordered the manager to back toward the washroom door. We waited until they came near, then opened the door.

"The manager dropped to the floor, and we turned loose with our guns. The nearest of the two men fired once or twice, but we were both firing at him, and I think both of us hit him. I fired three shots, and Kilroy fired six. I fired at the other man, but he darted out. The nearer man turned and ran out, and we found him on the sidewalk about 30 yards away."

Kilroy said he saw only the nearer of the robbers, who probably obscured the view of the other from where the detective stood.

The filling station office is a room 10 by 14 feet, cluttered with furniture and appliances, so that there was hardly more than room

SENATE APPROVES MISSOURI RIVER CHANNEL PLANS

Defeats Amendment Charging Part of Cost to Property Owners; Provides $12,000,000 at Start.

CAPE COD CANAL PURCHASE OPPOSED

Only Remaining Obstacle to Passage of House Harbors Bill Attacked by Western Senator.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Another snag in the way of the House Rivers and Harbors bill was removed today in the Senate with approval of a modified program for Missouri River improvements between Kansas City and Sioux City, Iowa.

Agreement on this provision today and on the Illinois River channel project yesterday left as the only probable stumbling block to passage of the measure, which would authorize an expenditure of $60,000,000 for river and harbor improvements, the proposal for purchase of the Cape Cod Canal.

Senator Howell (Rep.), Nebraska, opened up today with a vigorous attack on the House provision to buy the canal for $11,500,000, which is yet to be passed on by the Senate, but despite this, leaders generally predicted that the bill would be put to a final vote by Tuesday.

Provides Six-Foot Channel.

A report from the Commerce Committee, reversing its previous stand that property owners along the Missouri River should meet part of the cost of the Kansas City to Sioux City improvement, ended the fight on this project.

With little opposition the House provision then was accepted with an amendment to limit the depth of the channel to six feet and to restrict the first appropriation to $12,000,000.

Western Senators who accepted the $12,000,000 limitation in return for elimination of the provision demanding partial payment by property owners were chided by Senators Willis of Ohio and Lenroot of Wisconsin, Republicans, who insisted it would result in delay and "dilatory consideration of the project."

"We want this project started," Senator Reed (Dem.), Missouri, replied. "We get $12,000,000 now and we are confident the future will take care of our demands. But, more important, this means the immediate starting of this great work and that is what we want."

Calls It "Pork Barrel."

Senator King (Dem.), Utah, who has denounced the bill from the outset as a "pork barrel" proposal, continued his fight today and made known his objections to the details of the Missouri River proposition.

Discussing withdrawal of the amendment to charge part of the cost to property owners, Chairman Jones of the Commerce Committee announced that he later would offer an amendment declaring it to be the permanent policy of the Government not to demand partial payments by local interests on rivers and harbors projects.

Senator Jones admitted the Missouri River provision does not meet with the full approval of Major General Jadwin, chief of army engineers, but he informed Senator King that no "rebuke" was intended by the committee.

Argue Canal Purchase.

During a two-hour denunciation of the Cape Cod proposal, Senator Howell offered an amendment, which is still to be voted on, to authorize purchase of the canal with the proviso, that 7½ per cent of the purchase price is to equal the average net earnings of the canal for the three-year period ending next Jan. 1.

The Nebraska Senator asserted that the commercial value of the canal had been estimated by Army Engineers at $2,500,000 with an outlay of $25,000,000 to $32,000,000 necessary to place it in effective operation. The canal has lost money for its private operators every month since it was opened, he said.

Howell yielded at intervals to Senators Gillett (Rep.) and Walsh (Dem.) of Massachusetts, and Senator Copeland (Dem.) New York, who favored purchase of the canal. Copeland said he favored its acquisition as a military factor, since it cut 56 miles off the natural water route from New York to Boston.

PRINCIPALS IN SUIT FOR DIVORCE IN PARIS

Francis Burton Harrison.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wrentmore Harrison.

FRANCIS B. HARRISON SUED BY THIRD WIFE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—On grounds of abandonment, Mrs. Elizabeth Wrentmore Harrison, of Berkeley, Cal., has brought suit for divorce from Francis Burton Harrison, Former Governor General of the Philippines and at one time a prominent figure in political circles of the State of New York. He was Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor of that State in 1904.

The usual attempt at reconciliation was made last Wednesday, but Harrison did not appear, and it is announced that he has not defended the suit.

It is expected that a decree of divorce probably will be granted to Mrs. Harrison in the ordinary course, probably early in January.

The pair, who were married in Chicago seven years ago, have lived apart since last summer. Harrison is in Southern Italy, while Mrs. Harrison is in the south of France. Since he retired as Governor General of the Philippines in 1920, Harrison has spent most of his time at his country estate in Alness, Scotland, making only one brief visit to the United States early in the present year.

Mrs. Harrison has the custody of their three children pending the outcome of her action. She was only 18 years old at the time of her marriage, the ceremony being carried out despite the opposition of her parents. Harrison was 45 years old. The marriage took place on the very day that a decree of divorce was signed in favor of his second wife, Mrs. Mabel Judson Cox Harrison.

Harrison's first wife, Mary Crocker, eldest daughter of Charles F. Crocker, California railroad president, died in 1905.

Harrison was a captain, and later adjutant general in the Spanish-American war.

$1,000,000 IN STOLEN JEWELS ARE SOUGHT IN NEW YORK

Belgian Financier Lowenstein's Gems Reported Smuggled From France to America.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Search for a million dollars' worth of jewelry stolen from the Biarritz, France, villa of Alfred Lowenstein, Belgian financier, has centered in New York.

Marcel Carpentier, Paris detective, and M. Rousselet, a Paris insurance operative, today solicited the aid of New York police in tracking thieves who robbed Lowenstein's villa last October. At the time of the robbery, cable dispatches placed the value of the stolen jewelry at $450,000. A string of pearls valued at $125,000 was the most valuable piece stolen.

New York detectives were told the French investigators had reasons to believe the jewelry had been smuggled into the United States and the thieves were in New York City.

Lowenstein recently offered to lend the Belgian government $50,000,000 for two years without interest to help the nation over financial obstacles caused by the shrinkage of the value of the Belgian franc. The offer was declined.

HAWES' BILL TO MODIFY DRY LAW GIVEN TO SENATE

Post-Dispatch Bureau, 20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Senator Harry B. Hawes of Missouri today introduced in the Senate the bill he twice introduced in the House for modification of the Volstead Act, to permit the manufacture and sale of beverages non-intoxicating in fact by eliminating the limitation of one-half of one per cent of alcohol now in the prohibition law. Hawes advocated this change during his Senatorial campaign.

"It will be generally admitted by prohibitionists and anti-prohibitionists, by all scientists, physicians and investigators, that the limitation of one-half of one per cent is arbitrary and is not a scientifically determined point of intoxication," Hawes said concerning his bill, which he explained, does not violate either the letter or the spirit of the Eighteenth Amendment.

"There is nothing sacred in the one-half of one per cent limitation," he continued. "As originally brought into use, it had nothing to do with the question of the intoxicating qualities of a beverage.

Limitation Is Unexplained.

"Why this percentage limit was ever adopted and written into the law has never been explained, because it does not mark the point of intoxication. No one will assert that this limitation is scientifically correct. There will be hardly any dispute that one and a half per cent is not intoxicating, nor even two per cent. The amount of testimony [illegible] times been adduced since two and seventy-five per cent not intoxicating.

"The object of my bill is to make the statute law, [illegible] matter of prohibition, conform to the constitutional intent, and to permit the actual point of intoxication to be determined in a test case through the courts, from the lower, through proper steps, to the Supreme Court, by which steps a scientific percentage may be fixed, whether it be two, two and a half, two and 75 or three per cent. Such orderly process of determination would be conducted through the proper judicial machinery of the courts up to the highest tribune.

"The immediate object of this bill, therefore, is to raise the present prohibition in the Volstead act from one-half of one per cent to two, two and one-half or two and 75 per cent, dependent on a determination of fact by a jury and final review by the Supreme Court.

"Any attempt to determine, by Legislative fixing, the actual point of intoxication by percentages would entail an endless congressional controversy. This can be avoided and the correct limitation, ascertained by juries in our courts of law.

Enforcement Broken Down.

"Prohibition law enforcement has broken down," Hawes said. "This is admitted by all observing men. The President of the United States, Governors of states, Mayors of cities, heads of police departments, the great newspapers of our land, leading educators and all inquiring and investigating minds, have generally admitted the failure of present enforcement.

"If this failure to enforce the prohibition law related exclusively to this one subject, it would be bad enough; but when the example set in this respect tends to break down respect for all law, it becomes a serious menace to the general public welfare and threatens our general public safety."

Hawes said he hoped there would be an opportunity to discuss his resolution during the present session of Congress.

SENATE TO INQUIRE INTO ALLEGED SALE OF FEDERAL PLUMS

Committee to Take Up, Tomorrow, Charges of Bartering of Offices, Especially in Southern States.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—A new move for a Senate investigation of long smouldering charges of the sale of Federal patronage by Republicans was made today by Senator King (Dem.), Utah, who offered a resolution for an inquiry by a select committee.

His resolution, together with a similar one offered yesterday by Senator Harris (Dem.), Georgia, will be considered by the Judiciary Committee at a special session Monday to determine whether an investigation is warranted.

Both resolutions provide for a national inquiry with particular attention to the South, where it has been charged by Democrats in and out of Congress that Republican officials have sold Postoffice and other Federal patronage.

The King proposal declares that "it has been charged that members of the National Committee of the Republican party, chairmen of State committees and other persons having partisan political authority and influence, particularly from States which do not have Republican Senators or Representatives in Congress, have been guilty of bartering recommendations, indorsements, and influence for the appointment of individuals to Federal offices for money and other things of value and advantage."

for the two robbers and the manager. John Scurlock, 21, the manager, said the two men appeared in a Dodge touring car, and getting out of the car, entered the office and gave the hands-up order.

"I threw up my hands and backed toward the washroom, as one of them told me to do," he said. "As the door opened, I dropped to the floor, and the shots were fired over me." He said he had about $30 of the afternoon and night receipts in his change belt at the time.

Robber Wounded in Three Places.

One of Edwards' wounds was under the right shoulder, the bullet passing out of his left side. Another was in the right side of the neck, and a third wound was in his left arm. His revolver, which he dropped on the floor, showed two discharged shells. In his pockets, besides the slip which served as a clew to his comrade, were $56.50 and a pint bottle nearly full of whisky.

Before the name of the dead robber had been learned, detectives visited the Morgue in the attempt to identify the body. Rowland and Kilfoy were congratulated by their superior officers, and by a representative of the Standard Oil Co. The company pays a reward of $100 for the capture and conviction, or the killing, of any person robbing one of its stations, and this is payable in the case of each place robbed. In this case, the representative said; the reward will be paid for each robbery which is shown to have been committed by Edwards. A separate reward, it is expected, will be payable to Johnson's captors if he is convicted of robbery.

Holdup Car Stolen Thursday.

The touring car used by the robbers, which they abandoned at the scene, was stolen Thursday night from Grand and Delmar boulevards, and belonged to W. G. Hartshorn, of 5732 Cabanne avenue.

Detective Rowland is 31 years old, and has been on the police force six years. Kilfoy, who is 29, was a telephone operator and clerk in the department for nine years before becoming a patrolman two years ago. Both are attached to the Laclede Avenue station.

The woman, who accompanied Johnson to his home in a taxicab, was intoxicated. Her first remark to the police was that Johnson had said he was going to a hospital to see a friend. Sharp questioning of Johnson brought his admissions.

Proprietor of Grocery Wounds Negro Who Attempts Holdup.

Henry Feldman, proprietor of a grocery store at 3973 Fairfax avenue, reported to police that a Negro attempted to rob him after inquiring about the price of oranges about 10:30 o'clock last night. Feldman said he fired six shots at the Negro and he thinks two of them took effect. The revolver of the Negro, which he dropped while running from the store, was found near the front door and blood-stains on the floor indicated he had been hit by at least one of Feldman's bullets.

Man's Skull Fractured by Negro Robber in Holdup.

Phillip Nessenholtz's skull was fractured by a blow with a pistol struck by one of two Negroes, who robbed the grocery and meat market kept by Ben Appel, Nesselholtz's son-in-law, at 2000 Wash street. The Negroes forced Appel, his wife, and Nessenholtz to lie on the floor while they took $160 from Appel and the cash register. Meanwhile, Nessenholtz got up, slipped to the door and locked it. As he turned away one of the Negroes struck him on the head with a revolver fracturing his skull. As the Negroes were opening the door Appel hurled a meat cleaver, the flat side of which struck one of the robbers on the head. He fled with the other, however, apparently injured.

Two Negroes, who were arrested at Twenty-first and Wash streets about two hours later, were identified by Nessenholtz, Appel and Mrs. Appel. They gave their names as John Reed and McKinley Catholic. They denied knowledge of the robbery.

Twenty minutes later a man held up Moses Goldenberg in his confectionery at 2925 Gamble street and fled with $13.

Youth Holds Up Seven in Store and Takes $1040 in Noon Raid.

A profane young man with a revolver held up seven men at noon yesterday at the Scalpo-Gunn-Florita Fruit Co., 414 Wash street, struck and kicked two of the men and escaped with $1040 cash and a $200 diamond stickpin.

Six men, including Vincent Florita, vice present, and James M. Tenney, secretary, were on the first floor when the holdup man entered, and he made them lie down. He took $500 from a cash register, $40 from Florita and a diamond stickpin from Tenney. Florita resisted search until the robber kicked him in the chest and struck him on the head with his revolver.

The office safe was empty, and the robber was disappointed to find it so.

"I want the payroll," he declared, with an oath, as he started upstairs. Finding the $500 payroll and the bookkeeper, Otha H. Kirchner, on the second floor, he struck Kirchner with his revolver and took the money. Then he walked downstairs, and out, passing Sterling H. Price, manager, coming in from lunch.

Florita was treated at city hospital for lacerations of scalp and ear, and contusions of the chest. He lives at 2414 North Euclid avenue.

Two Negroes Hold Up Drug Store and Escape With $500.

After presenting a $5 bill in payment for two small purchases in the drug store of Emil Birenbaum, 1800 Carr street yesterday, two Negroes drew revolvers and robbed the proprietor of $500. They escaped after forcing him to lie on the floor.

When the Negroes proffered the bill, at 8 a. m., Birenbaum went to the cash register, which contained $100, for change. He was unable to find the proper amount, however, and walked back of the prescription counter, saying, "I'll get it back here."

The Negroes followed and when he opened a drawer in which $400 was hidden they forced him to hold up his hands. They took the $400 and then looted the register in front. Birenbaum said it was his custom to keep money in the store on Saturday to cash pay checks for employes of a nearby shoe factory.

Fred Roechel, manager of a Kroger store at 4355 Delmar boulevard, was held up and robbed of $60 by an armed man who entered the store about 7:40 a. m.

FORMER CONGRESSMAN LANGLEY GETS PAROLE

Kentuckian Has Served One Year of Two-Year Sentence for Dry Act Plot.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—John W. Langley of Kentucky, once a power in the House of Representatives, was granted a parole today from Atlanta penitentiary.

Langley, who probably will be released Monday, has served one year of a two-year sentence for conspiring to violate the prohibition law. By good conduct he obtained, under regular prison rules, a recommendation for parole, which Attorney-General Sargent granted without action from the White House.

Does Not Preclude Pardon.

While the parole will release the Kentuckian almost unconditionally from prison, it does not restore his civil rights. A presidential pardon, however, would have this effect. While it was said at the Department of Justice that it would be unusual for the President to allow a Christmas pardon so closely after a parole, there is no legal bar to extension of both forms of clemency.

At the time of his conviction Langley was serving his tenth term in the House as a Republican from the Tenth Kentucky District, the mountainous eastern tip of the State, and was chairman of the Public Buildings Committee. Even after his conviction his constituents returned him to Washington, but he resigned from the House when he failed to get a reversal in the higher courts. His wife was elected in November to represent his old district in Congress.

Pardon Sought for McCray.

The Christmas pardons which the President extends are recommended by the Department of Justice, acting on petitions from prisoners or their friends.

Representations for pardons which the department has under consideration include those in behalf of Warren T. McCray, former Governor of Indiana, now serving a 10-year-sentence at Atlanta on a charge of using the mails to defraud. Appeals for mercy in his case have been based in part on the allegation of bad health, and an inquiry was undertaken by the department last week to determine his ability to endure confinement.

Remy declared that certain politicians were trying to thwart the investigators, and for this reason, he said, the inquiry was proceeding cautiously. He added that it would be impossible to make a complete report by Dec. 31 when the present grand jury session ends.

"Witnesses have been threatened and meetings are being held nightly by these politicians where the principal topic of discussion of the grand jury investigation is [illegible] the evidence of witnesses [illegible] have been subpenaed," Remy said.

GHT THROWN N HOW BREWERY PERATED 5 YEARS

Lures of Prosecutions of New Athens Plant Had Caused Complaints From Washington.

SE MADE AFTER CHANGE IN OFFICERS

rrespondence Also Discloses Why Former District Attorney Potter Was Not Renamed.

Failure of officers of the Federal Court in East St. Louis to prosecute five cases instituted by the Government against the New Athens (Ill.) brewery or its owners between 1921 and 1926 was a subject of frequent complaint by Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant United States Attorney-General in charge of prohibition enforcement, to the District Attorney's office in East St. Louis, the Post-Dispatch learned yesterday.

Correspondence passing between Mrs. Willebrandt and the then District Attorney, William O. Potter of Marion, Ill., who recently with five members of his family killed himself, throws considerable light on how the brewery was able to operate in violation of the national prohibition act for five years before the Government last year successfully concluded a prosecution of the brewery and its officers charged with responsibility for its operation.

Undoubtedly one of the reasons why District Attorney Potter's failure of reappointment last spring, after he had served four years, aroused his handling of the various cases against the brewery. In an investigation of his office last year the Department of Justice examiners found numerous evidences of laxity on his part. Worry over his failure to be reappointed was one of the reasons attributed for Potter killing himself, his wife, their children and two grandchildren in their home at Marion about six months ago.

Changes in Court Officers.

Following the change last spring in the personnel of many of the Court officers—Harold G. Baker becoming District Attorney and Judge Walter C. Lindley of Danville succeeding Presiding Judge to succeed Judge English, who resigned rather than face impeachment trial before the United States Senate—the Government began an offensive against the brewery which was to culminate in a successful climax when a jury in Federal Court at East St. Louis convicted 10 persons and the Probst Pure Products Co., the corporation operating the brewery, of conspiracy to violate the Volstead act by manufacture and sale of real beer in this vicinity for three years last spring. The jury acquitted four other persons, while other charges against three women and four men were dismissed by the Government during trial of the case, which began last Monday.

After return of the jury's verdict Judge Lindley assessed penitentiary terms against six defendants, jail terms against two others and reserved decision on motion for new trials for Benjamin J. and George Probst, well-to-do brothers, described by the Government as "the men behind the brewery." Judge Lindley also assessed fines aggregating $47,000 against the 10 defendants and the brewery, the latter being fined $10,000.

Mrs. Willebrandt's first letter to District Attorney Potter, written May 19, 1923, asked why he had refused a bill for injunction against the brewery and had nolle prossed a criminal information against the corporation, filed by Potter's predecessor, James G. Reynolds, following seizure in Herrin, Ill., of a carload of beer of illegal alcoholic content which prohibition agents reported tracing from the New Athens brewery.

Explanation of Potter.

Potter replied a few days later, stating that the agents were unable to obtain proof of their contention that the beer had been shipped from the Probst brewery, and for this reason, he wrote, "the government lacked the evidence to make the cases." The dismissals were entered by Judge English on Potter's recommendation on April 4, 1923.

A second letter, on Dec. 11, 1924, Willebrandt wrote of learning of the dismissals from a source other than the District Attorney's office and called Potter's attention to his failure to follow instructions in not notifying her of dismissal of the cases.

The Post-Dispatch yesterday also obtained how the prohibition seizure happened to seize the beer at Herrin. On Oct. 7, 1921, a man named M. T. Kiggins, then in charge of prohibition agents in the St. Louis and offered Kiggins $1,000 if he would "keep your men out of Herrin, Duquoin, Carbondale and Willisville for a week or ten days."

Kiggins dispatched agents to Southern Illinois cities and, on Oct. 11, Agent House seized a carload of beer at Herrin. He reported it had been shipped over the Illinois Central Railroad from New Athens in two men in Herrin.

House said a man approached him with an offer of money to let him unload the car, which he told House had been purchased from an official of the Probst Pure Products Co. House refused the offer and when he left the contraband unguarded for a short time he returned to find it had been moved. He traced it to Zeigler, a few miles away, and there the same man approached him again.

The man prevailed upon House to take a drink purporting to be whisky and he awoke the next morning in the basement of a Herrin saloon. The whisky had contained a drug. When House returned to the depot the cargo of beer had been removed from the boxcar. Later it was traced to a warehouse and seized.

So far as known, District Attorney Potter never made an investigation of the reports of House or Kiggins with a view to prosecution of the persons offering the bribes.

The next time prohibition agents acted against the brewery was July 16, 1923, when they seized a carload of beer on an East St. Louis railroad siding. They reported tracing it from the New Athens brewery. No action was taken against the brewery by Potter and on Jan. 2, 1924, Mrs. Willebrandt again wrote, advising him that he had failed to mention the case in his letters to her the previous November and asking for a report on what action he had taken.

Potter Again Questioned.

Potter, under date of Jan. 7, wrote that he had issued a criminal information against the brewery corporation Jan. 3 to cover the violation alleged to have occurred the previous July. "The reason the information was not filed before is because an investigation was necessary to ascertain whether or not this brewery shipped the carload of beer in question," Potter asserted in his letter.

Potter's statement that he issued the information Jan. 3 is contradicted by the record, which shows the information was filed Jan. 4. The District Attorney would have had time to receive Mrs. Willebrandt's letter by Jan. 4, but he could not have received it Jan. 3.

Mrs. Willebrandt replied on Jan. 19, 1924, as follows: "The report of investigating officers contained in our files indicates that the investigation of this phase of the matter was conducted before making the report on July 21, 1923. In view of the long delay which this case has encountered I will be glad if you will take steps to dispose of it as early as possible."

Potter did not reply to this letter, but the case dragged on until Oct. 6, 1925, when he appeared before Judge English and obtained dismissal of the charges. He reported to Mrs. Willebrandt that he did this because the chemist's analysis of three samples of the beer seized varied widely as to alcoholic content, one test showing the beer to contain more than 4 per cent alcohol, while the other two showed less than one-half of 1 per cent. However, a prohibition agent who took the samples to the chemist after the seizure said all the samples tested contained considerably more than 4 per cent of alcohol.

More Beer Seized.

While this case was still pending general prohibition agents visited the brewery and, on Aug. 19, 1924, reported following a truck from the brewery a short distance before seizing it and arresting the driver and confiscating several barrels of real beer. Two months later Potter filed a bill for an injunction against the Probst Brothers Pure Products Co., and issued a criminal information against five officers of the corporation, including Ben and George Probst, convicted Friday. The following May, Potter dismissed both cases after the truck driver had affirmed that he got the beer at a Mascoutah brewery and had just gone by the New Athens brewery on a visit.

"The agents weren't positive they had seen the truck enter and leave the brewery so I was forced to drop the cases," Potter wrote to Mrs. Willebrandt after this action.

And thus did the District Attorney attempt to explain to his superior officer why, despite the repeated attempts of the prohibition agents, the Government's efforts to bring the erring brewery and its officers to the bar of justice had gone for naught.

It will be recalled that Judge English ceased to hold Court about the same time Potter went out of office last spring. Judge English stepped off the bench when the House of Representatives voted to impeach him before the Senate on evidence gathered by the Post-Dispatch. His resignation, Nov. 4, came on the eve of his trial before the Senate.

"Friend of Court" Out Also.

Appearing as counsel for the brewery in all the cases disposed of by Judge English and Potter was Charles B. Thomas, "the standing receiver and personal friend of the Court" and Referee in Bankruptcy by appointment of Judge English until Jan. 8, 1925, when he resigned simultaneously with the publication by the Post-Dispatch that his office and that of Judge English were under investigation.

In the last two cases brought by Potter against the brewery, George W. English Jr., son of Judge English, appeared with Thomas as counsel. He was admitted to practice in his father's Court one month before he appeared as attorney of record for the brewery.

Thomas became interested with George C. Probst in organization of the Metropolitan Trust Co., in East St. Louis, late in 1924, but the company was dissolved after Thomas' resignation as Referee in Bankruptcy.

The Government's campaign against the brewery under direction of District Attorney Baker is in striking contrast to the previous attempts. Baker was aided in the prosecution by his assistant, Ralph Lesemann. Both are comparatively recent graduates of the University of Illinois, Baker being 28 years old and Lesemann, 26.

Ten months after two dry agents, posing as "a big butter and egg man," and "a lazy gambler" started gathering evidence for a conspiracy case, and during the first term of court following return of an indictment, the case was brought to trial and convictions obtained.

Last night four of the defendants departed for Leavenworth prison in company with Deputy Marshals to start serving the sentences imposed by Judge Lindley. The prisoners were: Ervin J. Gintz and Hobart Miller, Belleville saloonkeepers, who were given two years in the penitentiary and $10,000 fines; and Arthur Gass, beer truck driver, and William Schreiber, brewmaster, who were given a year and a day in Leavenworth and fined $2000 each.

Philip Wolf of Mascoutah and Antone Wolf of Belleville, both saloon proprietors, also were given prison terms of a year and a day, besides $5000 fines, but they were taken back to Saline County jail at Harrisburg Friday to complete serving nine months' sentences before going to Leavenworth.

One Taken to Jail.

Julius Wolf, brother of Philip and Antone, whose frequent brags to the two disguised dry agents about "big men being behind the brewery" assisted materially in making the case, was taken yesterday to Vermillion County jail at Danville to start serving a six months' jail sentence. He also was fined $2000.

Ben Turcott, the other defendant convicted, whose purported signautre appeared on the incorporations papers of the Probst Pure Food Co., ownership of which all defendants disclaimed, has appealed from a three months' sentence at Danville and a $1000 fine and is at liberty under $5000 bond.

It is not likely Judge Lindley will announce a decision on the motion of the Probst brothers for a new trial for more than a month, as he plans to make a careful study for reversible errors in the record, it being certain that the two brothers will appeal if he denies their motion.

New Athens Brewery; Officials Who Convicted Ten Men

To the right is the one-story building of the Okaw Dairy Co., operated by Benjamin J. Probst, convicted with his brother as "the big men behind the brewery." The tall building is the brewery, operated by the "Probst Pure Products Co." To the left, in a-story building across an alley, is Benjamin Probst's office.

SMOKE COMMISSIONER VIEWS PALL FROM AIR

Reports Sooty Cloud Spreads 50 Miles Beyond City at 3500-Foot Altitude.

To observe smoke conditions in St. Louis with a view to determining the extent and general source of the smoke pall on a cold day, Smoke Commissioner Robert R. Gordon spent an hour in the air between 3 and 4 p. m. today. In a National Guard plane with Maj. C. R. Wassall he flew from Bridgeton Field to Baden, followed the Mississippi River south and came back across the western industrial and residence district.

A smooth blanket of gray smoke extended as far as the eye could reach up to a height of about 3500 feet, and apparently spread 50 or 60 miles beyond the limits of the city. Gordon said he could see but little smoke issuing from industrial chimneys, the pall being fed mainly from home and apartment house chimneys. The largest contribution to the downtown pall, he said, appeared to be from the Cahokia power plant south of East St. Louis which was emitting dense volumes of gray smoke.

Gordon made a similar observation flight two weeks ago on a warm day when the greater part of the smoke issued from industrial plants. Representatives of the Citizens' Smoke Abatement League plan to make similar flights in a Scott Field airship, if the approval of the Army Air Service can be obtained.

ALIBI TO BE DEFENSE IN MELLETT CASE

McDermott Stakes Life on Proving Absence From Canton—Witness Called His 'Double.'

By the Associated Press.

CANTON, O., Dec. 18.—Patrick Eugene McDermott is staking his life on an alibi. This was made clear tonight with the announcement by defense counsel that McDermott, on trial for the murder of Don R. Mellett, Canton publisher, will be the last defense witness. They declared his story would come as the climax of a steadily built up alibi.

Establishment of alibis for both McDermott and Ben Rudner, also indicted for the murder, was begun early today in a half-day court session after the State had rested its case.

Asked by newspapermen how he would account for himself at the time of the murder shortly after midnight last July 16, McDermott smiled and replied:

"I won't have to tell that. This time it won't be necessary."

Groundwork for the alibis was laid today principally by Mrs. Ben Rudner and by Eddie Rudner, Ben's younger brother. Eddie Rudner said it was he, and not McDermott, who accompanied Ben Rudner to Canton police headquarters Sunday night, July 11. His testimony presented the defense claim that Eddie is McDermott's "double" who was mistaken on that night for the man now on trial.

Tells of Traffic Dispute.

Testimony by State witnesses earlier in the trial that Ben Rudner and McDermott went to police headquarters that night had supported the State's declaration that police protection was being given Rudner, McDermott and Louis Mazer, the trio indicted for the murder. Eddie Rudner explained he and his brother visited headquarters because of a dispute which followed a traffic accident.

Mrs. Rudner's testimony was devoted to a minute narrative of her husband's movements, as she recalled them, on dates on which the State has charged important incidents in the alleged conspiracy occurred.

She testified she was either with her husband or could account for his movements throughout the evening of July 8, when, according to Steve Kascholk, principal prosecution witness, McDermott and Rudner conferred in Massillon. In accounting for Rudner's whereabouts that evening, she said she was with him most of the time either in the store or at home, except for a period when he and his father, Max Rudner, drove to Canal Dover.

The next day, she testified, Rudner was ill because of a felon on his finger which made it impossible for him to work or drive an automobile. She said he was around the house most of the day and was home early that evening. It was that night, Kascholk had testified that Rudner introduced him and McDermott to a "Mr. Smith," who, it was alleged, turned out to be Mazer. Mrs. Rudner said she had driven the car for Rudner during the day, but that he was at home all evening.

Tells of Drive to Wooster.

Mrs. Rudner said she was in Cleveland at the time of the murder. On the evening of July 26, she said, she and her husband, with some neighbors, drove to Wooster, leaving early and returning late. It was that night, the State charges, that McDermott drove from Cleveland to Massillon and visited Rudner to be "paid off" for the murder.

The last State witness, William Brumme, Massillon salesman, testified he had seen S. A. Lengel, Canton's deposed police chief, conferring with Rudner in his store twice not long before the murder. Previous State witnesses had testified Rudner and Lengel conferred in the chief's office at police headquarters. Prosecutor C. B. McClinton said the testimony was offered as evidence of alleged police protection.

MAN FOUND HURT IN STREET THOUGHT INJURED BY AUTO

Apparently struck by an automobile which did not stop, James Sullivan, 49 years old, of 4059A Olive street, was found unconscious in the street at Delmar boulevard and Euclid avenue, at 7 o'clock last night. He was taken to City Hospital, in a serious condition from cuts, internal injuries and possible skull fracture.

Policemen could find no one who had seen an accident and Sullivan was unable to make a lucid statement.

POLICE GO ON TEN-HOUR SCHEDULE DURING HOLIDAYS

A police holiday season schedule which gives 25 per cent more strength between 7 p. m. and 1 a. m.—the peak hours for crime—with two hours less overtime than the customary switch to the two-platoon system, has been devised by Chief Gerk, effective yesterday.

The new schedule was ordered "until further notice." The Chief declared crime was "at a minimum" rather than on the increase, but, with the holidays at hand, he wished to be prepared for "eventualities."

Under the two-platoon system each policeman had to work 12 hours a day, and there was a 24-hour extra strength of 165 men. Chief Gerk's new order gives an extra strength of 330 men—or double strength—at the hours when it is most needed, with only 10 hours' daily duty. The first platoon, off duty at 3 p. m., will return from 7 to 9 p. m. The second platoon, off duty at 11 p. m., will remain until 1 a. m., and the third will come on duty at 9 instead of 11 p. m.

Body of Man Identified.

The body of a man found Thursday on the right-of-way of the Alton, Granite & St. Louis Traction Co., apparently frozen to death, has been identified as Edward Brown, 65 years old, formerly a resident of Granite City. He had resided at the county home at Edwardsville for the last two years.

$60,000 LOSS BY FIRE IN EAST ST. LOUIS STORE

Fire in the Ryan Furniture Co., 120-122 Collinsville avenue, the center of the business district in East St. Louis, caused about $60,000 damage to the building and contents at 10:30 o'clock last night. Five engines and a truck responded to a general alarm at that time, and an hour and a half later had the blaze under control.

Traffic was tied up in the vicinity of the fire for nearly an hour. The origin of the blaze has not been determined.

The first and third flors of the building are devoted to the salesrooms and storerooms of the Ryan Furniture Co., and on the second floor are offices and the living quarters of John A. Ryan, owner of the building. There was no one in the building at the time of the fire.

TEXTILE OPERATIVES' UNIONS TO QUIT FEDERATED BODY

Notice of Withdrawal to Be Delivered Tomorrow; Trouble Over Strike Assessments.

By the Associated Press.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Dec. 18.—Notice of withdrawal of the entire membership of the American Federation of Textile Operatives from the Federated Textile Unions of America will be given to officers of the latter union in New York tomorrow. President James Tanzes, of Fall River and Secretary William E. G. Batty of New Bedford, of the Textile Operatives, left today to deliver the message in New York.

Membership of the A. F of T. O. comprises nearly three-quarters of the membership in the Federated textile unions, it was said by leaders here. The immediate cause of the action was the action of several member unions in the A. F. of T. O. in withdrawing from the Federated unions, due to dissatisfaction with strike assessments levied by the latter organization.

The American Federation of Textile Operatives has a large membership throughout New England, and is composed largely of unions which have seceded from the United Textile branch of the American Federation of Labor.

To Report Oil Survey in Year.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Survey of the petroleum industry and the study of oil conservation will require another year for completion, the Federal Oil Conservation Board reported today to President Coolidge. Charged with going into all phases of production and finding what must be done to safeguard the world's supply of petroleum, the board, of which the Secretaries of War, Navy, Commerce, and Interior are members, has already conducted research on the domestic producing situation.

DEMOCRATS FIGHT ANY MOVE TO LET SMITH IN SENATE

Conference of Party Leaders Decides on Unequivocal Opposition to Seating of Illinoisan.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Democratic leaders in the Senate decided today at a conference to resist any attempt on the part of Frank L. Smith of Illinois to take the oath as a Senator.

The conference was reported as developing no sentiment for the seating of Smith but some questioned the wisdom of denying him the right to present his credentials. Several Senators were designated to look up the law and precedents. The conference decision was said to be not binding on any of those participating, who remained were free to follow their own convictions.

WORLD'S TALLEST MOORING MAST FOR AIRSHIPS PLANNED

Anchorage 1147 Feet in Air Proposed by Builders of Projected Skyscraper in Detroit.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 18.—The world's highest service station for dirigibles, mooring mast on the roof of the 85-story Book Tower, is announced as a probable extension of construction plans for the skyscraper to be begun next March by J. B. Brook Jr., and Edwards Schlee of Detroit.

This aerial wharf, if constructed, would rise 1147 feet or double the height of St. Peter's at Rome or the great Pyramid of Egypt and higher than the Eiffel Tower in Paris.

SEES BEHEADING IN MOVIE, GOES HOME AND KILLS WIFE

Kansan Cuts Mate's Throat, Declaring He Would Be Decapitated if He Didn't.

BURLINGTON, Kan., Dec. 18.—Hallucinations that he would be decapitated unless he killed his wife, caused Jesse Reed, a farmer near here, to kill her last night, a confession signed by Reed revealed, according to Ray Pierson, county attorney.

"Somebody had to do it, so I did it," Reed is said to have repeated in his cell tonight. An insanity plea will not be accepted, Pierson indicated.

Mrs. Reed, mother of five children, was found in her kitchen, with her throat slashed by a razor, when neighbors were summoned by a daughter. The Reeds were prosperous and never had been known to quarrel, neighbors said.

Reed had witnessed a motion picture depicting the decapitation of John the Baptist, whom he seemed to think resembled him, Pierson said. Returning home, he armed himself with a razor and killed his wife, the county attorney said.

GETS STRANGE DISEASE FROM RABBIT BONE

Woman Pierces Thumb While Cleaning Animal and Contracts Tularemia.

The first case of tularemia, an infectious disease transmitted by rodents, to be reported in St. Louis, is attracting the attention of the medical profession here and will be the subject of a paper read before the St. Louis Medical Society at a future date.

Mrs. Theresa Collins, 58 years old, of 2205 Chouteau avenue, accidentally punctured the skin of her right thumb with the bone of a rabbit she was cleaning three weeks ago. Three days later she became ill, suffering nausea and a high temperature. A physician ordered her removed to St. Mary's Infirmary, 1536 Papin street.

Culture Reveals Disease.

The fever was accompanied by a swelling of the lymphatic glands. Physicians at first did not connect the illness with the injury caused by the rabbit bone because of the trivial nature of the wound. No evidence of infection was found in the wound, but a bacteria culture later was obtained from a swollen gland in Mrs. Collins' arm. This culture was sent to McCormick Institute at Chicago, where comparison with known tularemia bacteria established the nature of the disease.

The disease was discovered in 1911 by a physician named McCoy, who became ill while making laboratory experiments to determine the cause of an epidemic among ground squirrels in Tulary County, California. Dr. McCoy's assistant also was stricken, and as their symptoms were identical, Dr. McCoy was able to "chart" the disease.

Subsequent cases later were reported in South Carolina, Washington, D. C., and Missouri. The bacteria were studied in laboratories in this country and England, and it was determined that the disease was contracted through handling rodents, particularly rabbits and ground squirrels. Of the 20-odd known cases recorded in medical journals, only one fatality resulted.

Illness Not Mortal.

All cases are practically identical, the patients being seriously ill for a period of six weeks and requiring from six months to a year to fully recover.

While not regarded as highly contagious, tularemia can be contracted from an infected patient, or through handling laboratory cultures of tularemia bacteria. The fact that there is no record of infection through eating diseased rabbits is because the germs are killed through cooking, physicians believe.

While Mrs. Collins' condition is still regarded as serious, she is expected to recover. Tularemia was named by Dr. McCoy for the county in which he discovered the disease.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls or answers by mail cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

POST-DISPATCH BOOSTER.—The 1832 half dollar is worth $45. WM.—The 1893 dime is worth only 12c.

DISGUSTED.—We do not know of an employment agency of the special type you mention.

G. E.—Write to the radio station in the city from which the saxophone music was broadcast and the letter will be forwarded to the musician.

OLD SUBSCRIBER. — Consult the books of recitations at the Public Library. We cannot name the most popular recitations, as such a list would be a mere conjecture. Perhaps the librarians could help you.

T. W. O.—According to the Pan-American Union, the American colony in Esperanza, Peru, has been abandoned. Americans apparently have not liked the life in the wilderness of Peru as well as people of other nations, as they gradually became discouraged and left the town.

VERY ANXIOUS.—It is correct to address the Christmas card to whichever one of the three brothers you know best and then add after his name the words "and brothers." Always address envelopes to Mr. and Mrs. whether you happen to know both persons or not. This applies to the Christmas cards you intend to send to your two employers.

CHRISTMAS CAKE.—German cakes: Cream ¼ pound butter, ½ pound pulverized sugar and 3 even tablespoons flour. Flavor with rosewater and spread in thin cakes in a drippig pan. Bake, and while still hot roll them and then give them a sprinkling of powdered sugar. German ginger nuts: Make a smooth dough of 1 pound butter, ½ pound sugar, 1 quart molasses, 3½ pounds flour, 5 even tablespoons ginger, 3 even teaspoons allspice, 1 teaspoon cloves and 2 teaspoons of cinnamon. Roll out thin and cut into tiny cakes about the size of a penny. Mix enough water and molasses to make a thin syrup in which to dip the tiny cakes. Drain the bits of dough for a minute on a clean napkin and then place them on a baking sheet to bake in a moderate oven. German nut cakes: Pour ½ cup boiling water over ½ cup of half-and-half butter and lard, then add ½ cup brown sugar and ½ cup molasses, in which has been mixed 1 teaspoon soda, 3 cups flour, ½ teaspoon ginger, 1-3 teaspoon grated nutmeg, ¼ teaspoon cloves and 1 teaspoon salt. Beat into a smooth dough, chill thoroughly, roll ¼ inch thick, cut into fancy shapes, sprinkle with chopped black walnuts and bake from 10 to 15 minutes in moderate oven on baking sheets. Variety cookies: Cream ½ cup butter and add 1-3 cup of sugar gradually, then 1 egg well beaten, ¾ cup flour and ½ teaspoon vanilla flavoring. Have ready sultana raisins, currants, tiny bits of citron, blanched almonds, half pecans, shredded cocoanut and bits of candied cherry and orange peel. Then dough is well mixed drop it from the tip of a tablespoon to a buttered baking sheet about two inches apart. Dip a cold water and spread each small drop rather thin. Decorate the wafers with a plump raisin, two currants, a nut, bit of citron or peel, a few shreds of cocoanut or bits of candied cherry. Bake carefully and watch well, as they only require a few minutes in a moderate oven.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

P. C.—For advice on the matter of bondsman please call upon the City Editor of the Post-Dispatch at your earliest convenience.

MILDRED C.— Jointly owned property by husband and wife cannot be attached or levied upon in a damage suit against the husband.

C. W. L.—You should notify the furnace company to either remove the furnace or to put it into proper working order, or else you will sue them for damages. If they do nothing then consult a lawyer regarding a damage suit.

E. C. — If the company from whom you bought your furniture on time payments has sold your account to another company and has assigned your contract to the new company you will have to continue payments on the furniture just as if the old company was still in business, though you actually pay the money to the new company.

I. G. G.—If you care to do so, you can sue your husband for a divorce and alimony and ask the court to recover the loan for one of the sum still has the money he borrowed or has other assets from which to pay it. You should consult a lawyer. The husband would probably have to pay the cost of the divorce if you filed suit against him.

MARIE O.—You do not have to give up possession of the apartment until the actual day on which you must legally vacate the premises even if you move before that day, unless you agree to do so. If the landlord wishes to rent the apartment before your month is up you might get him to give you a rebate on the month's rent that you paid.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

J. B. B.—Address the radio station for the information you desire. In testing urine for sugar the chemical, sulphate of copper, is used. This test is called the Fehling test.

WORRIED.—Varicose veins are sometimes cured by surgical removal or by injecting. Taking through the last method takes a very long time to produce results. It is very unlikely that the other condition you mention is caused by the varicose veins. There is no particular danger from such veins except rupture and consequent hemorrhage. Poor and constipated circulation is one of the causes and constipation is sometimes another cause. You should try taking carold and bile salts tablets (or doses of one or two tablets between meals. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope if you desire a proper diet list.

FRANCELL.—We know of no reason for believing that your wife's habits are at fault regarding the condition you mention. Examinations of both persons would be the only way of determining whether one or the other is incapable of parenthood. Men often think they do not suspect such to be the case.

TAX LEVY ORDERED TO PAY $7500 JUDGMENT

University City to Appeal to Supreme Court Against the Writ.

Litigation is pyramiding in the effort of the estate of Frank E. Pyle, a service car driver, to collect damages from University City for negligence alleged to have caused Pyle's death on Feb. 16, 1922. The latest chapter is a court order to the suburb to make a tax levy sufficient to pay a $7500 judgment in the case, but that is to be appealed.

Pyle, who was 28 years old and resided in Wellston, was driving his car on Ahearn avenue, south of Olive boulevard, at night, with Edward B. Guthrie of University City as a passenger, when it crashed through a guard rail and rolled into the River des Peres. Pyle's neck was broken, but Guthrie appeared to have been drowned.

Suit against University City, charging that the spot was improperly protected, was filed by Pyle's father, Cleaver Pyle, for the estate. A jury in Circuit Court at Clayton awarded the $7500 judgment in February, 1924, with interest from that date till paid. The case reached the St. Louis Court of Appeals, which, on July 26 last, issued a mandate for payment, but with interest effective only from that date.

City Attorney Joseph Grand said the saving in interest was between $1200 and $1500 by this order. Charles W. Rutledge, attorney for the estate, obtained an execution against the suburb, but it was returned unsatisfied, because no property seizable under the law could be found to satisfy the claim.

Seeking to force payment, Rutledge asked Circuit Judge McElhinney, at Clayton, for a writ of mandamus to compel the tax levy by University City officials. The writ was issued a week ago, giving 30 days in which to order the levy. However, the city attorney is preparing to appeal to the Supreme Court of Missouri against the writ, continuing his insistence that University City is not liable for the accident. An appeal from the judgment mandate of the Court of Appeals is pending in the Supreme Court, returnable next April.

University City is not bankrupt, City Attorney Grand declared, and the order for a tax levy is not to be taken as evidence to the contrary. The levy would require collection of taxes to meet the judgment above the sum needed for ordinary expenses of the suburb, but within the limit of 50 cents on the $100 which University City can collect as a municipality.

BOY SCOUTS TO TRIM TREES WITH FOOD FOR HUNGRY BIRDS

Troops Will Place Cranberries, Popcorn, Grain and Suet As Christmas Deed.

Boy Scouts plan to provide birds of St. Louis with an appropriate Christmas dinner.

In co-operation with the St. Louis Bird Club, Scout troops in various parts of the city will trim the trees of their neighborhoods with generous rations of the sort that birds enjoy. Earle W. Beckman, St. Louis Scout executive, issued an appeal in behalf of this measure yesterday and advised all Scout troops that supplies of nuts and grain will be provided by the Bird Club and may be obtained at Mary Institute, 475 Lake avenue, where the school janitor is in charge.

Scouts have been asked to select growing trees at sheltered points as far away as possible from traffic centers and to string these trees with popcorn, cranberries and small bags filled with broken nut meats, grain and suet. The bags should be about 2¼ by 4 inches and should be made of mosquito netting.

The Scouts are asked to obtain suet from their butchers. Further details may be obtained at Scout headquarters, 505 Chemical Building.

Princess Mary's Sons Musical.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 18. — Princess Mary (Viscountess Lascelles) has discovered that both of her little sons are developing marked musical tastes, and one of her Christmas presents for them is a collection of nursery rhymes set to music. Though Princess Mary is not as fond of music as her brothers, the Prince of Wales and Prince George, she plays the piano quite well.

CAUTION IS KEYNOTE AS YEAR END APPROACHES

Special Wireless to New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Dec. 18—Arthur W. Kelly, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in his year end review says:

"The year seems likely to end on a cautious note, which is not regrettable, as there is a tendency to recognize the after-effects of the coal stoppage rather with a view to over-emphasize the prospects for early trade revival.

"Moreover, while a lower bank rate than the new year is anticipated, there is no disposition to expect much easier money. The policy of the central banks clearly is to avoid, if possible, extremes in any way.

"Certain gold demands would not go to such great lengths if wise risk were exercised by New York and London in granting credit facilities. Both centers in matter of rates are now going to the extreme. It must be remembered also that the cautious attitude here is likely to increase as the period approaches for ending the two-year credits granted by the United States, the helping our return to the gold standard. These credits have never been used, but nevertheless they may have had a sentimental influence.

"Making all allowances for the coal stoppage and the set-backs during the current year has not been unfavorable to financial interests, although the key industries, of course, have suffered heavily. On the financial side, however, the Bank of England has gained material amounts of gold, largely to avoid, if possible, extremes in any way.

"Making all allowances for the coal stoppage and the set-backs during the current year has not been unfavorable to financial interests, although the key industries, of course, have suffered heavily. On the financial side, however, the Bank of England has gained material amounts of gold, largely through its ability to attract it from the United States, the helping our return to the gold standard. These credits have never been used, but nevertheless they may have had a sentimental influence.

"Banking profits have been good and the total capital issues have increased with a considerable expansion of our loans abroad. Credit has also been comparatively unimpaired, and the depression in the coal, railway, iron and steel industries have been partly offset by the exceptional prosperity in other industries, including tobacco.

"Cotton spinners and manufacturers have been especially hit during the year, but there is a growing disposition to recognize Manchester methods as partly responsible for stimulating foreign competition, and a change in tactics is not unlikely.

"Fresh capital flotations, especially in New York, will probably be large, and some are apt to be attracted by the boom of the club likely to be applied here, it is considered that the United States will probably keep in the lead, and on the same reasoning, it is considered that her gold activity will be maintained."

Uneven trading featured the past week's cattle market, prices showing higher tendencies during the fore part of the week which were wiped out in semifinal and closing trade, some kinds showing losses as compared with the previous week's finish. Mature beeves closed the week no better than steady on best kinds, some medium offerings 25c off. In contrast, spots in fat yearling market were 25c higher. Butcher steers and heifers after displaying strength in prices during the week's early sessions also drooped off late in the week on decreased demand. In final sessions, salesmen experienced much difficulty in moving this class and spots were lower than the previous week. Prices on stocker and feeder steers moved up 25c and cows 50c higher than the previous week under a narrow supply and broad demand. Cows, heifers and bulls in the stocker and feeder division were not essentially changed during the period. Veal calves were 50c higher, closing at $13.50 in a series of higher markets, declined Friday and closed the week at $13, steady with the previous Friday. Many of the plainer calves also strengthened their position during the fore part of the week, but a good share of the advance was lost later. Bulk of the best steer offerings moved during the week at $7.75 to $10, with plainer kinds down to $7 and occasionally under. Top prices in the yearling division ranged from $10.25 to $14.25, mature beeves reaching a peak of $11.35. The best weighty drove of steers received here the last week was made $10.50 and averaged 1316 pounds. Receipts from Oklahoma included 25 cars of cake-fed steers that sold in a range of $7.50 to $8.75 early, butcher stuff, odd head of fancy steers and heifers sold from $11 to $12 with the bulk of fat kinds making $8 to $9.50. Crassery sold mostly at $5 to $6 and $7. Beef cows underwent the severest test of the week, with tops making $7 to $8 and low-grade offerings down to $4.25. Most cutter cows sold in a spread of $4 to $4.50 and canners $3.50 to $3.75, strong kinds up to $4. Practical top on bologna bulls reached $6.25, but heavyweight beef grades sold as high as $6.50. Bulk of good bologna bulls sold at $5.50 to $6, with common and canner grades ranging down.

A range of $8 to $7.85 covered most transactions in the stocker and feeder steer division, with cows $4 to $5 and heifers $4.75 to $6.25. Bulls ranged $4.50 to $6. Bulk of veal calves for the week sold at $13 to $13.50, with closing top and bulk at $13. First cuts brought $10 to $10.50 early in the week $11, with heavy grades ranging down to $9.50 and $8. Southern canner yearlings ranged from $4.50 to $4.75 principally, some as high as $5.

Record Day-Run of Hogs.

The week opened with a heavy run of swine locally, a total of 21,200 head getting to the stockyards on Monday, a new day's offering for more than a year. Fully 50 per cent of the total that day consisted of hogs weighing 250 pounds and lbs. in weight. Buyers bore down hard as a result of the liberal supply on hand, general market breaking the 25c mark that day, with hogs off 25c to $1. After Monday, however, prices were substantially up while Tuesday proved the low day of the week, after that there was material improvement. By Wednesday the top had crawled back to $11.75, where it stood at the week's opening, and Thursday saw a further advance, a top of $11.90 being registered. Early Friday, under the stimulus of a broad order demand, there was further advance, light hogs advancing to a $12 top. Late Friday, however, this advance was wiped out, the side of the undertaken of light-weight stock here this week, the best sellers have lost their popularity to a degree, but rather the choice shipping weights, preferably 150 to 185 lbs. The market on hogs 250 lbs. and heavier has been in the hands of the big packers from day to day and they were inclined to be bearish. There was a rather broad demand for choice 150 pigs around 50 lbs. in weight. The week's total supply of hogs amounted to 75,800 head, about 77,500 the preceding week and $1,000 the corresponding period last year. Quality was good, but prices were 25@50c lower for the week, the spread at $11.60@11.80; good shippers 150@190 lbs., $11.50@11.75; mixed 190@250 lbs., 15@25c lower at $11@11.85 for natives and $9.50@11.75 for Southerns; roasting pigs, $11@12. Sows closed 50@75c lower, at $10.25@10.75, mostly stags, $9.50@10.50.

Sheep Ran Moderate.

Sheep receipts were of moderate proportions throughout the week, the total of 11,256 showing an increase of 1944 over a corresponding week ago a year ago, compared with a year ago. Quality was a shade better than last week, with a few more feds here than a week ago.

Packers were bearish all the week and as a result the market declined a full 75c from a week ago. Monday's market declined 25c, with a $12.75 packers' top, while bulk of the sales went at $12.25 to $12.75; butchers paid $13 for odd lots of strictly fancy grades. Tuesday the market held steady, but Wednesday it was off 25c, the latter figure top. Weakness continued from Wednesday on with a total decline of 50c from 40c and more the rest of the week. Bulk of lambs late in the week sold at $12.25 to $12.50, with a few choice though outside buyers purchased odd lots of fancy lambs at $12.50. $12.75 and up to $13. Culls, including shorn lambs and heavy grades, held firm from day to day at $8.50, mainly, odd lots showing quality above the $9 mark, with culls as low as $6.50. Bulk of good bolonna bulls sold at $5.50 to $6, with common and canner grades ranging down.

A range of $8 to $7.85 covered most transactions in the stocker and feeder steer division, with cows $4 to $5 and heifers $4.75 to $6.25. Bulls ranged $4.50 to $6. Bulk of Veal calves for the week was $13 to $13.50, with closing top and bulk at $13. First cuts brought $10 to $10.50 early in the week $11, with heavy grades ranging down to $9.50 and $8. Southern canner yearlings ranged from $4.50 to $4.75 principally, some as high as $5.

Horses and Mules.

Light receipts and a broad demand caused an active movement in practically all grades of horses and mules during the past week, prices holding firm with the previous week's basis of clearance. Sound young horses with good weight were in demand and some orders were received for wagon loads. By Wednesday 11,150 to 1300 pounds. Black hearse horses of the same type were also inquired for. Fat, good-headed mules were in especially good favor, although all grades moved readily at steady to strong prices.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—"The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review today, says:

"An incident more dramatic than any in six months was provided this week when the Steel Corporation unexpectedly ordered a 50 per cent stock dividend and by so doing induced on Friday the biggest bull session for stocks of the year to date. On several occasions the net advance for the day in the standard averages has exceeded that of yesterday, but in no rising market of the year has the volume approached 2,697,000 shares Friday's total. The record volume of 3,317,700 shares for March 19, 1926, was made, of course, in a falling market. The strong upward movement of the week differed in character somewhat from the advance of February, in that interest now converges on the stocks of real investment quality, whereas formerly activity often was centered in those highly speculative.

Essentially Professional.

"Essentially, the market still is professional in the sense that its control lies in the hands of strong leaders who want a wider participation, but at no time since the spring downturn has the public been so overwhelmed as now by alluring invitations to re-enter the market. As the demand for stocks from investors expands, orders for particular issues are immediately covered by blocks which the large holders are ready to pass out at the proper time and price. Willingness on the part of the professional traders to sell does not mean that on the inside Wall street does not have confidence in business, but it does mean that shrewd market prophets know that the time to distribute stocks is when industry is good. Only the uninitiated wait for the clouds to gather heavily before they run for shelter. Furthermore, the market has become a selective one and whereas some issues are offered as rapidly as the market will bid up for them, others are held even by the insiders in the faith that better days lie ahead. This explains the underlying strength in the railroad stocks. In this grand array of market forces, some bullish and some bearish, the variations in price continue to be much smaller than might be expected for sessions so lively as we now witness.

Bond Yields Fall.

"Steadily the yield on investment bonds has fallen to new low levels since the war. An unprecedented and apparently insatiable appetite for such descriptions has driven prices to the best level since the market for bonds became the broad institution it now is. Secretary Mellon's offer of about $200,000,000 of nine-month 3½ per cent notes was met with funds enough to cover an issue five times that size. This does not mean that money is easier than it has been at any time in recent years, but it does plainly reflect the abundance of funds available for employment. Again, the quarterly tax date has been passed without any more disturbance to the money market than a flurry in the call rate.

Index Number Lower.

"That the country's greatest period of prosperity should have been accompanied as the present one has been by falling level of commodity prices, remains the most interesting feature of the cycle to many. New computations from the Bureau of Labor statistics shows the general index having dropped 1 per cent for November. It now stands 6 per cent below its level of a year ago, or to put the matter another way, the general level of commodities now is represented by 148, whereas a year ago it was 158, taking 1913 as 100. Unfortunately, the sharpest recession has been within the group of commodities vitally important to the farmer. However, it is the receding price level that has more than anything else prevented speculation in commodities and the return of another spell of vicious inflation."

"It was not surprising to find the stock market tired today after the frenzied pace of yesterday and trading on a much smaller scale. It caused some surprise, however, that stocks did not suffer more of a recession under the inevitable profit-taking that came into the market today. Apparently the pulse of the bull market is still beating strongly.

"The pace of the market was slow at the start and it never was accelerated to any great extent. Trading in Steel common, while still large, was on a much reduced scale. The initial price of Steel, quoted about five minutes after the opening, was 159½ to 159¾, only fractionally changed from last night, but in the later trading it fell below 159.

Can Stock Rises.

Other leaders of yesterday, such as American Smelting and Allied Chemical, yielded ground, but on the other hand American Can and National Supply were prominently active and strong. Buying in American Can forced the stock up more than 3 points, and National Biscuit sold at a new high price for the year. Warner Pictures advanced more than 3 points and Pullman drove steadily forward, reaching new high ground. Reading was an outstanding feature of the rails, its advance being accompanied by rumors of higher dividends. Indeed, the advances of Pullman and American Can also were largely due to talk of distributions to stockholders. Gains were made by Sloss Sheffield Steel, Crucible Steel, Baldwin Locomotive and American Locomotive.

Exchange Market Steady.

"Foreign exchanges were steady, with francs holding around 4c and lire were higher.

Weekly Bank Statement.

"The actual condition statement of the New York Clearing House showed a deficit of $5,036,920 in reserves, compared with a surplus of $12,658,480 a week ago. Loans and investments were $13,629,000 higher and net demand deposits showed a gain of $14,774,000."

SHARES SOLD

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Total sales for the week on the New York Stock Exchange were 12,174,000 shares, compared with 8,354,500 last week, 10,357,200 same week a year ago and 10,383,600 two years ago.

ACTIVE TRADE IN BONDS, TREND OF PRICES HIGHER

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—The bond market had another week of great activity and firm prices, with the averages for many issues reaching new high records for before the war and those for foreign issues touching new tops.

Among the gains in the foreign group were the more interesting. The leaders were the French obligations, which were active in volume. Of the three issues of the French Government, one higher than ever before since it was issued and two sold at the highest for that only fractionally below the record.

Some of the Belgian issues have set new high marks this week and the buying of the German Government 7 per cent loan has gone on regardless of the fact that the current price is higher than the issuption price.

The week has witnessed a large turnover in Italian 7s, but the price improvement has been only moderate.

Strength in United States Government issues has been the feature of the domestic market. One of the Treasury issues made a new high record this week while other two sold around their previous highs. There has been heavier buying in this week than in some time in Liberty list.

Even at the close of the week interest in the bond market suffered by the diversion of activity in stocks. Probably also there has been some money going into foreign investment stocks which would otherwise have gone into bonds.

More Than $150,000,000 New Bonds Offered During Week.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Buying of railroad issues following a spurious advance in carrier stocks, held the general list of bond prices around the year's highest levels, although trading was fairly quiet and dotted with irregularities. The market's loss of animation was interesting in view of the counter attacks of an active stock market and offering of more than $150,000,000 new issues on the market this week. Foreign obligations turned reactionary after establishing some of the record gains in French and German obligations.

French Government issues sold steadily to the highest prices of the week and German 7s, back to 106, more than a point higher than high mark for the week. Considerable activity developed in Atchison bonds as a result of the spurt of the stock to a record high price. The convertible 4s advanced nearly a point while the general gains were recorded by Great Northern, Rock Island, Arkansas & Louisiana, Chicago, Milwaukee & Saint Paul, Erie & Nashville and some of the Pennsylvania issues.

Offering of a $2,200,000 30-year 6½ per cent bond issue for the Republic of Cuba will be made next week and it is noted that a $5,000,000 loan for the Argentine republic also will be placed in that week.

Foreign Exchange

Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review today, says:

The most important feature of the week was the continued buying of French francs which was interrupted for a day by profit-taking sales against speculative operations. After this reaction the Exchange showed the greatest strength of this year and on Thursday the francs sold at 4.03 a new high record.

The exchange was also steadily firm. Swiss cables moved up to 19.44, a premium of 4½ points over the parity, and sterling early in the week, during up to $4.85⅝ for cables, after that movement the tone was on the rate yielding ¾ in the last days. Business in Sterling dwindled to small volume in the last half of the week, reflecting the pre-holiday character of the London market. This dullness followed by a slackening of interest in Japan was fairly well maintained in spite of some heavy offerings on account of the illness of the Mikado, but the tone became heavy yesterday when cables were increased. Silver exchanges were heavy in the first half of the week and rallied on today's trading. South American is a mixed tone. Brazil was in demand at one time, but was under pressure at other days, ranging from 12.06 to 12.15, for Milreis cables. Exchange on Antwerp showed pronounced strength, rising to 102.75.

The Canadian exchange was influenced by the conditions interfering with the movement and declined from 99.96 to 99.87. Exchange on Argentine continues influenced by the recent financing. Rates moving up from 40.87 to 41.39, then exchange after selling at 4.61, steady for two years, had a sharp rise on Tuesday, reacting to 4.63. It was steadier later, recovering part of the

CONFERENCE ON CONTRACT TOMORROW

Owner and 1926 Manager Both Must Make Concessions to Prevent Wrecking of World Champions.

By J. Roy Stockton.

Rogers Hornsby, the man who led the Cardinals to a pennant and a world series, the first for St. Louis in 38 years, and Sam Breadon, the man whose business ability, dogged perseverance and financial resources, coupled with love for baseball and desire for a winner, built up the vehicle which enabled Hornsby to ride to fame and fortune, will hold a conference tomorrow morning which will mean much to St. Louisans interested in baseball.

If Hornsby and Breadon settle their differences and Hornsby signs a contract, St. Louis will have an excellent chance of seeing a hot race for the pennant, with the possibility of another championship series here. If they fail to reach an agreement and it becomes necessary to get another manager it will be a disastrous blow for the Cardinals, for Breadon and for Hornsby.

Two Sides to Question.

This is not a one-sided controversy. Breadon is not solely responsible for the breach. Hornsby is not solely responsible. Each party in the dispute has made mistakes, each has concessions to make. But that is neither here nor there. The one big issue is whether St. Louis, after enjoying so hilariously its sudden elevation to the position as a world series city, is to be put in danger of being thrust back into the also-ran class.

Damage already has been done to the Cardinal machine by the controversy.

If Rogers Hornsby had been signed to a Cardinal contract two weeks ago, Bill Killifer would not have considered leaving the club. Hornsby wanted Killefer and Killefer wanted to remain with Hornsby. But Killefer knew of the friction that existed on the Cardinal club and Killefer did not want to remain on a club where there was such friction. Moreover, Killefer could not afford to sit by and wait for the culmination of the controversy.

It is too late to get Killefer back. But it is not too late to prevent other damage from being done.

How About a Compromise.

Breadon has offered Hornsby a one-year contract and Hornsby has asked for a three-year contract. The amount that Breadon is willing to pay for Hornsby's services has never been disclosed and the subject of the amount of salary has not been discussed.

But surely there must be a way to an agreement. Breadon has gained the respect of all baseball men during his stay in baseball. He took the Cardinals when the club was on the rocks and he has persevered and worked until he has the team on top, financially and in the league standing.

Hornsby took the club when it was in eighth place and by his courage and leadership piloted the team through a hectic season and won the pennant and the world's championship. Hornsby played when he should have been under the care of a physician. He returned to duty in Brooklyn during the 1926 race when he had been ordered by his physician to rest for ten days more.

Who'll Be the Bigger Man?

St. Louis has in its magnate and its manager two men outstanding in the baseball world. Each has made sacrifices to attain the ultimate goal—a winning team. Which will be the biggest man in this crisis?

Baseball men are awaiting the outcome of the Hornsby-Breadon conference before commenting on the team's chances for 1927. If Hornsby and Breadon patch up

Washington U. Basket Five Wins Over Rolla, 55-23

Bear Players Show Real Scoring Ability in First Game of Season.

The Washington U. basketball team opened its season in the Bear Field House last night with a 55 to 23 victory over the Rolla Miners. Twelve players were used by Coach Don White in the inaugural tilt, regulars and reserves counting freely on long and short shots.

More than 3500 fans saw the Pikeway Conference hopes open a fast-breaking attack which the Miners were unable to hold at any point of the game.

The three Bear veterans, C. Stanford and Hutton at forwards and Eckert at guard, apparently assured themselves of regular assignments, but a variety of point-getting reserves which White sent into play points to a strong reserve for the first time in several seasons. R. Heinrichs, reserve forward, tossed in four field goals and one free throw. Pipkin, reserve center, also contributed three field goals.

Duncan, new pivot man for the Bears, displayed a passing left hand which promises to puzzle Valley opponents, while Kurz, likewise recruited from last year's yearling squad, was easily the best of all the back-guard prospects. Kurz plays an aggressive floor game.

Rippetoe, reserve guard, who replaced Eckert, tossed in three field goals also after a show of floor-work which may earn him chances in conference contests. J. Stanford, brother of Carl Stanford, captain; McCarroll, Seiber, and C. Heinrichs, were also used by White.

The Rolla men were able to break through the Washington five-man defense for only eight scattered baskets. Ray and Neidermeyer led the Miner attack, with Orchard showing well from running guard.

The lineup:

| Washington. | Position. | Rolla. |
|---|---|---|
| Hutton | L. F. | Thomas |
| C. Stanford | R. F. | Ray |
| Duncan | C. | Neidermeyer |
| Eckert | L. G. | Tamm |
| Kurz | R. G. | Orchard |

Summary: Field goals—Washington: Hutton 4, C. Standford 4, R. Heinrichs 4, Duncan 2, Pipkin 3, Eckert 4, Rippetoe 3. Rolla: Ray 2, Orchard 2, Rollo, Tucker, Neidermeyer, Tamm. ## Otto Stein Rolls 1789 in Eight Games in Classic

Leads by 122 Pins in Event at Schaefer Alleys — Rudi Meyer Second.

Sensational bowling by Otto Stein Jr. marked the rolling in the classic at the Schaefer Delmar alleys last night. Knocking down a total of 1789 pins in eight games, Stein took a 122-point lead among the bowlers in the first two squads.

Stein's average was 223⅝ and his best game was 277, while his lowest score was made, in his eighth game, in which he had two misses.

Next to Stein was Rudi Myers, with 1667.

William White had a 266 count in his seventh game, but he made a poor start and his total was 1524.

Two more squads will roll tonight.

FRANKFORD JACKETS TIE AND TAKE TITLE

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 18. — The Frankford Yellow Jackets of this city today won the National League professional football championship by holding the Pottsville (Pa.) team to a tie, neither team scoring. The game was played in extremely cold weather but 7000 persons were out to see the contest.

The weather was too cold for good football and both teams resorted to much punting. Had Frankford lost today the Chicago Bears would have had a chance to capture the title by winning their game tomorrow with the Green Bay Packers.

CHAMINADE CONQUERS ST. CHARLES HIGH, 15-12

St. Charles High School was defeated by Chaminade, 15 to 12, last night. The score was tied, 12-12, until the last few minutes of play. Coleman starred for Chaminade, while Boeckemeier and Martin did the most effective work for St. Charles. The lineup:

| ST. CHARLES. | | CHAMINADE. |

| Boeckmeier | R. F. | Wendler |
| Martin | L. F. | Kantwell |

Joe Algermissen, with a total of 645, took the lead in the handicap bowling tournament on the Washington alleys last night. A. Hughes was second with 642, followed by G. Krupa, 636; R. Strickler, 632, and J. Greene, 628. Several more squads are scheduled to bowl tonight.

THE Post-Dispatch presents herewith the All-America football team for 1926, selected jointly by Coaches Glenn Warner of Stanford, Knute Rockne of Notre Dame and Tad Jones of Yale, representing the top rank of football leaders on the Pacific Coast, in the Middle West and East. Before selecting the team, the three coaches traveled altogether more than 25,000 miles—observing football material—Jones going from New Haven to Los Angeles, Warner from California to Chicago via Birmingham, where he saw the Alabama-Georgia game, and Rockne playing his own team in seven states. Their selection is the most authoritative made, replacing the time-honored nominations of the late Walter Camp. The accompanying story about the team was written by the three coaches in collaboration.

BEFORE approaching the task of selecting the best mythical line-up of 1926, this board of coaches fortified itself with first hand information derived from inter-sectional travel, surpassing the mileage ever attained by any sponsor of an All-America football team.

Having exceeded 25,000 miles, having seen more than 1000 players in action representing 28 colleges located in 19 states, we offer our selections and reasons with a feeling that, based on direct observation, no all-star team has ever been selected with more diligence and exertion and consequently none with quite so much jurisdiction.

We set up no claim of infallibility and expect to find our selections criticized as much as are teams named by writers with less opportunity to observe the national field. The selections of the more prominent writers have been called to our attention and while not wholly in accord with any one we appreciate the handicaps for one man in covering such an assignment and heartily respect his conclusions.

At times, the viewpoint of the trained writer may be better balanced than the viewpoint of the football coach. For this reason we look upon the deluge of All Amer-

BULLETIN, THE FAVORITE, BEATEN BY BAD START; SILVER SONG IS SECOND

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 18.—Racing in finest form Sir Peter, from the stable of Mose Goldblatt, triumphed over Mrs. C. Garrigan's Silver Song, Greentree Stable's Navigator and five other good sprinters in the Monte Leone Hotel Handicap at Jefferson Park here this afternoon.

The race was marred by a poor start in which H. G. Bedwell's Bulletin, the betting choice, was the chief sufferer and he ran a remarkable race to be fourth at the finish of the five and one-half furlongs.

Sir Peter seemed much at home in the dull going and, breaking fast, raced restrained until in the concluding quarter where W. Garner rode him in masterly fashion to place him in front by a length at the finish. He found Silver Song and Navigator stubborn rivals and not until the trio had figured in a spectacular stretch duel did they settle into the positions won.

Silver Song retained second by a mere neck with Navigator gaining slowly at the finish after having appeared soundly beaten a furlong out. Three lengths further back Bulletin raced into fourth position, Jockey D. Dubois finding it necessary to race him extremely wide the entire race to salvage something from the scant chance he had out of the start.

Sir Peter negotiated the distance in 1:08 2-5, a fine performance over the prevailing good footing.

There was another fine attendance to witness the racing which aside from the feature offered nothing of quality but the more ordinary ones provided a goodly number of thrills. Cloudy skies and a heavy haze prevailed during most of the afternoon.

Initial successes were numerous during the afternoon which opened with the first victory of the meeting for the Audley Farm Stable and Jockey W. Crump. The two-year-old Marlboro was the medium by which this famous establishment and Crump entered the ranks of winners, the son of Sir Barton defeating eleven other two-year-olds over a distance of six furlongs. He won out in a rather close finish with Fourteen Sixty and Pop Bell after the latter two had led him for the first five furlongs.

Orestes a Game Horse.

Miss M. Kelly registered her first success when Orestes II barely outstayed Everglade to triumph in the second event. Seven answered the call here and the winner was the leader throughout. He raced with unusual gameness after Everglade engaged him in the late stages of the stretch. Lord Martin accounted for third with the poorly ridden Geo. Groom, on which D. Smith had the mount, finishing fourth.

After Bosh had led nine other platers the full distance of one mile and a furlong in the third race, Catesby came out and duplicated the former's performance to account for top honors in the fourth race. His win brought the first victory of the meeting for the recently arrived M. Hurn, who gave the victor a steady, well-judged ride. This contest was also over the testing route of nine furlongs.

Running Fox and Hawk Eye were second and third as named behind Catesby and Ravelion and Zeus the Second took the same places behind Bosh.

"Channel Swim" of 21 Miles in Pool in 11 Hours, 47 Min.

By the Associated Press.

BROOKLYN, Dec. 18.—A novice at marathon swimming, Winston Waddell, Brooklyn plumber, was the first to finish the "cross-channel" swim conducted in the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. pool. He completed the distance of 21 miles, the approximate length of the English channel, in 11 hours, 47 minutes of actual swimming time. This was divided into eight swimming periods averaging two and five-eighths miles each.

Waddell lost nine pounds during the test.

The pool is 75 feet long and those who completed the channel distance had to swim the length of it 1478 2-5 times.

UTAH GRID TEAM WINS IN HONOLULU

By the Associated Press.

HONOLULU, Dec. 18.—Utah University outclassed a lighter University of Hawaii eleven here today winning, 17 to 7. The Rocky Mountain gridders were superior to all styles of play, and although the field was wet their machine worked smoothly throughout, hitting rough going only in the last minute of the fourth period, when a pair of forward passes enabled Hawaii to score a touchdown.

Utah crossed Hawaii's line and kicked goal in the first and second periods and scored a field goal in the fourth.

Hillyards Beat Texas U.

By the Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Dec. 18.—The Texas University basketball team was defeated here tonight by the Hillyard quintet from St. Joseph, Mo. The score was 15 to 14. A field goal from midfield in the last half minute of play by Forest Debernardi won the game.

Joe Turnesa and Loos Are Tied in Del Paso Event

Have Totals of 143 for 36 Holes in $2500 Golf Tourney—Mehlhorn Next.

By the Associated Press.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Dec. 18.—Joe Turnesa, New York, and Eddie Loos, Chicago, remained tied for the lead in the $2500 Del Paso Club open golf tournament at the close of the second 18 holes of play today. Both turned in a 71 today and are leading the field with 143.

Bill Mehlhorn, Chicago, and Tommy Armour, New York, former open national champion, were close behind the leaders with 145 and 148 respectively.

Arthur De Mane, Long Island pro, came home with a smashing 68 today to shatter the course record of 72.

NORMANDY BOYS AND RITENOUR GIRLS WIN AT BASKETBALL.

The Normandy High School basketball team romped over the Ritenour team in their game at Normandy last night, 33 to 7. Normandy had 21 points before Ritenour scored, and the count at the end of the first half was 26-1. Burton starred for Normandy, making four field goals and three free throws for a total of 11 points.

Good shooting marked the game between the girls' teams, which was won by Ritenour, 47-15.

BOSTON HOCKEY TEAM WINS AGAIN

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Dec. 18.—The Boston Bruins improved their position in the National Hockey League standing by defeating the Pittsburg Yellowjackets, 3 to 0, here tonight. Boston got the jump in the first two minutes of play when Cooper beat the Pittsburg goalie.

All-Season Records Rather Than Past Performances and "Good Days" Considered by Coaches.

ica selections with interest and consideration—even though some writers have named men for national honors whose own coaches, members of this board, do not believe deserve such rating.

All-Season Play Counts.

THE findings of this intersectional board are based on the performance of the individual player—throughout the entire season. Past performance, that is previous to 1926, has received no consideration. And players having "big days" have been rated not on single performances but after scrutinizing the consistency of their play and striking a balance for the entire season. The praise that follows in the wake of "big days" where players reach unprecedented heights frequently through the indispensable co-operation of unsung teammates—always prevents true valuation of such a player's season rating in the minds of his supporters. These two elements—past performance and "big days"—combine to make the task of picking an All-America team hopeless so far as satisfying everybody is concerned.

We encounter one of these obstacles at the outset. In naming a center the issue is clear cut between Boeringer of Notre Dame and Cravath of Southern California. In Eastern states Boeringer will be accepted with little criticism. Cravath has not been seen in the East and consequently his work is not duly appreciated. When Coach Hunk Anderson of Notre Dame says Boeringer he had a "big day" in the broadest sense of the word. In gruelling games his work, while meritorious, never reached the level of his play against Notre Dame.

Mathematically on his "big day" Cravath outshone Boeringer, but scores of omissions charged against Cravath went unnoticed in the average spectator although figuring in the final outcome of the contest.

Boeringer at Center.

BOERINGER is picked for the most position because of his consistent and dependable performance in every game of a hard 10-game schedule. He weighs 184 pounds and falls one inch short of being six feet tall. On a complex passing system he went through the entire season without a faulty pass. He is smart and gritty. The Notre Dame line halted three great plunging backs—Joesting of Minnesota, Wilson of Army and Lewis of Northwestern and the stiffening in the line was furnished by Boeringer. In each of these tough games he worked the full 60 minutes. He plays a roving center second to none. He intercepts passes, tackles on the flanks and is a tartar for all teams using the out back. Boeringer has no superior at diagnosing opponents' plays and is always in the line or out of the line at the critical moment.

Cravath belongs within an eyelash of Boeringer. It is difficult to illustrate their difference. He is a great inspirational leader, a steady defensive player and one of the three best pivots ever produced in the West.

Guards: Shiveley and Sturhahn.

SHIVELEY of Illinois weighs 215 pounds. Sturhahn of Yale weighs the same. Both are selected for the guard positions. In 1925 Sturhahn was picked by most all critics and is much improved this year. If he has a weakness it is his anxiety to do too much. A strong back against every form of attack, inside or out and against the pass, Sturhahn is invaluable out of the line and a good man at interference. Always on his toes, he blocked one kick against Princeton and recovered a fumble in the Harvard game. Shiveley is a weight thrower and allround athlete. Standing over six feet tall, his broad shoulders and giant frame have been a bulwark in the Illinois line whose defensive play was one of the features of Middle Western football. He stopped everything at his own post and made his presence felt over the entire field. Zuppke used Shiveley in flank interference and at protecting passes his work was faultless.

Hess of Ohio State is still one of the game's best guards, but not quote up to his form of 1925; therefore a shade behind Shiveley, his foremost rival. It takes a lot of courage to pass up Connaughton of Georgetown, the largest man in football. Weighing 280 pounds he is undoubtedly the most powerful lineman in the game today and although comparatively agile, he lacks the mobility of Sturhahn and Shiveley, so essential in the modern attack. Bunn of Stanford is probably the best guard of his weight in the game today. He answers every requirement but lacks the weight of the two named over him. Hanson of Syracuse, a powerful player for Carnegie, is just back from injuries and is not in shape. And almost any other year Brown, Bachus of Missouri and Walker of Stanford would be with the upper eleven.

Quarter Randall of Brown.

RANDALL, a converted fullback, weighing 190 pounds and playing his first year at quarterback, explains to a large extent Brown's big year. His strategy in every game has been above criticism. There is not an instance where Randall failed to make the most of tactical opportunity. Randall has few equals in passing a football and he can punt with the best kickers in the game today. His defensive work against the forward pass would discourage any rival team and his ability to tackle and interfere is superb. When Randall catches a punt it stays caught and his weight, power and ability generally returns it many yards before he comes to a halt.

Friedman of Michigan has had greater publicity than Randall but his principal usefulness—the pass—has been checked by rival teams and the erstwhile Friedman threat has suffered in proportion. Defensive teams rushed him with such effectiveness this year that Friedman failed to master the air as heretofore. Minnesota and the Navy both checked the Friedman pass and thus reduced his principal effectiveness. But he is a field general of rare ability and his spirit and leadership was a great factor in maintaining Michigan morale when being hopelessly outrushed at Minnesota. Friedman kept Michigan from cracking in that game but against the Navy he was a distinct disappointment.

Backs: Wilson and Kaer.

KAER, a track star at Southern California, is a newcomer in the firmament of football stars. On the other hand, Wilson of the Army has won many spurs on the gridiron and deserves them all. Wilson was on Walter Camp's first string when a student at Penn State. Wilson and Kaer are the greatest pair of backs of 1926. It is the unanimous opinion of this board that Wilson is the best all around player in football today. If "big days" were admitted in evidence, Wilson at Chicago would need no further claim to all-American fame. He is one of the deadliest open field backfiers we have ever seen and one of the few backs in the country who can take an end out alone. Wilson is an oddity among football stars in that he runs better to the left than to the right. The general tendency is the other way. Wilson excels on wide end runs as well as at the cross buck and cut buck. He is full of speed and power and can pivot, straight arm, twist and sidestep with bewildering effect.

Kaer of Southern California is the super star of the Western Coast. His team is one of the best in the country and Kaer carried the ball 70 per cent of the time. He is a good punter and unusually good at passing. He brings his cinder track speed to the football field and adds an unusual knack for picking holes. It is seldom that such a speedy back combines the ability to run the ends and buck the line. Kaer's change of pace and kick-off are features. Kaer will be a star for two more years.

Ends: Shipkey and Oosterbaan.

SHIPKEY, weighing 178 pounds, is very fast and has been an outstanding end on the coast for three seasons. Oosterbaan of Michigan, standing 6 feet, weighing 195 pounds and a star of the basketball court, has few equals in the wing position. These two men receive first honors. The Stanford star has shown consistent improvement every year and is a wonder on defense. He is an outstanding receiver of the pass, with an uncanny knack for eluding the secondary defense and getting to an uncovered spot. A javelin thrower and basketball player, Shipkey is shifty and built for rough work. When trapped by the defense he invariably wiggles away and his part in the end-around play has been invaluable to Stanford.

Oosterbaan on the opposite wing differs from Shipkey in type and style. Against Navy, Oosterban was Michigan's star performer. Against Minnesota he stopped nearly every play around his end while the opposition was running roughshod over Flora, his teammate on the other wing. And when Minnesota fumbled, Oosterbaan was on the job to turn apparent defeat into unexpected victory. In every Michigan game the opposition was "two-timing" Oosterbaan. He was the most "shadowed" man of the year. In spite of this he nailed his passes with few misses and at the same time uncovered other Michigan men for important duty.

There were many fine ends this year. Hanson of Syracuse and Winslett of Alabama would have taken the honors but for such opposition as Shipkey and Oosterbaan. And almost any other year Brown, Bachus of Missouri and Walker of Stanford would be with the upper eleven.

Ten Great Plays of the 1926 World Series: By John McGraw

One Pitch, With Lazzeri Standing Taut and Anxious, Resulted in Strikeout That Brought Pitcher Fame.

By John J. McGraw,
Manager, New York Giants.

THE modern school of ballplayers, after watching Alexander win the last game of the world's series in the seventh inning by striking out Tony Lazzeri, should have one lesson driven home by now.

The difference of one inch in the control of a curve ball often marks the difference between a great artist and just an ordinary pitcher.

It was control that Rogers Hornsby needed when he called Old Alex from the bull pen that day and he wisely called the one man that he knew possessed it. After Alexander had pitched three balls on that spectacular appearance in a pinch, I felt absolutely certain that St. Louis had the game won.

Early in the series Alexander had appraised the opposing batters. From their manner of standing at the plate—the position of their feet—he knew in a day the prospective curve ball victims. One of these was Lazzeri. When Tony became eager he had a way of crouching in one corner of the box, his muscles all taut, feet wide apart. Old Alex had noted this. Therefore when Lazzeri alone stood between the Cardinals and the big prize, Alex felt easy. In that case the batter was worried—not the pitcher. I could see that Alexander had no intention of giving Lazzeri a good ball to smash, especially when he was expecting it. What is more he had the control to back up his intentions.

When two strikes had been called on Lazzeri he stood in a far corner of the batter's box, as taut as a drum in his eagerness to have a good swing.

As if reading the younger batter's mind, Old Alex pitched a curve ball, not more than one inch out of reach. If he had put it further out Lazzeri might not have swung. If he had placed it closer Tony might have hit it. Old Alex timed and placed that one with the precision of a seamstress threading a needle. Perfect control put the ball in the exact spot. Lazzeri swung wildly. The danger was over and after two more innings, so was the world's series.

This was surely one of the big plays of the last world's series and the resulting fame was Alex's reward for 15 years of hard work and application.

(The next article in McGraw's series, "The Ten Great Plays of the World Series," will appear in next Sunday's Post-Dispatch.)

Fullback: Joesting.

ANYONE who appreciates, even remotely, the savageness of Joesting's plunging needs no further persuasion to accept him as the ace of full backs. He is the outstanding line crasher of 1926. As a defensive fullback he terrifies the opposition and generally takes the starch out of rival plungers coming through the line. A year ago he had but a single weakness—defense against the pass. That has now gone by the boards and Joesting stands in a class by himself. He weighs 190 pounds and does a hundred yards in 11 seconds flat. Joesting is the hardest tackler in football today.

Backs: Wilson and Kaer.

KAER, a track star at Southern California, is a newcomer in the firmament of football stars. On the other hand, Wilson of the Army has won many spurs on the gridiron and deserves them all. Wilson was on Walter Camp's first string when a student at Penn State. Wilson and Kaer are the greatest pair of backs of 1926. It is the unanimous opinion of this board that Wilson is the best all around player in football today. If "big days" were admitted in evidence, Wilson at Chicago would need no further claim to all-American fame. He is one of the deadliest open field backfiers we have ever seen and one of the few backs in the country who can take an end out alone. Wilson is an oddity among football stars in that he runs better to the left than to the right. The general tendency is the other way. Wilson excels on wide end runs as well as at the cross buck and cut buck. He is full of speed and power and can pivot, straight arm, twist and sidestep with bewildering effect.

Kaer of Southern California is the super star of the Western Coast. His team is one of the best in the country and Kaer carried the ball 70 per cent of the time. He is a good punter and unusually good at passing. He brings his cinder track speed to the football field and adds an unusual knack for picking holes. It is seldom that such a speedy back combines the ability to run the ends and buck the line. Kaer's change of pace and kick-off are features. Kaer will be a star for two more years.

SHIPKEY, weighing 178 pounds, is very fast and has been an outstanding end on the coast for three seasons. Oosterbaan of Michigan, standing 6 feet, weighing 195 pounds and a star of the basketball court, has few equals in the wing position. These two men receive first honors. The Stanford star has shown consistent improvement every year and is a wonder on defense. He is an outstanding receiver of the pass, with an uncanny knack for eluding the secondary defense and getting to an uncovered spot. A javelin thrower and basketball player, Shipkey is shifty and built for rough work. When trapped by the defense he invariably wiggles away and his part in the end-around play has been invaluable to Stanford.

Oosterbaan on the opposite wing differs from Shipkey in type and style. Against Navy, Oosterban was Michigan's star performer. Against Minnesota he stopped nearly every play around his end while the opposition was running roughshod over Flora, his teammate on the other wing. And when Minnesota fumbled, Oosterbaan was on the job to turn apparent defeat into unexpected victory. In every Michigan game the opposition was "two-timing" Oosterbaan. He was the most "shadowed" man of the year. In spite of this he nailed his passes with few misses and at the same time uncovered other Michigan men for important duty.

There were many fine ends this year. Hanson of Syracuse and Winslett of Alabama would have taken the honors but for such opposition as Shipkey and Oosterbaan. And almost any other year Brown, Bachus of Missouri and Walker of Stanford would be with the upper eleven.

Quarter Randall of Brown.

RANDALL, a converted fullback, weighing 190 pounds and playing his first year at quarterback, explains to a large extent Brown's big year. His strategy in every game has been above criticism. There is not an instance where Randall failed to make the most of tactical opportunity. Randall has few equals in passing a football and he can punt with the best kickers in the game today. His defensive work against the forward pass would discourage any rival team and his ability to tackle and interfere is superb. When Randall catches a punt it stays caught and his weight, power and ability generally returns it many yards before he comes to a halt.

Friedman of Michigan has had greater publicity than Randall but his principal usefulness—the pass—has been checked by rival teams and the erstwhile Friedman threat has suffered in proportion. Defensive teams rushed him with such effectiveness this year that Friedman failed to master the air as heretofore. Minnesota and the Navy both checked the Friedman pass and thus reduced his principal effectiveness. But he is a field general of rare ability and his spirit and leadership was a great factor in maintaining Michigan morale when being hopelessly outrushed at Minnesota. Friedman kept Michigan from cracking in that game but against the Navy he was a distinct disappointment

India Will Bring Formidable Polo Team to America

Three Players Rated at Eight Handicap — Seek to Recover Cup.

(Copyright, 1926.)

LONDON, Dec. 18.—Latest news of the Indian army polo team which is to "invade" America next fall in an attempt to recover the Westchester Cup for Great Britain, is that preparations are well under way and that it will be an exceedingly strong combination. The polo season in India is in full swing and although the team has been practically selected there is keen competition for the position of reserves, of which two at least will have to be taken.

The actual team is forecast: Maj. A. H. Williams, Capt. R. George, Maj. E. G. Atkinson and Capt. J. P. Dening. George plays No. 1, Williams No. 2 and Atkinson and Dening No. 3 and back, respectively. Atkinson will be remembered as a member of the last invading Hurlingham team which went down before Devereux Milburn's men, and Dening played against the United States army in England a couple of years ago. Maj. Williams is one of Britain's greatest players, but his military duties keep him mostly in India, so he is not so well known to American players. He was in England last year with the Maharajah of Jodhpur's famous team—he is official adviser and polo manager for the Maharajah.

Rated at Eight Handicap.

Williams, Atkinson and Dening are rated at 8 handicap apiece, which is very high, seeing that there are only two 10s and seven 9s in the polo world. George is on the 6 mark, but his chief value is his combination with Williams—the two are in the regiment, the Central India Horse, which turns out one of the strongest polo teams in India. Another Central India Horse officer, Lieut. A. Alexander, is well in the running for one of the reserve places, the other favorite being Capt. C. E. Pert of the Fifteenth Bengal Lancers. Reserves will be finally selected about the end of December, when the leading tournament games have been played.

America will be robbed of the pleasure of seeing Capt. A. L. B. Anderson (another 8 handicap man), one of the greatest players in the Anglo-Indian army, for that warrior injured his shoulder in a practice game recently and is not expected to be fit to accompany the team (of which otherwise he was assured of membership) on such a strenuous campaign as the coming visit is certain to provide.

fox all gun makers have adopted practically the same system of boring, so it is just as easy to bore a gun to make a good pattern as it is a poor one.

Evolution of Shot Gun.

For a good many years after the introduction of breech-loading guns the old timers continued to use the old muzzle loaders, contending that the old style shot much harder than the new.

Another argument was that the ease of reloading and firing rapidly the new style gun would so rattle the bird dogs that they would soon be ruined.

Fifty years ago there were more muzzle loading guns used in the United States than breech loaders, but from then on the shooting public began to drop the old and take up the new, so, that today, I doubt if there is any one in the United States using a muzzle-loader.

Some countries have not progressed so rapidly, for there are tribes in Africa that are still using the antiquated flint lock.

The shotgun industry did not develop very rapidly in America and for some years most of our guns were imported, the cheap ones from Belgium and those of better grade from England.

After Lefaucheux brought out the pin fire gun the different makers began to wake up and rapid strides were made.

Changes in Models.

The hinge or tip up models showed certain weaknesses so one maker brought out a model, in which the barrels were pushed forward from the breach, but this style was very awkward to manipulate and was soon discarded, another maker used the turnover system allowing the barrels to be given a quarter turn, but this system proved as faulty as the other.

A man by the name of Jefferies in 1862 brought out a gun with a slide motion. The barrels were turned on a vertical pivot. This style was superior to the other two, but did not meet with much success and was thrown in the scrap heap giving way to the original tip up style.

The center fire cartridges soon superseded the pin fire, and with the exception of a few minor changes is, today, very much like the original.

As I stated before, improvements came rapidly, the rebounding locks, so constructed that after firing the hammer sprung back to half cock, next came the semi-hammerless type, which did not meet with much favor. It was along about 1876 that the true hammerless gun became popular, but as compared to the gun of today the mechanism was complicated and crude.

When Princeton Hired Bill Roper

Amazed at Offer But Accepted at Once

Meets Yost in Chicago Giving Demonstrations of Football Plays in Hotel Lobby Before Game.

FIELDING H. YOST.

CHAPTER XXII.

"MY 25 YEARS ON THE GRIDIRON."

By W. W. "Bill" Roper.

THE fall of 1905 was very disastrous at Princeton. We lost to both Yale and Dartmouth After the Yale game Hildebrand announced he would be unable to come East another fall. He had a large ranch in the West which he said needed his attention.

I had hardly gotten settled in my study of law at the University of Virginia when I received a wire from J. B. Fine, director of Princeton athletics, asking me to meet him in Princeton that Sunday. Much was my astonishment when I reached his house, to have him tell me that he and the captain-elect of the team wanted me to be head coach for the following season.

I accepted on the spot and we sat up most of the night talking over our plans. Mr. Fine said he was afraid we were a bit too conservative in our football in the East and suggested I go out West Thanksgiving day and see two of the leading teams of that section play their final game. I agreed with him that this was a good thing to do and said I would look up the records of the Middle Western teams.

Goes to Chicago.

I DID not take me long to decide to go to Chicago for the Michigan-Chicago game. I had always had a real admiration for Yost and Stagg, the coaches of the two elevens, while the wonderful record of the Michigan team for the past five years had been the talk of the football world. Statistics are a bit drab but I cannot help repeating them here.

Michigan had been undefeated in 1901, 1902, 1903 and 1904. During this period they had won 43 games and scored a total of 2326 points against a mere 40 points by opponents. The record of the 1905 team was more brilliant than the others if possible. In a series of 12 games to date this remarkable eleven had run up a total of 495 points against nothing for opponents. This team was called the point-a-minute team because of the rapidity with which it had scored against all-comers.

Chicago had a great team, too, one of the best Stagg ever coached. They had played 10 games and won them all. Indiana was the only team to make a score against them. Walter Eckersall, the incomparable quarterback, and Hugo Bezdek, now coach at Penn State College, were both in the Chicago backfield.

Yost Easy to Like.

I GOT a letter of introduction to Yost and looked him up at his hotel the night before the game. When I found him he was surrounded by a crowd of admirers to whom he was demonstrating football plays right out in the lobby of the hotel. He was a genial fellow whom one could not help liking, with a smile on his face and a Pittsburg stogy in his mouth

On that visit I also met, for the first time the man with whom I have been associated more closely than any other in my coaching at Princeton and who has been my greatest help and support—Keene Fitzpatrick. He was then training the Michigan team. He instantly made a big impression on me and I could tell in a moment he knew his business from top to bottom.

Unfortunately a cold rain fell all the morning of the game. I got to my seat early. Yost offered me a side line badge but I refused it. There is only one place to really see a football game and that is in the top of the stands. Fortunately I had a seat in the press box. Just before the game started a man with a megaphone came out on the field and shouted my name saying I was wanted on the field. I rushed down fearing I was to receive some bad news from home. When I got there the Chicago manager came up and asked if I would have any objection to acting as headlinesman. He stated that the man selected had wired at the last minute he would be unable to officiate. So Yost and Stagg agreed upon me

Lucky Break Needed.

I WAS not very anxious to act. I wanted to watch the game. This is hard for an official to do. But as there seemed to be no one else available I consented. The game was a terrific struggle. Neither team could gain on the other. It was apparent from the very start that a lucky break would be the only thing to prevent a tie score.

Towards the end of the game Eckersall made a long punt over Michigan's goal line. One of the Michigan backs tried to run the ball out and was thrown for a safety. I have always felt this back was a bit hazy on the rules or he would have touched it down for a touchback. He just managed to get across the line when one of the husky Chicago linesmen threw him back again and about six Chicago players piled on top of the two. This misplay lost Michigan the championship.

I came east with a wholesome respect for Western football. My trip convinced me of the importance of seeing other teams play, and I have made a practice of doing this every year. Last year we had the pleasure of entertaining Yost himself at Princeton for a few days and learned a lot from his visit. I will speak of this more at length in another chapter.

A year or so later I mentioned my visit to Chicago for this game to Dr. J. William White, the noted Pennsylvania surgeon who, for years, has been a great football enthusiast. Dr. White told me of a visit he paid Rochester, Minn., to undergo an operation at the hands of the famous Mayo surgeons. He stated that he had never met the Mayo brothers bgefore his trip to Rochester and was surprised when he reached their office to have Dr. Mayo say: "I have had the pleasure of hearing you lecture in Philadelphia, Dr. White."

Dr. Mayo explained this by telling that he and his brother frequently made visits to hospitals and attended lectures and clinics without revealing their identity. Dr. White stated one or the other of the brothers was constantly visiting other places and keeping abreast of the latest advances in surgery.

This story shows the importance of seeing how others do it. No one has a monopoly of all there is to know on any subject. In football, as well as in surgery, we may learn from others.

Blades Improving But Will Be in Hospital 30 Days

Friends, After Visiting Cardinal Outfielder, Predict He Will Play Regularly Again.

Ray Blades, Cardinal left-fielder, who was operated on at St. John's Hospital early in the week, is improving, but it will be at least 30 days before he will be able to leave the hospital, it was learned yesterday.

Blades underwent the knife in an effort to strengthen a weak knee, injured in a collision with the left-field concrete wall in a game at Sportsman's Park last August.

The injured player was able to see visitors for the first time yesterday. To help him forget his troubles, a radio has been installed in his room.

Friends who visited the athlete departed confident that his knee would be as strong as ever and that he would be able to take his regular position in the outfield when the Cardinals open the 1927 National League campaign.

Natalie to Play "Mystery" Man

Pocket Billiard Series at Arata's Opens Tomorrow, Runs 600 Points.

Pasquale Natalie, one of the country's leading pocket billiard players, will appear in a series of matches at Frank Arata's parlors, at Grand and Olive, this week.

Natalie's opponent in a 600-point match will be the "Masked Mystery." This mystery man, who will wear a black mask, is said to have beaten such stars as Ralph Greenleaf and Frank Taberski. He has runs of 164 in an exhibition and 121 in competition.

Natalie and the "Mystery" will play afternoon and evening for three days, starting tomorrow.

Natalie formerly represented Frank Arata's room in the National Pocket Billiard League. He finished in a tie for sixth place in the International Championship tournament at Philadelphia recently. A severe attack of neuritis destroyed the effectiveness of his stroke but he refused to cancel his tournament matches. Among others he beat Taberski, the former champion, by an overwhelming score.

Natalie last night defeated Max Schaffer in the final block of a 400-point match at Gene Krembs parlors, 5865 Delmar boulevard. The score last night was 100 to 34, giving Natalie victory for the match by a score of 400 to 319. Natalie had a high run of 63 last night.

King Bees Total 2889 to Land $130—2 Doubles Teams Finish in the Prize Money.

Only one St. Louis quintet went to the recent Middle West bowling tournament at Sioux City, but that aggregation, the King Bees, fared better than many of the fives which in the past have visited various tournaments. The King Bees, with 2889, finished seventh in the five-man event and placed two pairs in the doubles prize money.

For landing seventh, the team took down $130 in prize money. In the doubles Meinhart and Hippe took down $30 and Pitts and Schmitt the same amount.

Five Men—Jordans, St. Paul, 3087.

Two-Man—Thoma and Kartheiser, Chicago, 1281.

All-Events — Devito, Chicago, 1917.

Becker Gets 703 Total.

Totals of 700 are becoming common in St. Louis. Another count of that figure was turned in the past week, when J. Becker of the Tom Sawyers of the Carondelet League, totaled 703, with games of 212, 244 and 247. Asked concerning all the big counts these days, a prominent bowler said:

"Conditions now are better than they were years ago. Then there are more bowlers. Alleys are more uniform and that all tends to help the game."

Greenfields Take Lead.

The Greenfields turned in the surprise performance in the Major City League by defeating the Witters in three straight, thereby moving into first place in the league standings. The Greenfields totaled 2933. The big count of the week was put over by the Cabannes with 3028, which included a 1090 game. This count enabled the five to take the odd from the Wooster Lamberts. The Colbions grabbed two of three from the King Bees and Rogers Recreation copped the odd from the Morgans.

There was no scarcity of big individual totals, as witness: Meyer 612, Whitehead 643 with a 256, Kirk 676 with counts of 256, 226 and 194, Wilder 639, Nelson 627, Hertzog 655 with a 256 for high single, Meinhart 628, Schuttenberg 619, Utley 618, Roth 616, Mulconney 658 with 223, 215 and 220, Bruce 617 and Ameling 614.

The standings:

| Team. | W. | L. |
|---|---|---|
| Greenfields | 27 | 12 |
| Witter Razz | 24 | 15 |
| Wooster Lamberts | 24 | 15 |
| King Bees | 21 | 18 |
| Rogers Recreation | 20 | 19 |
| Morgans | 12 | 27 |
| Colbion Recreation | 11 | 28 |

Airola and Ducoffre Win.

J. Airola and R. Ducoffre with a total of 1175 won the two-man tournament on the Rogers alleys for bowlers with averages of 180 and under. P. Broglin and J. Winings, 1162, were second. Other winners were: P. Peotz and G. Rolfes 1152, J. Krausert and J. Graff 1144, J. Wilhelm and M. Stopper 1127. E. Hanke and W. Smith had high double, while A. Meyer rolled the high single.

Marathon Special Match.

Otto Detweiler and Johnny Steppacher are scheduled to roll in a special match of 25 games, total pins to count on the Washington alleys, this week. It is the first long distance affair of the season. Chris Sottrell is likely to challenge the winner for a 50-game contest.

Give the Pins a Chance.

Roy Nelson refuses to give the pins a chance these days. He's bowling as good, if not a bit better, than any man in the city. For instance in the Greater St. Louis individual, he had totals of 691 and 618. That's 1309 for six games. But he was not satisfied. He came back the same night with a 683 in league games. That's a total of 1992 or an average of 221 1-3 for nine games. That certainly is picking on the poor maples.

Deen Has High Average.

Harry Deen has the high average of 202 in the Greater St. Louis Doubles League, to lowed by Karls with 199, Otto Stein 198, Whitehead 195, Mel Stein 193, Heibert 193, Nelson 193, Roth 191, McElheny 191 and Kuhnert 191. Otto Stein has a high three of 757 and a single of 298.

Matches in the league's play on the Washington tonight bring together Bolin and Kuhnert the leaders, against Hager and Kuhl; Karls and Whitehead vs. Nelson and Deen; Roth and M. Stein vs. Skinner and McElheney; Wilson and Otto Stein vs. Baker and Heibert.

The standings:

| | W. | L. | Ave. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Bolin-Kuhnert | 20 | 13 | 397 |
| Roth-M. Stein | 19 | 14 | 387 |
| Karls-Whitehead | 19 | 14 | 378 |
| McElheny-Skinner | 17 | 16 | 379 |
| Hager-Kuhl | 16 | 17 | 383 |
| Baker-Heibert | 16 | 17 | 384 |
| Nelson-Deen | 14 | 19 | 380 |
| Wilson-O. Stein | 11 | 22 | 357 |

This Really Happened.

Can you imagine Otto Stein Jr., rolling a ball in the gutter? But that actually happened on Schaefer's alleys the past week. What's more Stein had a "turkey" up at the time. And for the first four frames his total was 76. It's the first time anything like it has happened since Stein started on his way to fame. No one remembers the exact date of a previous happening of the kind.

Nelson Has 211 Average.

Roy Nelson has an average of 211 for 48 games in the Greater St. Louis League and is showing the way with 36 victories against but 12 defeats. Hap Vierheller, who is third, has an even 200 average.

The standings:

| | W. | L. | Ave. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Nelson | 36 | 12 | 211 |
| Spencer | 29 | 19 | 194 |
| Vierheller | 28 | 20 | 200 |
| Beckler | 27 | 21 | 199 |
| Muenninghaus | 27 | 21 | 199 |
| Sottrell | 26 | 22 | 194 |
| Arthur | 24 | 24 | 199 |
| Lambert | 22 | 26 | 196 |
| Monnig | 22 | 26 | 187 |
| Grubb | 20 | 28 | 191 |
| Pearson | 14 | 34 | 185 |
| Appel | 13 | 35 | 185 |

The schedule for the week follows: Tuesday, Beckler vs. Vierheller; Lambert vs. Pearson. Wednesday, Monnig vs. Muenninghaus; Sottrell vs. Nelson; Thursday, Spencer vs. Appel; Arthur vs. Grubb.

Mrs. Martin Has 256 Game.

Mrs. Martin has a total of 633 for high three and a 256 for high single in the Washington Women's League. Other high games are Mrs. Schulte, 241; Mrs. Mees, 223; Mrs. Schurman, 215, and Mrs. Sprunk, 215. Mrs. Schulte, 598, is second in high three and has a season's average of 172. Mrs. W. R. Smith has 163, Mrs. Mees, 162, Mrs. Carroll 160.

The standings: Gradwohls, 31—14; Washington Five, 29—16; Colbions, 24—21; Schnurrs, 23—22; Rogers, 22—23— Stein Juniors, 21—24; Hartmans, 15—30; Mohrs Five, 15—30.

Karls Is Averaging 211.

Roy Karls is averaging 211 for 39 games in the Washington Scratch League. He has a high three of 709 and high single of 279. Standings of the teams: Witter Razz, 31—11; Fischers, 27—15; Clover Leafs, 23—19; United Bakers, 25—17; Schaefers, 22—20; Hug Trucks, 22—20, Missouri Pacifics, 22—20; Colbions, 21—21; Morgans, 18—24; Wabash Club, 14—28; Byrne and Vescova, 14—28; Schweiglers, 13—29.

Letter Defends Alley Owners

Sports Editor Post-Dispatch:

A few days ago a letter appeared in your columns from "a Bowler," stating that alley owners were "ruining the sport" by competing in the various classics. Also that Chicago alley men did not roll in these events in the Windy City. This is not true, as Hank Marino and Dominic Devito are alley men and bowl in all Chicago tournaments.

"A Bowler" seemed to be aiming at three men: Otto Stein Jr., Jake Pflueger and E. A. Schaefer. No other alley owner is rated as a star. They are just good bowlers.

Why bar alley owners from the competitions? They are boosters and, like other bowlers, pay their entry fee to compete. Of the three, Stein is best known. A few years ago when he represented St. Louis in the world's individual championship tourney at Chicago, no one complained. Why should they now? Stein was as good then as he is today. Pflueger always has been a booster, while Schaefer has come to the front only in the last year. Prior to that, he went to all important tournaments, without a chance of winning. This year he has been in the prize fund in two events.

American Bowling Congress rules do not bar these men from tournaments. Let them compete so long as they do not roll in events on their own alleys.

ANOTHER BOWLER.

PIGEON WING II BEATS SANOLA IN STAKE RACE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LONGWOOD, Fla., Dec. 18.—A. Riley's Pigeon Wing II, which set a track record at Seminola Park last week, won the Reporter-Star purse, feature race on today's program from the Sanola Stable's Sanola. T. E. Crist's Ball Gee finished third.

Pigeon Wing II went to the post a favorite and had an easy time winning. Sanola was driving at the finish to stall off the fast coming Ball Gee. Pigeon Wing II was ridden by Jockey C. McCrossen, who piloted two other winners. McCrossen also rode Lady Porter and Jingle, victors in the third and second races.

The first race resulted in a driving finish between Mitzi McGee and Grace D'Or, the former winning by a nose. Grace D'Or was coming fast at the end and would have won in another stride. Bim, which was expected to get in the money, stumbled at the start and was never in the running.

L. B. Draun's good filly Lake Erie broke down while leading in the third race. As a result of the breakdown, Eda C. was interfered with and was knocked out of contention. Lady Porter, which won the race, was a 1 to 2 favorite, Esther Weidel was second and Kosciusko third.

The Maryland Spring Stable scored another victory when Martingale finished ahead of Tease. False Face was third. Martingale won in a driving finish. The fifth race fell to the Sunflower Stable's Bucko, with North Pine second and The Plainsman third.

Jockey T. Pascuma, who rode three winners yesterday, came back with one winner four consecutive seconds and a third out of six mounts. Pascuma won with Mitzi McGee in the opener.

Marlboro, well handled and away well, followed Fourteen Sixty closely and, holding on well in stretch, outstayed Fourteen Sixty. The latter showed most early speed, saved considerable ground but tired near end. Pop Bell raced prominently for most of the drive and finished third. Jenny Dear was ridden wide most of the way. Balto showed a good effort. Marion Elizabeth was away slowly and far back most of the trip.

Orestes II, going in his best form and showing most speed, raced into lead and under strong urging near end outstayed Everglade. Latter had to race wide, lost ground and was probably the best. Lord Martin came fast during stretch. George Groom raced prominently from start but was given a weak ride and would have been much stronger factor with a good ride. Bosh, going in her best form under a hustling ride, moved into lead at once, but had to be urged hard in last sixteenth to outstay Revellion. Latter raced up after 9/10 and finished gaining fastest at the end. Zeus the Second came steadily in stretch and wore down Plus Ultra in final strides. Plus Ultra began tiring badly, after reaching final furlong. Sir Ralph had no mishaps. Moon Magic raced wild.

$2 certificates: Bosh, straight $8.40, place $4.80, show $4; Revellion, place $4.40, show $3.60; Zeus the Second, show $4.80.

Catesby, racing in good form and well suited by the going, took command in first sixteenth and, going much faster, under a steady and well-judged ride, held his field safe thru hout. Running Fox raced wide early stages, began tiring when reaching stretch, but held on well and barely missed second. Hawk Eye moved into contention last turn and was going gamely at end. Blacksmith, a forward factor from the start, tired badly in last quarter. Lexington Maid finished fast. Halo raced in poor form and was badly outpaced.

Carlaris Again Nominated for $100,000 Race

Last Season's Winner Among 96 Entries for Coffroth Handicap.

Nominations for the $100,000 Coffroth Handicap, which will be run at Tijuana, March 13 have closed, with 96 horses named for the rich stake. The La Brae Stable, owned by H. H. Cotton, tops the list of nominations with six thoroughbreds. Cotton has entered Sunspero, American Son, Sweeping Away, Elector, Rocky Lane and Sandy Man for the mile and one-quarter race. Jockey Willie Mulden, who is second in the list of winning jockeys, will probably have the leg up on Sunspero, should the horse start.

E. F. Seagram, who is campaigning a stable worth $300,000 at Tijuana, has five entries. Edisto, which raced with much success on Canadian tracks, is the star. Gaffsman, a High class 3-year-old, Sir Harry, Wandering Minstrel and Voshell are also named by Seagram. Baron Long has entered Cherry Tree, third to Carlaris in last year's Coffroth, Movie Star, and three others.

Carlaris Is Entered.

The Greenbriar Stable, has entered the former Whitney racer, Backbone along with four other colts. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree Stable has five horses named for the stake. W. T. Anderson's Chula Vista Stable will again send the "wonder" horse, Carlaris which proved a bust on Eastern tracks to the post. Anderson has also named Alma Mater and Cockrill, Broadway Jones, now at New Orleans, will carry E. R. Bradley's colors. Broadway Jones won the 1925 Latonia Championship Stakes at two miles. Vespasian, wintering at New Orleans, is entered by William Daniel.

Of the 96 entries about 12 will face the barrier. The probable starters are: Broadway Jones, Backbone, Sunspero, American Son, Edisto, Gaffsman, Cherry Tree, Movie Star, Carlaris, Dangerous Jack Alexander, Sure Fire and Light Carbine, unplaced in last year's stake.

For the seven stakes at Tijuana, 514 horses have been nominated. The Coffroth heads the list. The other six are the Tijuana Derby, Tijuana Cup, Tijuana Oaks, Speed Handicap, Tijuana Juvenile and the Tijuana Futurity. The last two are for 2-year-olds exclusively. The Tijuana Oaks is for 3-year-old fillies and the Tijuana Cup and Speed Handicap are for 3-year-olds and over. The cup race will be run over a distance of two miles and a quarter.

37-Day Race Meet At Tampa Park

New Owners Announce Officials for Season to Begin Jan. 15.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 18.—Plans for the proposed Tampa, Fla., race meeting to start Jan. 15, were made known this afternoon by Robert S. Eddy Jr., who, with Joseph Cattarinich and Leo Dandurand, purchased the course at receiver's sale Wednesday for $110,000.

It is proposed to hold a 37-day term of racing to terminate on Feb. 26. The minimum purse at the outset will be $300. There will be six races of this amount daily and the feature event will be worth $1000. On Saturdays there will be five purses of $800 each, one of $1000 and the feature will have $1200 added.

C. W. Hay and Thomas C. Bradley, who are functioning at Jefferson Park as stewards, will serve in a similar capacity at Tampa Downs.

Tunney to Refrain From Marriage to Keep Interest In Profession, He Declares

Champion Considers He Owes a Duty to Followers of Boxing —Plans Much Travel and Says He Will Fight Anyone.

By Gene Tunney
World's Heavyweight Champion.

CHAPTER XXXI.

AFTER I had been awarded the official decision and the heavyweight championship of the world, I felt no especial elation. I gave vent to no enthusiasm. Perhaps I was simply tired. Possibly the cold rain had dampened my spirits at the end of that memorable contest. Whatever the cause I felt no different than I had felt after any other fight in which I had engaged.

Somehow I could not realize that this was the end of the long, hard trail. When I reached my dressing room, having been led over the rain-soaked, densely crowded stadium aisle, I found my friends in a frenzy of delight.

And still the general enthusiasm did not grip me. I felt strangely calm. I realized in a sense that I was champion, but I did not grasp the full significance of my victory.

At the hotel, another group met me. Group! I should say a multitude. Everyone was soaked through and through until there was no such thing as a well-dressed man in Philly that night. I realized at once that I was in for a career of handshaking, talking, resting, well-meant embraces and what not. I knew then and there that Gene Tunney no longer belonged to himself but to the public.

Finally, when pressure grew too heavy, I retained my friend and adviser, Dudley Field Malone, to become my legal manager, thus relieving Billy Gibson of duties other than actual fight matters.

Wagers He Won't Marry.

SO many rumors have been flying about concerning a possible marriage for me that I must say just a word on that score. My opening word is this:

"I am not going to be married so long as I hold the title. I have a wager of $1000—the first wager I ever made—that I will not marry for four years."

Now, it is most unfortunate for me and particularly so for my friends, that I cannot be seen at the theater or at any entertainment with a lady without having it flying thick and fast next day that I am to wed. It is a very embarrassing thing for the young women friends, sisters or other women relatives of my pals.

I cannot afford to be married in the first place. I belong to the public and it is imperative that I keep my interests in my profession entirely and solely. Aside from that, I shall do a great deal of traveling and I do not wish to entail a hardship on any woman.

I have been asked what kind of girl is my ideal. That is a big and dangerous order for me to answer. I will not say whether she be blonde or brunette, large, small, pretty or otherwise. I will say, however, that I admire a woman who is clean, wholesome and worthy of motherhood. I think my opinion, or rather, my likes, may be summed up in this: I like REAL HUMAN BEINGS who never get so high they forget they are human, and who never fall low enough to be unworthy of being human beings, be they men or women. My interests are wholly platonic.

If love should come to me—and the chances seem remote to me—I cannot predict with certainty what I shall do. Perhaps I shall be taken off my feet. Who knows? But, as I said not long ago to a woman reporter:

"I never have been knocked down yet!"

Plans for Future.

NOW as to my plans. I have none outside of intending to participate in some dignified, worth-while theatrical project. I have given a month or more to social obligations and feel that I have repaid my loyal friends for their love and good cheer and their belief in my ability. Now I must get back to work, lest my muscles become flabby and my whole being become used to "soft" living. I am putting on no "airs" and I continue to live in comparatively moderate fashion. You see, I am not yet a man of wealth. Even if wealth should come, I shall try to be just Gene Tunney.

I shall fight anyone whom Tex Rickard selects for me. I am content to let the matter rest in his hands, because I know he will procure the best attraction. The best attraction is the champion and the leading challenger. So it is certain I will meet the best man available. I think I will continue to hold the title for some time. I make no rash statements as to how often I will fight or of any great feats I will perform.

I leave that to Father Time, a most enduring and relentless old fellow. And now I bid you a hearty good-by and good cheer. To you, my public, I say that Gene Tunney as champion will try to fulfill his trust.

Mack Pritchett Bird Dog Winner

UNION SPRINGS, Ala., Dec. 18.—Mack Pritchett, a pointer owned by C. F. Aldrich, of St. Paul, Minn., won the all-age stake of the Southern bird dog trials which was decided here yesterday. Second place was won by the pointer, Mary Blue, owned by Dr. George Blue, of Montgomery, Ala., while his other dog, Oklahoma City Jack, divided third with the pointer Walnut Grove Lucy, owned by R. W. Norman, of Salisbury, N. C.

The stake had thirty-two starters and was full of surprises, especially as far as the winner is concerned. No one picked Mack Pritchett to win on the strength of his performance and Mary Blue was also a remote possibility for second honors, but when the pair were put down in direct competition they furnished the thrill of the day. Both found birds, ran well and finished at great pace and range although they were kept going for nearly an hour.

Mack Pritchett is the same dog that won the Manitoba championship at Geinsborough, Saskatchewan in September, and since that time has been placed once or twice in minor trials. His win of the Southern is by far his most important win in quail trials since he has been on the circuit.

Closed Season on Game Fish Will Be Recommended

State Game Department to Suggest Other Changes to General Assembly.

Recommendations for the coming General Assembly, by the State Game and Fish Department will be featured with various requests relative to fishing conditions, it was announced yesterday by Commissioner Keith McCanse.

Much interest has been manifested by sportsmen throughout the State in the passage of laws which will govern the practice of gigging more strictly and that will bring about more adequate protection for game fish during spawning periods.

It is with the idea of bettering fishing conditions in Missouri waters that recommendations are to be made by the department to have a closed season on game fish during spawning time.

Several changes can profitably be made in the fish law that will greatly improve fishing conditions in the State. Probably the most important change in the law in this respect will be a closed season on all game fish except trout, from April 1 to June 1. This would make it illegal to catch bass, crappie, channel cat, and jack salmon during the time they are spawning. Trout spawn from Nov. 1 to March 1, and a closed season on them for those months will be requested.

Practice Detrimental.

The gigging of fish is one of the most detrimental practices in taking fish from Missouri waters, and should be limited so that minimum damage will be done by this method. Senator Donnelly endorsed a bill in the last General Assembly and this bill is favored by the Game and Fish Department. Senator Donnelly's bill passed the Senate but failed in the House. It prohibited gigging of fish at night and made the closed season, Dec. 1 to June 30.

The department holds that there should be a size limit on game fish so that small ones will not be taken from the water, and also that the number of fish that may be taken by any one person a day should be limited.

To encourage visitors to hunt and fish in the State, the department recommends a trip license good for two weeks at the same cost that State wide licenses now cost the residents for a year.

A $500 reward for each dynamiting case reported is suggested.

An open season on doves to conform with the migratory bird act will be recommended. This will make it possible for Missouri sportsmen to hunt doves from Sept. 16 to Dec. 31. Surrounding states have open season on doves and the continuous closed season in Missouri is considered discriminatory against Missouri sportsmen.

"Unseat Vare, Be Poss... South"

Upper House of Congress, Noted Lawyer Says in Book Prepared for Forthcoming Election Contest, Has No Right to Refuse Membership Even to an Embezzler if a State Elected Him to Office.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.

Now comes James M. Beck, former Solicitor-General of the United States under Attorney-General Harry M. Daugherty, to the defense of Senator-elect Frank L. Smith of Illinois and Senator-elect William S. Vare of Pennsylvania, whose credentials will be challenged on the grounds of corruption when they come to take their seats in the Senate.

Beck has presented to every Senator and Representative with his compliments, a copy of his latest work, entitled "The Vanishing Rights of the States." It is a 126-page monograph devoted entirely to the cause of the two Republican Senators-Elect.

In the introduction he states that this book is not a lawyer's brief. Senator Ashurst of Arizona, who introduced the resolution Thursday designed to keep Smith from taking the oath of office when he presents his certificate of appointment for the unexpired term of the late Senator McKinley of Illinois, characterizes it as "the cleverest and best brief that will be filed in the coming contests."

Beck takes the position that the only right the Senate has to go back of an election certificate is to ascertain whether or not the Senator-elect possesses the bare constitutional qualifications of being 30 years old, nine years a citizen of the United States and a resident of the State from which he has been chosen. Those who agree with this view he calls "Moralists"; those who disagree he described as "Pragmatists."

Essential Things Omitted by Beck

The book is notable for its omissions and its implied threats. There is no mention of the gravamen against Smith; that he accepted $125,000 from Samuel Insull, public utilities capitalist of Chicago, while he was still chairman of the Illinois Commerce Commission, in which capacity he had almost the power of life and death over the Insull interests. Nor is there mention of the fact that Vare paid out tens of thousands of dollars to "watchers" in Philadelphia. Uninformed readers might get the impression from Beck that Vare spent almost all of his huge fund for a "campaign of education."

Stepping outside his role as a constitutional lawyer, Beck justifies these expenditures by saying: "While it is of no importance so far as the constitutional question is concerned, it was clear that in each state the friends of the losing candidate had spent far more in his behalf than the friends of the successful candidate. Thus in Pennsylvania, for every dollar that was spent by friends of Mr. Vare, at least $2 had been spent by his nearest opponent."

When he dons his legal robes again, he makes the point even more emphatic by stating:

"It is to be further noted that, in the absence of any law which forbade the expenditure of money beyond a certain limit, each of the successful candidates was within his rights under the laws of his state in spending an unlimited amount of money, provided always that he collected it in a proper way and disbursed it for legitimate purposes. When Mr. Vare elected to test the sentiment of the Pennsylvania voters upon the vexed question of prohibition, he knew that he was opposed by a faction which could command almost unlimited resources. It was his undoubted right to seek a nomination for the Senate, and if he believed that friends of his opponents would spend nearly $3,000,000 it was clearly within his right under the laws of Pennsylvania to spend one-third of that amount, always assuming that the expenditures were for the legitimate, and I emphasize, laudable purpose of educating the voters upon the merits of the issues which were involved.

There is no mention then or later of the Small and Copely contributions, the Philadelphia and Pittsburg "watchers," and the [illegible] of thousands of dollars handled in cash [illegible] no explained reason. Beck does not state

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.

NOW comes James M. Beck, former Solicitor-General of the United States under Attorney-General Harry M. Daugherty, to the defense of Senator-elect Frank L. Smith of Illinois and Senator-elect William S. Vare of Pennsylvania, whose credentials will be challenged on the grounds of corruption when they come to take their seats in the Senate.

Beck has presented to every Senator and Representative with his compliments, a copy of his latest work, entitled "The Vanishing Rights of the States." It is a 126-page monograph devoted entirely to the cause of the two Republican Senators-Elect.

In the introduction he states that this book is not a lawyer's brief. Senator Ashurst of Arizona, who introduced the resolution Thursday designed to keep Smith from taking the oath of office when he presents his certificate of appointment for the unexpired term of the late Senator McKinley of Illinois, characterizes it as "the cleverest and best brief that will be filed in the coming contest."

Beck takes the position that the only right the Senate has to go back of an election certificate is to ascertain whether or not the Senator-elect possesses the bare constitutional qualifications of being 30 years old, nine years a citizen of the United States and a resident of the State from which he has been chosen. Those who agree with this view he calls "Moralists"; those who disagree he described as "Pragmatists."

Essential Things Omitted by Beck

The book is notable for its omissions and its implied threats. There is no mention of the gravamen against Smith; that he accepted $125,000 from Samuel Insull, public utilities capitalist of Chicago, while he was still chairman of the Illinois Commerce Commission, in which capacity he had almost the power of life and death over the Insull interests. Nor is there mention of the fact that Vare paid out tens of thousands of dollars to "watchers" in Philadelphia. Uninformed readers might get the impression from Beck that Vare spent almost all of his huge fund for a "campaign of education."

Stepping outside his role as a constitutional lawyer, Beck justifies these expenditures by saying: "While it is of no importance so far as the constitutional question is concerned, it was clear that in each state the friends of the losing candidate had spent far more in his behalf than the friends of the successful candidate. Thus in Pennsylvania, for every dollar that was spent by friends of Mr. Vare, at least $3 had been spent by his nearest opponent."

When he dons his legal robes again, he makes the point even more emphatic by stating:

"It is to be further noted that, in the absence of any law which forbade the expenditure of money beyond a certain limit, each of the successful candidates was within his rights under the laws of his state in spending an unlimited amount of money, provided always that he collected it in a proper way and disbursed it for legitimate purposes. When Mr. Vare elected to test the sentiment of the Pennsylvania voters upon the vexed question of prohibition, he knew that he was opposed by a faction which could command almost unlimited resources. It was his undoubted right to seek a nomination for the Senate, and if he believed that friends of his opponents would spend nearly $3,000,000 it was clearly within his right under the laws of Pennsylvania to spend one-third of that amount, always assuming that the expenditures were for the legitimate, and I emphasize, laudable purpose of educating the voters upon the merits of the issues which were involved.

"There is no mention then or later of the small and Copely contributions, the Philadelphia and Pittsburg "watchers," and the use of thousands of dollars handled in cash for no explained reason. Beck does not state whether he believes the Smith fund was collected in a proper way or the Vare fund disbursed for legitimate purposes.

Wholesale Expulsion Possible in Senate

In his threats the former Solicitor-General is more specific. In italics he declares:

"If 64 Senators can unseat two Senators by expulsion, they could unseat 32. Even 49 Senators could refuse to receive the credentials of 47. Thus a coup d'etat is at any time possible."

He then proceeds to wave the red shirt before the Southern Democrats by saying:

"Imagine, for sake of argument, a recrudescence of that baneful spirit of sectionalism which once unhappily divided the American people; that the line of division between the two great parties should again become geographical and run along the Mason and Dixon line. Such a supposition is improbable and no true American would wish to regard it as a possibility. If such possibility were one day realized, and a Republican majority in the Senate desired to strengthen their control by refusing to seat newly elected Democratic Senators might they not do so on the pretext, if the Senate has the powers now claimed for it, that the Senators-elect had not been selected by a free and fair vote, or might not a Republican majority provide that, unless a majority of the qualified electors actually voted, it should be assumed that they had not been permitted to vote and that there was, therefore, no true election?"

The latter argument already has had its effect. One Southern Senator has approved it. What effect it will have when the contests are before the Senate is another matter. Several Senators who have read the book have declared that Beck has distorted history to suit his ends. Others have indicated that they will have something personal to say about Beck.

The John Wilkes Case in England

Besides selecting a title that will appeal to States-rights Democrats, Beck has arranged his book like a legal brief. The chapter headings are: The erosion of the Constitution; the right of expulsion and the case of John Wilkes; the proceedings in the constitutional convention; the provisions of the Constitution; the prima facie validity of certificates of election, and the Federal regulation of primary elections.

In the appendix, the headings are: The parliamentary precedents in England and the Colonies; Grenville's speech for John Wilkes, and the result of the November elections.

The bulk of his argument is predicated upon the case of John Wilkes, member of Parliament from Middlesex who was expelled four times from the House of Commons by George III and his Ministers. Wilkes, a notorious demagogue with a criminal record, was returned by his constituency every time he was turned out. Finally the King's Ministers gave up the fight and ordered the proceedings of his ouster to be expunged from the journal. Wilkes won his fight.

The precedents in this case lead Beck to say:

"It may be—but I do not concede it—that if a Senator during the period of his service, is proved to have been guilty of some crime, he can be expelled, even though the crime has no relation to the discipline of the Senate.

"It is, however, equally clear, that the act which would justify his expulsion, must have taken place since his election. What he did prior to his election and qualification has been passed upon by the people of his State. In a political sense, it is res adjudicata.

Couldn't Reject Embezzler if Elected

"A candidate for the Senate might have been guilty of embezzlement before his election, but the right of that State to send an embezzler to the Senate, if it sees fit, is clear. Such decision is the sole right of the State."

To clinch his argument Beck continues:

"To permit the Senate to expel a Senator on the ground that, before his election, he had been either a fool or a knave, would revolutionize our theory of constitutional government. All this had been passed upon before the Constitution was framed in the great John Wilkes controversy."

To justify his assertion that the Wilkes controversy settled the issue for the United States before the Constitution was framed, Beck cites the fact that the American Colonies were intensely interested in the parliamentary struggle and adduces that the constitutional convention must have had the contest in mind when they framed the Constitution.

Comparing the Vare election to the Wilkes precedent, Beck says:

"There is no essential difference between the John Wilkes case and the William S. Vare case, except that in the case of Wilkes, the fate of a scurrilous radical was involved, who had offended the laws of England, and who was charged with having traduced the Ministers of the crown by libelous pamphlets.

"Education of Voters" Is Legitimate

"In the case of Mr. Vare, we have a citizen of Pennsylvania who has served for many years with credit in the House of Representatives and against whom there is no charge except that in a heated contest for a primary nomination, he had expended in educating voters the sum of $71,000, and that a far larger sum had been spent in his behalf by his friends. It is not charged that Mr. Vare violated any law of the State of Pennsylvania or of the United States. If he did he could be indicted and if found guilty, punished. In that event he would have a fair trial under the rules of the law."

As a matter of fact, the "larger sum" spent by Vare's friends, as revealed by the testimony before the Reed committee, was $484,000, exclusive of the $71,000 furnished by their candidate. And in his zeal over the Wilkes precedent in the House of Commons, Beck apparently overlooked the precedent of the House of Representatives when it expelled Brigham A. Roberts of Utah, not for any impropriety in his election but solely because he had violated the law against polygamous marriages. Nor does he mention that Representative Victor L. Berger, Socialist of Milwaukee, was twice refused admission in the House of Representatives, once in 1919 and again the following year. He also ignores the fact that the House was getting ready to expel Representative John W. Langley (Republican) of Kentucky, when he was convicted of violation of the Volstead act. Langley relieved the administration of considerable embarrassment by resigning.

Berger's Expulsion From the House

The Berger precedent follows closely the Wilkes precedent up to the point of action by the two legislative bodies. When the Commons expelled Wilkes, the voters of Middlesex returned him just to show their resentment against the crown. When the House expelled Berger the voters of his district in Milwaukee returned him to the House to show their resentment against wartime laws. Berger was allowed to take his seat only after the United States Supreme Court had reversed the decision of Federal Judge Landis who had heard the case against Berger.

While admitting that the Federal Govern-

Catholic Prelates of United States, In Pastoral Letter, Declare Mexico Seeks to Reduce Church to Slavery

CARDINAL HAYES OF NEW YORK — ARCHBISHOP GLENNON OF ST LOUIS — BISHOP SCHREMBS OF CLEVELAND — ARCHBISHOP DOWLING OF ST. PAUL — BISHOP KELLEY OF OKLAHOMA

Committee of five, representing the Catholic Church in the United States, which drafted pastoral letter on Mexican religious controversy.

Document Authorized by Cardinals, Archbishops and Bishops Reviews Religious Situation Created by Decrees Put in Force by President Calles, and Asks for the American Principle of Liberty of Worship.

THE Catholic Church in this country has struck back at what it regards as persecution of Catholicism by the Government of Mexico. The church has stated its position in the first pastoral issued from the American hierarchy as a whole since 1919.

The 12,000-word document, made public in New York by Cardinal Hayes, is, in effect, an answer to attacks made upon the Catholic Church in Mexico by those supporting the policy of President Calles.

It is the outcome of a discussion of the Mexican situation by the National Catholic Welfare Association at Washington in September. A committee then appointed—consisting of Cardinal Hayes, Archbishop Glennon of St. Louis, Archbishop Dowling of St. Paul, Bishop Schrembs of Cleveland and Bishop Kelley of Oklahoma—prepared the pastoral, after which it was submitted to and approved by the head of every diocese in the country.

Sent to 30,000 Clergymen.

In pamphlet form, the pastoral has been sent to 30,000 clergymen, as well as to various organizations. It is accompanied by an abstract which probably will be read in Catholic churches.

In justification of its attack upon the restrictive measures enforced by the Calles Government, the document charges that sponsors of the Mexican policy have brought their case to the American people through diplomatic and other agents. Since they have chosen public opinion in this country as a court of hearing, it is explained, the answer must be placed before the same court. The answer is intended not only for Catholics, but for all Americans, Cardinal Hayes said.

The letter charges that the present conflict, "as one part of a war against religion in Mexico which had its inception almost a century ago, to a greater degree than any preceding it, comes from an attempt at nothing less than the destruction of the divine constitution of the church by reducing her to the status of a state-controlled schismatical body, without the right to form, train and educate her own clergy, to have a sufficient number of them for the care of souls, to find means for her support, to develop works in accord with her mission of charity and enlightenment, and to apply the teachings of the gospel to the formation of a public conscience.

"Sad experience, as well as right reason, tells us what would follow the success of such an attempt and what it would mean to church as well as to state.

Would Make Church a Slave.

"The Mexican church thus controlled and bound, as the civil power seeks to control and bind her, nominally might be separated, but really would be a department of the political machinery of the state. The dignities and offices would be the perquisites of politicians; her voice the changing voice of political action. She would be despised by her faithful and justly mocked by her enemies. Her bond of unity with the church universal would first be weakened and then snapped asunder. The Mexican Government asks the church to accept a slavery that could mean nothing today but an infection caught from evil surroundings and tomorrow a decline into a mortal sickness inevitably ending with her passing from the life of the Mexican people."

The Calles Government is making war upon one of the essentials of Christianity—liberty of conscience—the letter continues. Mexico bases its case upon the assurance that it is merely enforcing the Constitution and fundamental laws of the Mexican nation. The pastoral denies, however, that Mexico has any right to halt the "divine mission of the church," saying:

"Only the arbitrary interference outside of its own independent proper sphere of action can the state obstruct the due fulfillment of the pastoral ministry; and this the Mexican Government seeks to do, denying in effect the final authority of the will of God plainly expressed to man for his spiritual guidance.

Laws Heretofore Not Enforced

Passing from the consideration of the conception of civil and religious liberty in constitutions to the constitutions themselves, we are met with the plea of the Mexican Government that it is doing no more than enforcing its own. Here, however, at the outset, it is confronted with two important facts: First, that though the anti-religious laws of the country date from 1857, yet no government till now has ever attempted to give them full effect; and second, that, though these laws were reaffirmed and made more drastic in the constitution of 1917, yet President Carranza himself suggested changing the clauses affecting religion, and President Obregon never attempted to enforce all of them during the four years of his administration.

"These two facts show that it was tacitly recognized how far removed such laws were from justice and from the approval of the Mexican people. The appeal to the constitution, however, does take our eyes off persons, and for the moment, directs attention to the written instrument by which such persons seek to justify their acts. It is in order, therefore, to inquire into the nature and purpose of a constitution.

Purpose of Constitution

"A written constitution is an instrument which enumerates and defines the rights and duties of government, distributes its powers, prescribes the manner of their exercise, and limits them to the end that the liberties of the citizens may be preserved. Since the purpose of government is to protect human rights, not to destroy them, it follows that the charter by which a government operates cannot contain a grant of unlimited power.

"For the exercise of such power would be tyranny, inasmuch as it would tend to destroy rights which the natural and the positive laws of God place beyond the jurisdiction of men." Hence, in the commonly accepted American doctrine, a Constitution vests the government with such rights and powers as are necessary for the proper exercise of its just functions, and at the same time forbids it to encroach upon rights of a higher order which come to men, not from the people, nor from the state, nor from any aggregation of states, but from the Creator of both men and states, Almighty God. The conception is wholly in keeping with the teaching of the Catholic Church.

Limit to State's Powers

"The power of the State, coming from God, may be bestowed by the people, but when thus bestowed, it does not and cannot include what is not within the competency of the State to accept. Had God ordained the rule of the State over the soul and conscience, He would have given the State the means to direct conscience and control the operations of the soul, since He gives means to the end. The sanctuary of the soul and of conscience the State cannot invade.

"It is precisely this that the Government of Mexico seeks to do and then to justify before a people whose national ideals are in direct contradiction to the evil spirit of despotism and tyranny that actuates the laws and rulers now making of Mexico a shocking example of wrong to the whole civilized world. It is plain, then, that there was no exaggeration in the language of Pope Pius XI when he characterized these laws as 'diabolical.'"

Contrast With United States

Pointing to the Declaration of Independence and American "recognition of the rights and utility of religion," the letter says:

"It has stood the test of nearly one and a half centuries, and the American people today are undoubtedly more than ever convinced of the desirability of its continuance. While with us there is no union of church and State, nevertheless there is full and frank recognition of the utility of religion to good government. Hence the American State encourages religion to make greater and greater contributions to the happiness of the people, the stability of Government, and the reign of order."

Contrasting the lot of the church in Mexico with that here, the letter says that officially there are no churches in Mexico, "for a church cannot possess anything that lacks the right of petition for redress of grievances, cannot sue or be sued in civil courts, and in general is entirely without legal standing."

Extent of Restrictions

The Mexican restrictions, it goes on, bar foreign clergymen and make impossible the future development of a native clergy; and the effect is felt in far more than the spiritual work of the church. It is the "ruin of works of education and charity, both of which have been fields of fruitful endeavor by the Catholic Church in Mexico.

"Such laws hark back to paganism," the document adds. "Were they to prevail they would show civil society to have been marching, not in advance, but in a circle; and again arriving, in this our day, at the point from which it started with the dawn of Christianity."

Answering the charge that the Catholic Church has kept the Mexican people illiterate and backward for centuries, the pastoral asserts that, on the contrary, heroic educational work has been done. It adds:

"To Mexico goes the glory of the first book, the first printing press, the first school, the first college and the first university in the New World, and to Mexico's Catholic missionaries should go her gratitude for these distinctions. To the evil philosophy of the Red Terror goes only the sad credit for a century of destruction. A French writer on social science said that 'private initiative begins where the intervention of power ends.' In Mexico it is proposed never to permit it to begin since the power of the State is to have no end.

Progress Due to the Individual

"Yet the State owes all its progress and success to the individual. All advance in education, for example, such as the science of pedagogy, the planning of methods, the proper division of studies, the balanced curriculum, are the contributions of individuals. Surely these neo-Jacobins must see the force of the words of a French writer who said of people under such a regime, that they 'judged liberty to lie in restricting the liberty of others.'"

The accusation that the church in Mexico gathered to itself an undue proportion of wealth is a gross exaggeration, the letter continues. Furthermore, the greater part of this wealth was not that of the church, but of educational and charitable agencies.

The highest estimate ever made of such wealth, including endowments, is $250,000,000. It goes on, while property devoted to re-

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Submit Mexican Controversy to World Court.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE controversy between Mexico and the United States is probably of varying degrees of interest to different persons. But there is one aspect of it that should, it seems to me, be of interest to every adult who favors peaceable settlement of international disputes and who takes our politics as seriously as he should and with full realization of his individual responsibility, since our government should be, as Abraham Lincoln said, "of the people, by the people and for the people."

The question at issue between the two sister republics is one of law and equity which is exactly the sort of matter that should be determined by an International Court. We feel that our country is represented in the World Court through our distinguished citizen, Mr. John Bassett Moore. Even though the United States has not formally joined the Court, this controversy could properly be submitted to it for adjudication.

Will readers of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch write to President Coolidge and to Senator Borah, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, and urge that this matter be submitted at once to the World Court for settlement?

Prosperity for the Farmer.

WE all want to see the farmers prosper; prosperity for them will mean prosperity for ourselves. We don't want to see the "City Farmer" at his desk, taking from the farmer the fruits of his work. A governmental system under which this can thrive, is not a system after the highest ideals. "Cornering" and speculation in the necessaries of life can be eliminated, if the right kind of men are sent to Congress to eliminate it; but the right kind of men will not be the kind who will make it possible for the farmers to withhold their products until we pay the price. And that is just what all this agitation means in the interests of the farmer. One set of politicians will get them started by imposing the "proper restrictions" in cooperative marketing and other measures; another set of politicians, for their votes, will apply the finishing touch by removing all restrictions, leaving us at the farmers' mercy. We ought to know something about the game of politics at Washington by this time, with all the enlightenment through the press. If we don't, it is up to us to learn, or pay the price.

Christmas for the Animals.

I'VE noticed the December number of the Farm Journal. It certainly has an appeal to anyone that loves animals or wants to see them have a square deal. Santa Claus, climbing a snowy, moonlit hillside, with the wild creatures, hungry and cold, eyeing him wistfully: "Anything for Us?"

There is nothing much but misery for any animal, Christmas or any other time, anywhere on the face of the earth. In the polar regions, we skin him alive and in the far tropics no brilliant-hued bird can keep his feathers on, nor any tortoise hang on to his shell. And in all the places between, it's "open season" for deer, ducks, geese, everything else we care to see drop dead. We crush him in traps, snare and seine. We stalk him afoot, chase him with launch, auto and airplane. We can't get a thrill out of life unless an animal somewhere flees from us, gasps its life out! And the sheer fun we take in all this misery!

"Anything for us?" The pathos and the justice of that plea ought to rouse us all to do what we can for them, at least one day in the year!

Farm Values and Mortgages.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

FARM values are not based on what they will produce but on what realtors can make some boob believe the land will pay a mortgage rate on.

For instance when Mr. Turpin sold his farm at Springdale, Ark., he was asked by the blacksmith if he had sold it for good this time. He answered, "Well he can never make the mortgage but I can well let him have it a year for the $10,000 he paid down." This is the rule rather than the exception.

New State Highway Commission.

I WISH to call your attention to the new State Highway Commission.

If I am correct, there is not a single man on the commission from North Missouri. Every man lives south of the river. Do you think this is fair to the northern part of the State?

If I am wrong, will be glad to have you correct me; I think something editorially from you on this would be of interest to the public.

FLORIDA AND TAXES.

When Florida proscribed both inheritance and income taxes by constitutional amendment some years ago she was accused of angling for millionaires, of transforming herself into an asylum for wealthy tax dodgers. There was raillery in the publicity poured upon her poinsettia-plumed head, and a good deal of indignation, too. But the plan seems to have worked well. The State is prospering, according to the Florida Chamber of Commerce. She has no bonded indebtedness, does not owe a penny and has $11,000,000 in her treasury. All this without a severance tax, without a corporation tax, without a stock transfer tax, without a franchise tax, and, of course, sans income and inheritance taxes.

The Florida plan, so successful there, might not be productive in other states. There is only one Palm Beach, with its golden implications and silken elegance. But even if the Florida plan were adaptable to other states, its adoption would be contested. Public sentiment sanctions the income and inheritance taxes as inherently just.

The public, however, is seriously disturbed by the tremendous increase in taxes, the ever-mounting costs of government, the audacity with which the heads of so many state administrations propose additional taxes and the scant returns in public service from such vast revenues. Here in Missouri we are today paying $15.69 in taxes where 25 years ago we paid $1.32, but so far from being affluent the State is chronically hard up and impecunious cries issue intermittently from Jefferson City, along with new devices for tapping the citizen's purse, while important public enterprises and institutions suffer from malnutrition because of the State's poverty.

Doubtless the experience of many other states might be similarly summarized. Moreover, the effrontery of our governing class is startlingly exhibited in the Federal Government's unconcealed attempt to coerce Florida and the other two noninheritance tax states, Alabama and Nevada, to fall into line. The present revenue law carries an inheritance tax, with the qualification, however, that only 20 per cent of this tax is taken by the Federal Government from states which have inheritance taxes. Such states are rebated, or given a credit of 80 per cent, while the states without such a tax must remit the entire amount of their Federal levy to Washington. Florida is resisting this claim, on the ground that the Constitution requires that all Federal taxation shall be imposed with uniformity. The point is well taken. And however selfish Florida's motives may be in this suit, she is fighting for a fundamental American principle, namely, the sovereignty of each state in the administration of its own individual affairs. Florida in this issue is taking a stand against the march of Federal empire, and in so doing will have the moral support of all citizens who are grounded in their civic creed.

Florida makes another telling point in this connection. She contends that the Federal Government's proposition to rebate 80 per cent of the Federal inheritance tax to the states that levy an inheritance tax is an acknowledgment that the Federal Government does not need this revenue. That raises this speculation: Were Florida, Alabama and Nevada, like the other states, to levy inheritance taxes, would the Federal Government abolish its inheritance tax, or substantially reduce it, or would it maintain the present rates, abolish the rebate and retain the whole yield itself, which it, confessedly, does not need? And how many taxes levied by the Federal and state governments are unnecessary?

The taxing power is the power to destroy, and the truth of that dictum is being driven home to the American people with crushing emphasis.

THE DUCE IS MISTAKEN.

Mussolini tells an Associated Press correspondent in an extended interview that "the work of fascism has been more quickly and completely understood in America than in many other countries separated from us by a few hours' train journey." This misapprehension on the part of the Italian Dictator is excusable and readily understood. Many of our most eminent citizens—personages who are generously quoted by the newspapers—have voiced unreserved admiration for the Mussolini regime. Leaders of industry, men of professional distinction who in some instances have figured in public life have rendered unto this Caesar the things that are Caesar's and a great deal more. But they have not expressed American opinion. More than that they have, in their adulation, disavowed American tradition and quite forgot ten American fundamentals.

Mussolini's absolutism is as remote from American democracy as was the red communism of Russia. Our cosmopolitans may or may not know that, but the rank and file of Americans know it.

DR. BUTLER'S 1743-WORD SENTENCE.

The jazz age arises to utter a loud guffaw at the news that Nicholas Murray Butler has written a sentence containing 1743 words, 125 commas and 32 semicolons. When Dr. Butler was growing up, Walter Pater and Henry James were in flower and a sentence was not a sentence unless it contained eight or nine complex clauses and a couple of neatly placed semicolons. Pater's sentences were like luxuriant trees whose limbs branched off in perfect symmetry; James' were like some tangled undergrowth.

No self-respecting youth of the eighties would think of perpetrating one of the verbless runts that now pass as sentences any more than he would think of giving the rebel yell at a G. A. R. meeting. One of the popular pastimes of that dear, dim day, a forerunner of the cross-word puzzle, was to search (try and find them) for the subject and the predicate in James' sentences. The writing of a sentence was a grave task, calling out the utmost ingenuity. The writer worked like an architect, putting a buttressing clause here and tucking a decorative phrase in there, until a towering grammatical structure was achieved.

Dr. Butler's sentence thus can be traced to early environment. For a moment he forgot to do the Charleston and reverted to the waltz. Maybe, after all, it was a conscious reversion. Maybe his aim was to sock the age of asterisks for a row of semicolons. If so, he surely did a virtuoso's job of it.

THE NEW EUROPE.

There is a new Europe rising out of the old, and it has remained for Dr. Stresemann, the German Foreign Minister, to name its chief characteristic.

"If statesmen could have met for four or five weeks in 1914, just as the Foreign Ministers met at Locarno and Geneva, and discussesd the situation frankly and unreservedly, I am convinced that the great war would have been averted," Dr. Stresemann said to the Associated Press.

Not many people who have thought upon the ills of this earth will be disposed to deny that, nor will history be likely to say at last anything different than Dr. Stresemann says of the League of Nations. As difficult as it was to establish such an international society upon the heels of the war, the world's need of it was never lessened by those difficulties. Dr. Stresemann commends it. He says it is henceforth to be a medium in arranging the affairs of Europe.

It would be strange, indeed, if he felt any differently than he does. The Versailles treaty left a prostrate Germany under the heel of the conqueror. There was but one escape from the inevitable tyranny and injustices of such a condition, and that was by what Dr. Stresemann terms the conciliative processes of plain talk between man and man. It had not been the custom in Europe for men to sit down together and discuss the affairs of nations. There was supposed to be in them a necessity for aloofness, and what Dr. Stresemann calls the colorless exchanges of diplomatic correspondence. These did not serve the necessities of the Germans after the war. They needed to meet their conquerors and have abated the passions which had thrust upon them the rigors of the Versailles Treaty. The League of Nations offered them a means of doing this. There had never been any such medium for intimate and personal discussion between nations. It was something new under the sun, and as something new and serviceable Dr. Stresemann applauds it.

So that is the new Europe. An immeasurable gain for civilization has been made, despite the seeming for a long time that no such gain was possible. We must believe that the Europeans are the best judges of what serves the purposes of Europe. What we may think, or what may remain among us of the conflict generated by the origins of the League, are in no wise comparable to what the German Foreign Minister in the stress of terrible necessity has found true about it.

We who have witnessed this drama, who saw its beginnings and ourselves participated in some of its scenes, from great roles as protagonists to parts as little as outside shouts, know now how civilization progresses. It 's down no primrose path of dalliance that she makes her way.

CORRUPTION IN HOLY TENNESSEE.

According to the shocking testimony presented by Frederick Rush in The Independent of Dec. 4, Tennessee has more than an antievolution law in which to take pride. She has broken into the union of corrupt commonwealths. She is no longer one of those petty Western states whose high moral standards regarding political activities have so disgusted Senator Reed of Pennsylvania.

The charges of Mr. Rush—which he supports with documentary evidence in the form of photostatic copies of letters and checks—concern the actions of Representative J. Will Taylor of Knoxville, the boss of the State Republican machine, in soliciting campaign contributions from postmasters and other postal employes, in defiance of the plain terms of Section 10-288 of the United States Criminal Code. The decent and self-respecting element in the Republican party of Tennessee has been trying since 1924 to bring about an investigation of Taylor's acts, and has lately secured the attention of the Civil Service Committee of the United States Senate, and, what is more important perhaps, has so impressed the Senate itself by the revelations of corruption that the latter body has held up the confirmation of the United States Attorney, a Taylor appointee, who has refused to push a seemingly complete case against his political godfather.

No, indeed, the State of Tennessee has henceforth no reason to feel inferior to such a proudly and splendidly corrupt State as Pennsylvania. Rather, the opposite should be true. Tennessee can not only boast of corruption; she is moral and godly. If Pennsylvania desires to attain equality with Tennessee, she will have to pass legislation forbidding her future victims of political debauchery to be contaminated by the vicious hypotheses of modern science.

THE GRAND OLD GREEKS AND US.

That eminent biologist, Prof. Conklin of Princeton, is fairly bursting with bad news. Evolution, he tells us, has come a cropper. Perhaps that is putting it on a bit thick. But he does say that intellectually man has made no progress at all in 3000 years. The old Greeks still have the highest mental batting average in the planetary league, and it is extremely unlikely that we shall ever produce another Socrates, Plato or Aristotle, or, stepping down the centuries, another Shakspeare, Darwin or Newton.

That is not all. Physically, alas, we are slipping. There is the little toe, by way of horrible example. It is cracking under the strain, or, at least, withering, while the great toe waxeth greater. It is a gloomy future. We are beating back to the jungle.

Now, if you please, tune in on Chicago. The Historical Society up there has just concluded the sale of a famous collection of antiques. Among the pieces were a number of suits of armor which were worn when Oliver Cromwell was Puritanizing Merrie England. There were giants in those days, perhaps—fighters, surely—yet none of those steel gabardines, it was found, was large enough for the average twentieth century man. Indeed, it would be a close squeeze for an able-bodied woman of the present mode to get into one of them.

So let us not be depressed by Prof. Conklin's melancholy forecast—not so despondent, anyhow, as to go out and end it all. With due respect to the professor, there may be Aristotles and Shakspeares even now in some obscure kindergarten, for all he or anyone else knows. Langdon Smith—shall we call him evolution's poet laureate—has sung us a gayer song. Though "Our trail is on the Kimmeredge clay, on the scarp of the Purbeck flags," it has ever spiraled upwards. And today man hears "the roar of the Milky Way die down and drone and cease" while he swings among the stars. The grand old Greeks would have hailed one of our aviators the son and heir of Icarus and laureled him forever.

IF WE ALL WENT TO CHURCH.

From the Providence Bulletin.

WHAT a day it would be in Providence if all the people who say they go to church, went to church. Only 1200 out of 14,400 Protestant families enumerated in the recent religious census here admitted that they were not affiliated with any denomination and attended no church regularly. Which leaves 13,200 families who assert that they are church-goers. Now, 13,200 families is, roughly, 65,000 individuals. The 80-odd Protestant churches in Providence have a total seating capacity of less than 35,000. So if these 65,000 who say they go to church took it into their heads really to do it some Sunday, more than 30,000 of them would be left out on the sidewalk. Since nothing like that has ever happened, it is obvious that somebody—or rather a great many somebodies—took liberties with strict veracity. Not, of course, for the purpose of misleading the census takers. There would have been no particular object in that. But, because it hurt their conscience less to claim they did something they did not do than it would have to admit that they did not do something they knew they ought to do. Then, too, very likely, some of them put a gentle strain on the meaning of the word "regular" as pertaining to their church going, like the institution inmate up-state who said pridefully that he took a bath "regular" every two years. The cynic will say forthwith that in either case a large percentage of the 65,000 demonstrated that they could benefit by attendance upon the teachings of the church. As for the 1200 families who openly answered that they belonged to no denomination and attended no church, what of them? Well, at least they were honest. And honesty, like cleanliness, is pretty close to godliness.

ORTA BE A LAW.

From the Baltimore Evening Sun.

A 19-year-old Sunday-school teacher held by the police for five robberies in New Jersey, explains his downfall by saying:

"Thoughts of being a hold-up man came to me when the moonbeams glistened on an old revolver that hung on my bedroom wall."

Score another black mark on the record, already dark, of Luna, propagator of madness. Under the spell of glistening moonbeams, what folly will man not commit? From murder to matrimony there is nothing too fantastic to be seriously considered under "the vitreous pour of the full moon, just tinged with blue."

Here, then, is another menace to youth, and a country that has apparently undertaken to remove by statute all menaces to youth cannot afford to neglect it. Something should be done about it, if the world is to be rendered innocuous to young fools, and "something" in that connection always means a law to be passed.

How about another amendment? Let it be written into the organic law that henceforth in the United States and all territory subject to its jurisdiction, moonbeams are hereafter prohibited from glistening—except, of course, for medicinal purposes.

IN DEFENSE OF XMAS.

From the Baltimore Evening Sun.

FRESH from a heated controversy over the question of marriage annulment, leaders of the Roman Catholic Church and the Protestant Episcopal Church are reported to have joined forces in a campaign to eliminate the word "Xmas." The campaign is said to have the indorsement of Cardinal Hayes and of Bishop William T. Manning. Why an attack on the use of "Xmas" should afford common ground for the two groups surpasses imagination.

The word "Xmas" is not merely a vulgar abbreviation, like "gents" for gentlemen, "sub" for subway, "bus" for omnibus, "pants" for pantaloons or "vest" for waistcoat. Any person with a pretense of scholarship must know that the "X" is symbolical of the cross. Early Christianity was full of such symbols. Conspicuous among them was the fish, whose Greek name, "ichthus," contained the initial letters of the Greek words "Jesus Christ, Son of God, Savior." In our own churches today are conspicuous the Alpha and Omega, symbolical of the beginning and the end, and the Greek letters Chi and Rho superimposed as an abbreviation for Christ.

Modern rationalistic enthusiasm served to eliminate many of the old symbols, while at the same time they simplified the ritual, and the word "Xmas" stands almost alone as a Christian symbol that has continued in popular and universal use. Inspired by this same urge for rationalism, the parsons seize upon this last popular symbol with a desire to destroy it.

RIGHT AND A LIEN.

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE Constitution gives the people certain "inalienable" rights, but an examination shows that the word contains "lien," which in the light of certain developments in this country, presumably is held by the Antisaloon League.

I LOVE TO SEE A MAN BUY A PIPE!

Sir: Now that recognition and classification have been accorded that pernicious purveyor of germs, the dreaded "thumb brusher," let us turn our attention to the flue tester.

Step up to any tobacco pipe counter and watch the flue tester at his best. Watch him pick up this pipe and then that, and, raising it to his lips, expand and contract his cheeks as he tests the drafts and flue of the pipe under consideration. He may be the one out of so many, and a man whose best friend hasn't told; still, he blows, sucks and fingers from three to ten pipes before buying a carefully tested cob.

Should no one seem to be demanding a pipe when you begin your investigation, buy one for yourself. Stand before a mirror while making a selection. . . . The fact that civilization has produced so many robust people is in spite of both the "thumb brusher" and the flue tester. T. O.

RULES FOR LOANS ON SOLDIERS' BONUS

Certificates Available for Sureties After Jan. 1—Borrowing Discouraged.

Though urging former service men not to borrow money on the Federal soldiers' bonus certificates except in cases of real and actual emergency, Charles B. Beck, regional manager in St. Louis of the United States Veterans' Bureau, yesterday issued a statement outlining the regulations under which money may be borrowed on the certificates and under which it may be loaned by banks.

The certificates, which constitute 20-year endowment insurance policies, will begin to be subject to loans after Jan. 1, the availability of any certificate for loan purposes depending upon the date of the filing of the application, no loan being permitted on any certificate until two years after Jan. 1, 1925.

Any loan made will of course decrease the value of the certificate by the amount of the loan, and for that reason the Bureau has discouraged borrowing on them.

Protection Against Usury.

Stringent regulations are provided in the law to prevent ex-soldiers from being charged usurious rates of interest or commissions for loans, the law even going to the extent of voiding a loan if the interest charge is in excess of 2 per cent per year more than the rate charged for discount of 90-day commercial paper by the Federal Reserve Bank in the district in which the loan is made.

Only the veteran named in the certificate can lawfully obtain the loan, not even the beneficiary having any rights in the matter, and loans can only be made by national and State banks or trust companies. The amount of the loan is restricted to the loan value as shown on

Though urging former service men not to borrow money on the Federal soldiers' bonus certificates except in cases of real and actual emergency, Charles B. Beck, regional manager in St. Louis of the United States Veterans' Bureau, yesterday issued a statement outlining the regulations under which money may be borrowed on the certificates and under which it may be loaned by banks.

The certificates, which constitute 20-year endowment insurance policies, will begin to be subject to loans after Jan. 1, the availability of any certificate for loan purposes depending upon the date of the filing of the application, no loan being permitted on any certificate until two years after Jan. 1, 1925.

Any loan made will of course decrease the value of the certificate by the amount of the loan, and for that reason the Bureau has discouraged borrowing on them.

Protection Against Usury.

Stringent regulations are provided in the law to prevent ex-soldiers from being charged usurious rates of interest or commissions for loans, the law even going to the extent of voiding a loan if the interest charge is in excess of 2 per cent per year more than the rate charged for discount of 90-day commercial paper by the Federal Reserve Bank in the district in which the loan is made.

Only the veteran named in the certificate can lawfully obtain the loan, not even the beneficiary having any rights in the matter, and loans can only be made by national and State banks or trust companies. The amount of the loan is restricted to the loan value as shown on the face of the certificate. The maximum which may be obtained on the maximum certificate Jan. 1 will be $90.

The procedure to be followed is for the veteran to give his promissory note to the bank, which will take his certificate as security for the loan. The bank may sell the note to any other bank authorized to loan on it, but must notify the veteran of the sale, or may rediscount it at the Federal Reserve Bank.

If a loan is not paid at maturity, providing six months has elapsed since the date of the loan, the bank may present the note to the Veterans' Bureau, which will pay the amount of the loan and the accrued interest if presented within six months of maturity.

If the veteran dies before maturity of the loan the principal and interest will be paid by the bureau immediately upon presentation of the note and certificate to it.

The regulations are strict in the requirement that the lending bank must know the person to whom the loan was made was the veteran named in the certificate, and in a requirement that in presentation of the note and certificate for redemption an officer of the bank must make affidavit that no fee other than legal interest under the law was charged for the loan.

Unseating of Vare and Its Possible Effects in South

ment has the power to regulate the time and manner of elections for Senators, he denies that this gives the Federal Government the power to regulate primaries, the seventeenth amendment notwithstanding. He asserts that even if the Federal Government had the power to regulate primaries, it would have no effect on the Smith and Vare contests, because the conclusion from the two premises would be merely that Congress has the power to pass a law regulating primaries, not power to pass on credentials of members-elect.

And though he quotes extensively the decision in the Newberry case, he does not point out, as does Senator Borah, that the court stood four to four on the effect of the seventeenth amendment, with Justice McKenna reserving his views.

Supreme Court's View.

In fact, Beck would have the reader believe that the Supreme Court has settled the question for all time.

"However, it is useless to discuss a matter upon which the final arbiter the Supreme Court, has authoritatively spoken," he says, in closing his arguments on the Federal regulation of primaries. "The conduct of political campaigns and incidentally the conduct of primary elections, is a matter beyond the delegated power of the Federal Government and this conclusion accords with the intentions of those who framed the great charter of our Government."

In writing the book, Beck probably had two purposes in mind, first, to intimidate Southern Democratic Senators who might be influenced by his plea for states rights and second, to furnish ammunition in the form historical precedents to Republican leaders who were expected to defend Smith and Vare.

As stated in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, the whole issue depends upon how far the Senate can go in interpreting paragraph 1, section 5 of article 1 of the Constitution which provides that "each house shall be the judge of the qualifications of its own members."

Beck's book does not offer advice as to what the Senate should do in the case of a Governor appointing a man to office, but the arguments he offers for certificates of elections would probably be held applicable to certificates of appointment.

PROBLEMS OF DISTRIBUTION DISCUSSED BY ECONOMIST

Cry for Commercial Efficiency Has Not Yet Been Met, Prof. W. H. Irwin Asserts.

The nation today is in the midst of a commercial revolution which ultimately will necessitate the application of drastic remedies, Prof. William A. Irwin, Department of Economics of Washburn College, Topeka, Kan., told a luncheon meeting of the Sales Managers' Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, Friday. His subject was "Some Current Problems on Distribution."

He pointed out that since 1921 there have been 20,000 business failures annually with total liabilities of $500,000,000. Increased competition, the high cost of living, the instalment plan of buying and the strenuous fight being waged for control of the retail market with its consequent prize of $85,000,000,000 were instrumental in bringing about these changed conditions, he contended.

"One hundred years ago, the United States was in the midst of an industrial revolution," he asserted. "The real problems that faced the country then was the production of more goods, and the answer was found in machine-made goods. We are now living in the second phase of that industrial revolution, or the first phase of a commercial revolution. The problem before us now is not production but distribution. The new cry is for commereal efficiency. That problem has not yet been solved."

Catholic Prelates of U. S. Issue Letter on Mexico

ligious uses in the United States is estimated by the Federal Trade Commission at $2,280,220,000 and, with endowments at $7,000,000,000. In proportion to population, the pastoral says, the Mexican figure might well be one-fourth that of the American, while actually it is not even one-tenth.

Denies Oppression of Poor.

The document denies vigorously that in its financial relations with the poor of Mexico the church has been oppressive, or that it has been backward in policies of social uplift.

"The charge that comes easiest to the tongue or pen of the Mexican politician is that the church interfered in politics," it says. "The answer is even easier to give than the charge was to make, for no one ever tries to offer proofs that it is true. It is taken for granted that it will be believed without proofs.

"When and how was the Mexican church in politics? If the charge refers to Spanish times, it is true that men like Bishop Las Casas, to whose memory revolutionary Mexico has recently erected a public monument, were 'in politics' to the extent of fighting the Spanish officials in the colony, even to the foot of the throne of the King, to secure justice and education for the Indian.

"It is true also to the extent, that, because of a none too ideal union of church and state in those times, the latter often went beyond its rights granted under the concordat to encroach upon those of the church and was for that rebuked and opposed. It is true again to the extent that individuals sometimes sought to use the union for their own self-aggrandizement. It is true in no other way.

Priests Led Fight Against Spain.

"If the charge refers to the early revolutionary times, it is true to the extent that priests led the fight against Spain, but that the church condemned them for deserting their spiritual activities to mix in the only kind of politics men then understood—warfare. It is true to the extent that the Bishops tried to preserve religious rights against the assaults of the revolutionists of the day. It is true in no other way.

"If the charge refers to more recent revolutionary history, it is true that the church is the only defender the country could find against assaults by Communists and Atheists on civil, political and religious liberties. It is not true that the church engaged in merely partisan politics.

"The Catholic party of Madero's day was a party of laymen organized to win for Mexico by constitutional means a more just and equitable code of laws. Madero welcomed it as 'the first fruits of my revolution.' To this extent, and not to any other, Catholics, not the church, were in politics. What of it? Does not the democratic state proclaim the legitimacy of constitutional methods to redress grievances? If that method is wrong, then we Americans do not understand democracy. And if these grievances, by the deed of the enemies of religion, lie in the realm of religious rights, are the friends of religion forbidden by that fact to work for their redress, because by so doing they would be mixing in politics?

"The statement of the Government of Mexico that it is now only trying to dissolve a union between church and State, and that the church is seeking temporal power, finds an obvious answer in the history of the Mexican nation. There has been no union of church and State in Mexico since 1887."

The church in Mexico is not asking that the union of church and State be restored, it continues, but for "the American system of freedom of religion to be introduced. This may easily be learned from the words of the Mexican bishops addressed to the Legislature: 'What is it that we petition? Not tolerance, not complacency, much less privileges or favors. We demand liberty and we demand nothing but liberty, we demand liberty or all religions. * * * * A regime of restriction against religion is the denial of liberty.'"

Even Catholics have asked why the church does not use its power to bring persecution to an end, the letter adds. But they "forget that there are but two human means to that end: The ballot and the sword." The ballot is hopeless in Mexico, the pastoral charges, because it is not respected; and the sword is equally helpless, since Christian principles forbid its use.

Church's Answer.

For the sad days of decline in Mexico, the document concludes, "The church, forbidden by law to teach and robbed of the means to carry on her mission of enlightenment, has only to show her chains and say to her enemies:

"'You blame me for poverty, yet you took from me the endowments for my hospitals, my orphanages, my countless works of mercy. You blame me for ignorance, yet you closed my schools and stole my colleges, the first to light the torch of learning on this continent.

"'You say that I have added nothing to science and art, but you destroyed the art I brought with me and developed, burned my books and scattered the results of my labor for science to the four winds of heaven. You blame me for lawlessness, yet you destroyed my missions among a peaceful and thriving Indian population and gave to them, in place of Christ's gospel, the 30 pieces of silver with which you bribed them to murder their fellows. You took the cross out of their hands to replace it with a torch and a gun.

"'Show me one good thing in Mexico I did not give you. Show me one genius for whom I was not responsible. Show me one step toward the light that I did not help you to make. Take out of your country all that I put in it and see what remains. You may thrust me out, exile my Bishops, murder my priests, again steal my schools and desecrate my sanctuaries, but you cannot blot out history, you cannot erase the mark I made on you—not in a century of centuries.'"

Cardinal Hayes said that the only layman to participate in the framing of the pastoral was William D. Guthrie, attorney, whose advice was sought on questions of constitutional rights mentioned in the document.

I LOVE TO SEE A MAN BUY A PIPE!

Sir: Now that recognition and classification have been accorded that pernicious purveyor of germs, the dreaded "thumb brusher," let us turn our attention to the flue tester.

Step up to any tobacco pipe counter and watch the flue tester at his best. Watch him pick up this pipe and then that, and, raising it to his lips, expand and contract his cheeks as he tests the drafts and flue of the pipe under consideration. He may be the one out of so many, and a man whose best friend hasn't told; still, he blows, sucks and fingers from three to ten pipes before buying a carefully tested cob.

Should no one seem to be demanding a pipe when you begin your investigation, buy one for yourself. Stand before a mirror while making a selection. . . . The fact that civilization has produced so many robust people is in spite of both the "thumb brusher" and the flue tester. T. O.

BUSCH RAILWAY PAY INCREASES AGAIN ARGUED

Matter Has Bearing on Entire Valuation Plan to Be Applied to All Railroads of U. S.

SALARIES OF THE OFFICERS ASSAILED

I. C. C. Lawyers Assert Payments to Chairman of Board and President Are Unreasonable.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—The propriety of the increase in salaries of the officers of the St. Louis & O'Fallon and the Manufacturers' Railways, both controlled by the Adolphus Busch estate, was again argued before the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday.

Upon the decision reached in the case of the two St. Louis railroads as to whether they earned a net operating income in excess of six per cent, will depend the entire valuation plan to be applied to all the railroads for enforcement of the "recapture" clause of the transportation act.

Pay of Officers Assailed.

P. J. Dougherty and R. E. Fryer, attorneys for the commission's bureau of valuation, declared that the increase made in 1923 in the salary of August A. Busch, chairman of the board of the two companies, from $2400 to $18,000 a year, and a special payment of $25,000 voted to William Cotter, president of the two roads, were unreasonable and operated to reduce the operating incomes of the companies.

They also contend that the commission had the power to correct the net operating income of the company by holding that such expenditures should not be included in the operating expenses of the companies, but should be borne by the stockholders.

Edgar E. Clark, a former member of the commission, now counsel for the two roads, answered the bureau attorneys by saying that no evidence had been submitted attacking the good faith of the payment of the increases, and declared that his clients were more concerned about the implication that they had conspired to do something dishonest by converting the funds to their own use than in the question how the expenditures should be charged.

Defense Lawyer's Argument.

Clark criticized the bureau attorneys for questioning the payments on the time they had devoted to their duties, asserting that these payments were fully justified by special services which had put the operation of the roads on a paying basis with subsequent great increases in earnings.

The commission had already received the evidence and heard arguments on the main issues involving the determination of the value of the roads, but the case was reopened for argument on the items of alleged excessive expenditures.

FREED OF CHARGE OF STEALING $700 FROM CHARITY CENTER

George Lapusan, 18, Produces Witnesses That He Was Aiding Accident Victim at Time.

George Lapusan, 18 years old, of 2612 Sheridan avenue, was acquitted of a charge of robbery Friday by a jury in Circuit Judge Ossing's court.

He was one of two men charged with having entered the Good Will Industries, a charitable organization at Thirteenth and Tyler streets, Sept. 10, taking $700 lying on a desk in pay envelopes.

Lapusan was identified as a man who ran through the yard of Mrs. Martha Metz, 1207 Tyler street, a few minutes after the robbery. Mrs. Metz said he ordered her to open a gate for him. He denied being in the vicinity at the time, and produced witnesses to show he had been assisting a friend to lift an injured woman from street car rails at Seventeenth and Cass avenues at the time of the robbery.

TOLD POLICE OF HOLDUP

Drug Clerk Corrects Impression That Patrolman Was Outwitted.

James D. At first it was thought that one of the robbers had warned the policeman and thus outwitted him, but Molony says that newspaper reports were unfair to Patrolman McCann. The patrolman hurried to the scene and acted with promptness in getting all details of the robbery available. The robbers who had halted Mrs. Leaver at a driveway near 4353 Warne avenue escaped with two diamond rings valued at $700 and a $15 bracelet.

ONLY SEVEN ALDERMEN TO VISIT NEW ORLEANS

Only seven of the 28 members of the Board of Aldermen have signified their intention of going to New Orleans tomorrow to look at Canal street to see whether the operation of street cars in a neutral zone in the middle of the street, such as proposed for Olive street, is beneficial to the traveling public at large.

The resolution to provide funds for the trip authorized as many of the Board as desired to go with expenses paid from its contingent fund. It provoked criticism as a useless trip made as a holiday diversion and Alderman Fedt, the chairman of the streets committee, to which the Olive street ordinance was referred, was one of the critics and has refused to make the trip.

Alderman Otto yesterday drew $1200 with which to pay the expenses of himself and the following other Aldermen: Studt, William F. Niederluecke, Wetzel, Lange, Krueger and Bergmann. All are members of the streets committee except Wetzel. Roy Gans, an engineer in the employ of the city, will accompany the party.

City Counselor Muench held yesterday that the Board of Aldermen was the only city authority which could grant the United Railways right to lay its tracks in a neutral zone. The present ordinance provides only for paving to create a neutral strip and another ordinance will be necessary to operate street cars in the strip.

Observation Squadron of National Guard to Be Moved Unless Suitable Armory Is Provided.

NOW QUARTERED IN OLD JAM FACTORY

A. L. Shapleigh to Support Movement to Get Armory and Invites Suggestions From Public.

Public-spirited citizens and exponents of aviation in particular are being appealed to in behalf of the 110th Observation Squadron, National Guard Air Unit, to prevent the threatened transfer of the unit to Kansas City or St. Joseph chiefly because of lack of armory facilities in St. Louis.

The unit recently was put on probation until Feb. 7 by order of Major-General Creed C. Hammond, chief of the Militia Bureau. The probation order threatens withdrawal of Federal recognition and the removal of the organization from St. Louis "unless unsatisfactory conditions are remedied by Feb. 7," the date of the next armory inspection.

The "unsatisfactory conditions" include the alleged inefficiency of several officers and noncommissioned officers in the unit, factional strife within the organization, and the lack of proper armory and "indoor" training facilities.

Armory Needs Public Support.

The expected resignation or discharge of certain members of the organization and an active training program under the new regular army instructor, Capt. H. H. Young, will settle all difficulties pertaining to personnel, it is said. The question of an armory, however, remains a problem requiring public support.

Headquarters at present are in an abandoned jam factory at 200 North Theresa avenue. This so-called armory is characterized as "inadequate, in a poor location, and unbecoming the dignity of the National Guard, the State of Missouri and the city of St. Louis," by Major-General G. A. Poore, commanding the Seventh Corps Area, in his recommendation to the Militia Bureau that the unit be transferred from St. Louis.

The jam factory was leased as a headquarters when the rapid growth of the 138th Infantry during the year forced the air unit to relinquish temporary quarters in the Armory at Grand boulevard and Market street. Under the national defense act the State is responsible for housing National Guard organizations. The State appropriation of $250,000 for National Guard purposes covering two years has been used up by the "land" forces, the air unit receiving but $200 for armory rental this year. There is no chance of obtaining funds from State sources until late in March, if at all, and a similar condition exists with regard to the municipal government.

No Aid From City.

Last March the city appropriated $36,900 for military purposes. This sum was divided among the 138th Infantry, Battery A, and the Naval Reserves. The air unit received nothing and will be unable to present a successful plea for funds until the compilation of the budget next March.

The situation has been brought to the attention of the Citizens' Military Committee, which through A. L. Shapleigh, chairman, has agreed to support a movement to obtain an armory for the unit. No plan has been evolved, however, and Shapleigh is awaiting suggestions from the public.

"The Citizens' Military Committee contributes to the support of the other National Guard organizations, but has no additional funds for the air unit," Shapleigh said yesterday. "I have no way of telling what the public will do in the case, but the committee will support any movement to keep the unit in St. Louis."

Aided in Other States.

Other States having air unit organizations have appropriated large sums for their support, according to Maj. C. R. Wassall, commander of the unit. "The State of Connecticut recently appropriated $250,000 and the city of Hartford $20,000 for its air force," he said. Tennessee voted $120,000 for a similar purpose, and the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis gave $50,000 when the Minnesota squadron was established."

Lambert-St. Louis Field, at Bridgeton, was purchased in 1923 by Albert Bond Lambert and the St. Louis Aeronautic Corporation and turned over to the Government for 10 years for use by the air mail and the flying unit. The Government supplies and maintains the equipment used by the unit at a cost estimated at about $82,000 a year, more than cost of maintaining a rifle unit of similar strength.

The lack of local interest in an organization drawing so heavily on Federal funds is the chief cause of Government complaint and the unit will be lost to St. Louis unless immediate action is taken to acquire an armory. Due to its distance from St. Louis Lambert Field is not suitable as the site of an armory.

6-DAY WEEK IN BRITISH MILLS TO AID U. S. COTTON FARMERS

Lifting of Production Restriction Expected to Enlarge Market For Surplus.

By the Associated Press.

MANCHESTER, ENGLAND, Dec. 18.—A noted economist's theory that full time production, instead of part time and restricted output, will offset depression is to be tried out by the Manchester Cotton Mills using American yarns.

The practical theorist is John Maynard Keynes, fellow of King's College, Cambridge. Under his plan, approved by the Organization Committee of the Federation of Master Cotton Spinners, the practice of curtailing American yarn spinning, which has been in effect almost continuously since 1920, will be abandoned.

Keynes insisted that the short time had the effect of enormously increasing the ratio of overhead charges and thus increasing the cost of the manufactured article for the consumer, to the advantage of Japanese and other foreign competitors. He urged mass production, with fuller utilization of American raw material.

As a result of his plan, British spinners will find work six full days a week for the first time in nearly six years in those mills using American yarns, and American cotton farmers, faced with heavy losses because of the second large crop in as many years, will be able to sell part of their surplus.

THREE DROWNED IN ICE HOLE

Cutter in Which Family Is Riding Falls Into River.

By the Associated Press.

PEMBROKE, Ont., Dec. 18.—A husband and wife and their six-year-old child were drowned when the cutter in which they were riding plunged through a hole in the ice on the upper Ottawa river near here. The bodies were identified as Mr. and Mrs. John McGuire and their child from Demers Center.

The family was returning from Christmas shopping in Pembroke and it is believed drove into the hole while blinded by driving snow.

GIFTS FREIGHTED WITH ADMIRATION

Numerous Individuals and Organizations Co-operating to Reach as Many Persons as Possible.

The nonsectarian committee of laymen which is raising a Christmas fund for Mgr. Timothy Dempsey, to finance his charities, yesterday issued this statement:

"The movement for a Christmas gift to Father Tim has assumed the proportions of a genuine community effort, in which all classes, creeds and nationalities are joining. Hundreds of subscriptions have been received, ranging from $1000 checks to $1 bills, and every gift is freighted with love and admiration for Father Tim.

"We know there are many hundreds of St. Louisans who admire and appreciate Father Tim's charity work, who have not as yet sent in their subscription to this testimonial fund. We hope to reach the goal of $100,000, and we believe that every admirer of Father Tim's work wants to be enrolled among those who are willing to pause long enough to cast a ray of sunshine into the darkened homes of the needy and to lighten the burdens of a fellow creature at this joyous Christmas time."

Many Persons Co-operating.

Numerous individuals and organizations are co-operating to reach as many persons as possible in the few days remaining before Christmas. Subscription blanks are being circulated in industrial plants, wholesale houses and other business places. Members of the Father Dempsey Christmas Fund Committee are giving time to call on friends for donations. Those who wish to subscribe are urged to mail checks to the committee at 1508 Federal Commerce Trust Bldg.

The committee is far short of its goal, but expects many large donations this week.

The board of directors of the Associated Retailers has indorsed the movement and recommended that its members donate. The Famous-Barr store has contributed $300, and Morton J. May, president of the store, $100.

Other gifts announced are: Festus J. Wade, $250; Pauly Jail Building, $200; Mrs. Catherine L. Saxe, the Rev. Daniel J. Lavery, George Wilson, C. H. McMillan, E. Lansing Ray, T. T. Anderson, Mrs. Samuel Fordyce, J. W. Fristoe, John F. Queeney, J. R. Cooke, A. H. Handlan, C. J. Kehoe and F. W. Lehmann, $100 each; Congressman John J. Cochran, $50.

Gifts of Labor Bodies.

Labor organizations continue to give. Waitresses' Union No. 249 gave $25, and more than 100 members made personal donations. Other givers are: Painters' Local No. 46, $100; Sprinkler Fitters and Helpers' Local No. 268, $50; Wellston Carpenters' Local No. 417, Carpenters' Local No. 73, Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers' Local No. 137, Paper Carriers' Local 5783, Sheet Metal Workers' Local No. 36, Bindery Women's Local No. 55, $25 each; Stove Mounters' Local No. 34, $44.25; Letter Carriers' Branch No. 343, $10, and St. Louis Postoffice Clerks' Union, $5.

BAD TASTE IN KIRKWOOD WATER DUE TO NEW PIPE

Natural Agencies, It Is Explained, Will Eliminate Objectionable Feature Soon.

The offensive taste which has made the Kirkwood water supply the subject of many complaints from citizens since Thursday night is bad enough, Kirkwood officials admit, but they believe it will disappear in a few days without serious results.

The source of the trouble is a new water main, a mile and a half in length, leading from the supply wells at Meramec Highlands to Kirkwood. This main, which is of cast iron pipe painted with an asphalt composition, was opened for service Thursday night. Since that time disgruntled residents have complained of a flavor "something like iodine" and many persons have attributed cases of digestive disorders to the water.

The Water Department officials explain that a disagreeable taste always prevails for a short time after a new main is put into use, but that no means exists for avoiding it and that it is eliminated by natural agencies in a short time anyway.

CITY SAVES $24,000 BY DOCK AGREEMENT

Obtains Use of Portion of Government Pier for Loading of Garbage.

The city has reached an agreement with the Inland Waterways Corporation, whereby St. Louis will have the use of a portion of the Rutger street dock of the Government River Service for the loading of the city's garbage upon barges.

The city will spend about $32,000 to equip the dock for handling refuse. Director of Streets and Sewers Brooks, who completed the negotiations in Washington last week, said yesterday that the sum required to make the Rutger street dock usable was $24,000 less than the budget allowance for reconstruction of the dock at the foot of Chouteau avenue, from which the city has been shipping its garbage and which now is overtaxed and inadequate.

Furthermore, he said, the use of the Rutger street dock will permit the city to utilize, for the first time, its five tractors and 22 trailers, purchased for garbage hauling but idle because of the unfitness of the Chouteau avenue dock.

It now will be possible, he asserted, for garbage wagons to assemble at various points and for their loads to be made up into garbage trains to be hauled to the dock by the tractors. He estimated that the saving would be about 50 cents a ton. The present cost is about $4.60 a ton.

Part of Paul Tietjens' New Grand Opera, "In the Tents of the Arabs," Will Be Given First Production.

A ST. LOUIS DAY program makes unusual the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra's "Pop" concert at the Odeon at 3:15 p. m. today and serves to present the music of six St. Louis composers while affording the opportunity for a debut with the orchestra to Mrs. Aline Howard, coloratura soprano, a St. Louis singer.

Rudolph Ganz, Ernest Kroeger, Frederick Fischer, Paul Tietjens, Ellis Levy and Mrs. Dorothy Gaynor Blake are the composers to be represented in the offering of St. Louis music. Mr. Ganz's "St. Louis Symphony" march will open the program. Mr. Kroeger will be heard when he conducts his own "Laila Rookh" suite. Mr. Levy will conduct two numbers from his own "Suite in Forest Park"——"At the Bear Pits" and "Rain Drops." Mrs. Blake's delightful "Irish Dance" will be played. Mr. Fischer will be conductor for his own Epilogue to "St Louis 100 Years Ago," the centennial play which celebrated Missouri's admission into statehood.

An outstanding feature of the program will be a first hearing of the "Scene Orientale" and "Intermezzo" from Paul Tietjens' new grand opera, "In the Tents of the Arabs," which the composer is developing from a libretto by Mary Aldis based upon Lord Dunsany's play of that name. The "Scene Orientale" portrays the departure of a band of Arab pilgrims for Mecca, with the confusion of the setting forth to the chant of an Arab song, the tune of which is authentically Arabian. The intermezzo is an atmospheric introduction to the second and last act of the opera.

TIETJENS, native St. Louisan, first won musical attention by his score for the comic opera, "The Wizard of Oz." He wrote the incidental music for Maude Adams' production of Barrie's "A Kiss for Cinderella," and has composed several orchestral works, some of which—notably a "Carnival" celebrating Armistice day and a group of things from a Children's Suite—have been played by the St. Louis orchestra. He will be present at the concert today.

Vaudevillians To Make Merry Christmas Eve

Performers Playing in St. Louis to Meet at Midnight — Some Old Christmas Days in the Varieties.

ARTISTS appearing on this week's bills at the Orpheum, St. Louis and Grand Opera House—the three local Orpheum Circuit theaters—will be entertained at a midnight Christmas eve supper at the Statler Hotel as guests of the Orpheum Circuit. As vaudeville entertainers are away from home on Christmas, officials of the circuit usually provide them with a repast on Christmas night; but as Christmas falls on Saturday this year and as the performers must do their traveling on Saturday nights, it was necessary to advance the party to Christmas eve.

There will be approximately 150 performers at the banquet, which will be embellished with music, song, dance and general clowning provided by the guests, as everyone will be called upon to do a specialty. The affair is being arranged by William A. Hartung, Everett Hays and James P. Brennan, managers of the Orpheum, St. Louis and Grand.

And American vaudeville, now celebrating its 100th anniversary, will observe the holidays with special programs of Christmas moment, mistletoe and holly decorations, souvenirs for the children, after-show Christmas trees, as well as the dances and banquets for the artists.

THESE methods are in striking contrast with some of the customs which prevailed in the old-time variety — from which vaudeville was evolved—when none too conscientious factors of that crude form of entertainment prospered mightily on what was called "gift shows." During the holiday period, especially, the "gift" scheme was worked for all it was worth—all classes of indoor entertainment utilizing it until the public "got wise" to it and the Federal Government finally defined it as a lottery and wiped it out.

One plan was to give each ticket buyer a sealed envelope containing a number printed on a white card. After the performances other numbers were drawn by the manager, or one of the performers, and announced from the stage. Persons in the audience who

Medieval Religious Pageant At Christ Church Cathedral

A MEDIEVAL pageant, reviving the custom of centuries ago in great cathedrals of Europe will be given this afternoon at 4:30 in Christ Church Cathedral, Thirteenth and Locust streets. "Why the Chimes Rang," an old legend, will be read and enacted by a cast of about 50 persons.

Kings, knights, court ladies, peasants and children will come down the long aisles of the Cathedral in costumes of olden times. Each will lay a gift before the altar in the hope of hearing the chimes ring in praise, but no sound will be heard until a little beggar boy, who has walked miles to the service, brings his cherished penny to the altar, and the Cathedral bells in the tower will peal for his sacrifice.

Lee Hildebrand will direct the pageant, and well known St. Louis artists are assisting in the arrangements. Special lighting effects will be introduced into the Cathedral for the pageant, which is free to the public.

BEHIND THE SCREENS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 18.

CAMERA work on Gloria Swanson's first United Artists picture, "Sunya," is finished, and last week in New York the star and her director, Albert Parker, began cutting and titling the cinema. In the cast are John Miltern, Raymond Hackett, Forrest Huff, Pauline Garon, Flobelle Fairbanks, a niece of Douglas Fairbanks; Andres de Segurola, John Boles, Ian Keith, Hugh Miller, Anders Randolf and Ivan Lebedeff. "Sunya" will make Miss Fairbanks' first important role in pictures. Miss Fairbanks is spending the Christmas holidays in St. Louis.

"Redheads Preferred" is announced as the next Tiffany production to be released following that of "Sin Cargo." In the cast are Raymond Hitchcock, Marjorie Daw, Theodore von Eltz, Cissy Fitzgerald, Vivien Oakland, Charles A. Post, Leon Holmes and Geraldine Leslie.

Mrs. Fannie Coogan, an opera star of yesteryear, who used to sing as Fannie Haye in the old Chestnut Street Opera House of Philadelphia, has been given a small bit in Robert Kane's new war picture, tentatively titled "The Song of the Dragon."

Adolphe Menjou's next starring vehicle for Paramount will be "The Man in Evening Clothes." He has been working in the French farce, "Blonde or Brunette," and will again find himself in the familiar French locale in "The Man in Evening Clothes," which was written by two of France's most popular authors, Andre Picard and Yves Mirande. Luther Reed, who just completed his second directional assignment for "New York," at the Long Island studio, will go to Hollywood to pilot Menjou in his next picture.

Herbert Brenon's picture, "Sorrell and Son," will not be made until next June, when Brenon will take a company of players to England and film the exteriors in the localities described by Warwick Deeping, the author. Brenon was to have started production next week with the intention of doing the exteriors in Bermuda. Under the revised plan another picture will be found for him to do in the meantime at the Long Island studio.

Mildred Davis, who in private life is Mrs. Harold Lloyd, is coming back to the screen. After a retirement of four years she will make her return bow before the camera in "Too Many Crooks," a farce comedy to be produced by Paramount. Production of "Too Many Crooks" is scheduled to begin Jan. 3. Miss Davis, who was a success as the leading woman for Harold Lloyd's comedies, until she retired, made her last appearance before the camera in Lloyd's "Safety Last." Following her marriage to Lloyd she quit the screen.

More Competition Coming Through the Air for the Motion Picture Theaters

New Twice-a-Month Radio Program to Start Off With Free Entertainment by Four Great Concert Artists.

FURTHER competition is in sight for the motion pictures and the "regular" theaters from the radio which already has cut heavily into attendance figures throughout the country. Starting New Year's night the Victor Talking Machine Co. will enter the entertainment field with twice a month concerts to be broadcast from the network of country wide stations, including KSD, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, which are linked up with WEAF of New York.

The mere fact that another set of entertainments will be offered through the air would not disturb the show houses unduly but if the future programs of the Victor concern keep up to the mark set for their opening bill the theaters will have something to think about. Here are the artists who will be heard New Year's night: John McCormack, tenor; Rosa Ponselle, soprano; Mischa Elman, violinist, and Alfred Cortot, pianist. With them will be heard the Victor Salon Orchestra, under the direction of Nathaniel Shilkret.

SINCE the announcement in these columns of the starting of a Little Motion Picture Theater movement in St. Louis the promoters of the enterprise have become overwhelmed with riches and it seems likely that the Little Theater might have to grow into a 5000-seat house in order to accommodate the persons who desire to join the organization and help uplift the screen.

It is understood that a definite location for the little playhouse was decided upon on Kingshighway near the Chase Hotel, but several people have come forward with offers to put up a building and the Cinema Guild is now trying to make up its mind as to the best thing to do. Arrangements have already been completed with the Guild in New York to secure the films shown there so that a steady flow of pictures is assured.

Among the extras in this picture which was directed by Sidney Olcott, are ex-nobleman — counts and barons, their status in the social world altered by the recent World War, and now seeking an opportunity to regain some of their lost brilliance in the glare of the kliegs.

One of these was Baron Jacques George Van der Kley Thoe Stolelaere, better known to Hollywood as Jacques D'Auray. His mother was the Countess Catine Georgine D'Auray de Brada, daughter of the Governor of Java.

He was born in Nice, France, and served in the military and intelligence service of France up to 1919. He was an attache of the French War Commission at Washington in 1917, still retaining his commission as Captain in the French army.

Christmas Week Seeks Plays Going and Coming in New York

By ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.

'TWAS the week before Christmas and therefore much scurrying of plays in and out of town, a great jockeying of the playbills in expectation of all the visitors who come to New York for Christmas and all the young folk home from school for the holidays.

Of the plays coming in, I must mention the dramatization of "The Constant Nymph," so much admired by many playgoers, but not by your correspondent. Also "The Dybbuk" from its home town—that beautiful and troubling tragedy of mystic Israel played here at last by the troupe of Habima Players who first gave it life five years ago.

At the Habima in Moscow only Hebrew is spoken and these players have wrought as well their own technique. In their school of acting every throb of the voice, every flight of the hands every fantastic gnome-like turn of the body serves to intensify the play to nightmare proportions, the very daubs of wild paint turning the faces into staring masks, the very play of the decorative hands suggesting a ballet of moths around a candle. At last you feel you are not seeing "The Dybbuk" at all, but just its shadows, the monstrous, lurching shadows that tread a dreadful rigadoon on a white and frightened wall.

THE departing play is that tasty melodrama of a Chinese bordello entitled "The Shanghai Gesture." Bag and baggage, it departs this evening for Chicago, leaving that doughty impresario, A. H. Woods, the richer by something more than a quarter of a million. After four months in Chicago it will spend the late spring and early summer in California and then start the long, slow trek back home. The original cast, headed by Florence Reed and boasting "16—Chinamen—16," are all involved in this hegira.

THE SHANGHAI GESTURE," is, like most successful plays, obtainable in book form and it is a playbook with a remarkable preface by John D. Williams. It is remarkable in several respects. Consider, for instance, this paragraph in re the world wanderings of Master Colton, who wrote "The Shanghai Gesture:"

> Thus was Eugene O'Neill shanghaied the best thing that ever happened to him. It was his father's desperate device to fetch to his senses a youngster, handsome, gifted, promising in every way, but too adventure-loving. "Gene" O'Neill was shanghaied, but out of this then seemingly appalling, devastating experience, years later came that terse, flawless English—that matchlessly succinct idiom of the sea and seamen—which is O'Neill's and the wonder-world of drama, irony, actualism, which is the glory of his plays—and that make them even greater on the printed page than when acted on the stage.

I do not suppose that there ever were 15 words with as much nonsense crowded into them as the final 15 words of that paragraph. But I quote it largely because this is, as far as I know, the first instance of any one coming right out and saying in cold type that the celebrated shanghaiing of young Eugene O'Neill was carried out at the behest of his fond but skeptical father, the late James O'Neill, that magnificent actor of the old school under whose board-treading feet the foremost American dramatist somehow grew up.

> It is at this very hour fascinatingly performed. Why? Because it is not acted. Salutations on our way to Miss Florence Reed—she who knows and gives the theater so unerringly the distinction between an actress and an artist; she who exemplifies so potently that nuance that lies between being and merely acting a part.

Now, frankly, I do not know just what all that means, but I did rather gather that Brother Wil-

Chaliapin to Sing For One Night

Will Appear at the Odeon New Year's Eve in a Single Performance of "The Barber of Seville."

FEODOR CHALIAPIN and his company of operatic stars will appear on New York's eve at the Odeon in one performance only of Rossini's "The Barber of Seville." This is Rossini's only comic opera and the music is melodious and sparkling. This is Chaliapin's first essay of a comic role.

Chaliapin plays the part of Don Basilio, a music teacher who aids Don Bartolo, his employer, in attempting to fgrustrate the amorous Count Almaviva in his pursuit of Rosina, Don Bartolo's beautiful ward.

Elvira de Hidalgo, who will sing the role of Rosina, created something of a furore in the same role at her Metropolitan Opera deb it two years ago. Giacoma Luchinui, who will sing the part of Figaro, has sung in the leading opera companies of Russia and Italy, and although a new-comer to this country has received praise for his presentation of the difficult part of the "Barber." Joseph Bobrovich, a young Russian tenor will be entrusted with the role of Count Almaviva, the redoubtable and ardent lover of Rosina.

ard, chief engineer of the Commonwealth Steel Co. For this first appearance with the orchestra she will sing the "Jewel Song" from "Faust" and later a group of songs with piano, of which Mr. Ganz's "Angels Are Stooping" will be one. The St. Louis conductor chose her to sing last year at a musicale given by himself and Mrs. Ganz to the Symphony board and Josef Hofmann, at which time, with Mr. Ganz as her accompanist, she sang the famous "Queen of Night" aria from Mozart's "Magic Flute" in the original key—a feat of sensational character in so much as Mozart wrote the aria for a favored singer whose voice attained to high F in alt—that is the F above high C. She was also a soloist for the annual musicale of the St. Louis Women's Club last spring. Mrs. Howard has received all her training in St. Louis.

The program in detail is:

tire receipts of the untaxed Municipal Opera and the millions spent for cheap seats at the movies and you have a pretty considerable sum.

New York of course topped the list with taxes of $7,482,981. Illinois came next with $2,478,509. California, third, with $1,509,993. Pennsylvania, fourth, with $1,791,579. Massachusets, fifth, with $1,289,004. Ohio, sixth, with $1,091,587. Michigan, seventh, with $990,271. New Jersey, eighth, with $665,647, and then Missouri, with its $659,606.

Trailing the list of theater taxpayers are those of New Mexico where only $5340 was collected. Alaska contributed but $2350, and Hawaii, $31,076.

THE seventh annual edition of the "Greenwich Village Follies" invades the Shubert-Rialto Theater, starting with a Christmas night performance. This newest edition of the Follies was on display at the Chanin and Shubert theaters in New York all of last season, and comes here from its sojourn at the Apollo Theater, Chicago.

The principals involved in the revue's maneuvers include Tom Howard, a serious, moody, somber-visaged comedian; Irene Delroy; Bailey and Barnum, who have been seen here in the picture houses; Joe Penner, a jester from the burlesque shows; Evelyn Hoey, an expert stepper who is said to be a convincing reason for the present-day preference for blondes; Vlasta Maslova, Russian dancer; Sam Hearn; Claire Devine, prima donna; Kendall Cappa a St. Louis dancer; Arnold Gluck, Joe Lyons, Claire Hooper, Ruth Conley, Evelyn Page, Bayard Rauth, Douglas Carter, Walter Fairmount, and the Sixteen American Rockets, who also were seen here for several months at the Missouri Theater.

The music and lyrics are by Owen Murphy, the dances have been arranged by Russell Markert. The principal song hits that punctuate the proceedings are "Whistle Away Your Blues" and "Tinkle-Tot."

INTEREST in the highly successful musical show, "The Cocoanuts," which comes to the American Theater next Sunday night, centers in the stars, "The Four Marx Brothers about whom St. Louis has heard much but seen little." The four boys, born in New York and typical New York entertainers, are sons of a Hungarian father and a German mother (who is the sister of Shean of the celebrated team of Gallagher and Shean), they were all born to the theater although they did not take to it until midyouth.

The parents aimed to have them become dry goods magnates. A fifth brother—Gummo—did go into business, although he served his apprenticeship back of the footlights. Zeppo (Herbert) stepped into the shoes of Gummo (Milton). With Harpo (Arthur), Groucho (Julius) and Chico (Leonard) the team now flourishes at its zenith of popularity.

Eafly parental attempts to put the boys into trade were dismally ineffective. Harpo of the red wig and Chico of the Italian makeup were dead liknesses in those days. Chico, unlessoned, had a natural aptitude for the piano. He taught Harpo two tunes, two only. But they traded on this slim equipment and their dollar-bill resemblance.

Those were the days of the nickelodeons. Chico, who could play well, would apply for a job at $5 a week and get it. He'd work a day, then Harpo would walk in the next morning and try his hand. Always he was mistaken for Chico, who got a job elsewhere.

The Marx parents, discouraged, took the plunge. The four brothers appeared with female assistance as "The Six Musical Mascots." They were terribly musical. Groucho had been a boy soprano in an Episcopal Church until he punctured the organ bellows with an alto's hairpin.

The act made the small-time route and they switched names ironically to "The Four Nightingales," being the only non-vocal glee singers then having the nerve to collect. At Abilena, Tex., one night they escaped after a particularly painful performance, only to be thrown off the train five miles from Brownsville.

They left their scenery behind, and all the local theater could give them as back drop was a schoolroom layout. So Harpo played Patsy Brannigan in a borrowed red wig. Thus started their first rough-neck act.

When the curtain descended, they hurried, amid uproar, to their dressing room. The stage manager came pounding on the door. Fearfully they slid out of make-up and excitedly roared:

But the manager bawled: "Curtain call. Come back. You're a hit!"

WHICH marks the transformation of the Marx Brothers into the roughneck quartet of comics. They played big-time vaudeville for ten years, running from $1000 a week to $2500 for their act. Habited as immigrants, they did raw stuff.

A wrecked room in vaudeville is always a riot. The Marx Brothers proceeded to wreck rooms, their eyes always intent on Mr. Ziegfeld. They waned to make the Follies.

The chance never came until they had found a better way. With their own show, "I'll Say She Is," they stormed Chicago, where they lived in 1923, playing for six solid months to jammed houses. Descending on New York, they took the tune-tried Casino and shook its ribs for 48 weeks.

Their last appearance in St. Louis was in "I'll Say She Is."

Then the czars of box-office commerce made their bids. But the Marx Brothers had learned things. No salaries, however colossal, for them. They turned down all offers until a deal could be made for a share in a show. Berlin did the music, George Kaufman the book, and "The Cocoanuts" appeared. The theater was hired for a year, which is only one of two things in the show business—justified confidence or suicide.

It's easy to explain this success. The Marx Brothers are clean and crude—for there's money in the old slapstick.

THE Orpheum, this week, offers a six-act bill, with four of the acts splitting headline position. Bert Lytell, who week before last was at the Orpheum in person, will be featured on the screen in "Obey the Law," a crook melodrama, supported by Hedda Hopper and Eugenie Gilbert. The four attractions on the vaudeville program are: "The Orpheum Circuit Revue," a song and dance presentation, and the first such production to which the Orpheum Circuit has lent its name; Roy Cummings, who was at the Orpheum earlier this season, returns with his knockabout act, assisted by Irene Shaw; Val and Ernie Stanton, the latter the ergt-while big league ballplayer, who will offer a routine of song and chatter, and "Much Ado About Nothing," an afterpiece, with all the artists on the bill participating.

AT the Empress this week the drama presented by the National Players will be Clyde Fitch's "The Woman in the Case," which was first produced in this country in 1905 and a few months later in London, having in both cities a long and successful run. It is a one-woman play, in essence, and in the present cast the part of Margaret Rolfe falls to the interpretation of Leona Powers. The revival of this drama by General Director Woodward is designed to furnish a relief for the long list of comedies and farces which have been given at the Empress.

liams thought Miss Reed was pretty darned good. And what, you ask me, is so remarkable, then, about that? Well, it struck me forcibly because of my own knowledge that at that (and, I imagine, this) writing, Mr. Williams had not yet seen Miss Reed's performance.

THE preface may even become historical because of Mr. Williams' dark threats to have the law on the publishers for not paying him adequate compensation. All of us who, on the average of once a week, are asked thus to write prefaces, would welcome a cause celebre on the subject. For some reason there is a tradition that an author who would not consider writing a magazine article for anything less than a cool $2.50 will be glad to dash off a preface for 10 cents. The publishers in this country are still shuddering because, when asked to write a preperb tife foreword for Thomas Beer's superb life of Stephen Crane, the late Joseph Conrad so far forgot himself as to ask (and get) a thousand dollars for it. New Grub Street has never been quite the same since.

MORE COMPETITION FOR MOVIE HOUSES

ller English sequences of the Barthelmess story,, but he dates his beginnings to the old Mutoscope days, and to him Sidney Olcott owes his start in the movies, having obtained his first job from Harrington.

But the irony of life in the movies made Harrington the employe and Olcott the employer in this film.

They may be found by the dozen in any picture which depicts military life.

In "The Lady in Ermine," starring Corinne Griffith, are two Russian Generals of the Czar's staff. Both were forced to flee the country when the red revolt broke loose. Michael Pieschkoff escaped to China and worked his way to San Francisco, where he was a helper in a garage. Alexander Ikonnikoff earned his living as a car washer on a railroad and later as a dishwasher before going to Hollywood.

In "The Silent Lover," starring Milton Sills, were three former members of the French Foreign Legion, a former British Sergeant-Major who says he once shared a bungalow in India with Rudyard Kipling, and a Mexican who was an officer in Pancho Villa's army.

TWELVE years ago William Beaudine packed his other suit and decided to seek fame and fortune in California. He returned to New York recently with quite a bit of each while getting ready to film Thomas Meighan's "The Canadian," which is at the Missouri this week.

When Beaudine went away, two-reelers and considerable worry about the price of a next meal were in order for many persons now famous in the motion picture world. The word, "studio," was an euphonious title for any structure where a motion picture could be made.

Most of Beaudine's picture experience up to the time of his departure had been at the old Biograph plant in New York on Fourteenth street. That was D. W. Griffith's headquarters, and Beaudine had vague hopes of some day following in "D. W.'s" footsteps.

Bill needed a job and asked an uncle, a property man at the Biograph studio, if he'd locate something for him. Bill was soon installed as assistant to Robert Harron, the prop boy, and anything that Harron didn't do, Bill did.

Each morning, Griffith would send them over to a restaurant for sliced peaches, coffee and toast, which he'd eat in the sub-basement of the studio. As soon as "D. W." had reached the top stair, Bill and Harron would dive for what was left. In this way, they saved the price of many a breakfast.

By 1914, Beaudine had reached the position of assistant director and begun to look around for new fields to conquer. California was the lure of most men and women in the picture business at that time.

Since then, he has made 250 pictures. Immediately preceding Meighan's "The Canadian," Beaudine directed "Hold That Lion" for Douglas MacLean and "Sparrows" for Mary Pickford.

Two Jewish Pictures Coming To the Odeon

TWO motion pictures of Jewish life will be shown in a double bill at the Odeon next Saturday. The first is the "Wandering Jew," a visualization of Eugene Sue's novel, "Le Juif Errant." Max Reinhardt, greatest of the European regiseurs, had charge of the making of the "Wandering Jew," with the assistance of his Viennese Art Theater staff. The chief roles are in the hands of Rudolph and Joseph Schildkraut, father and son, the best known impersonators of Jewish characters on the American stage.

The wanderings and persecution of the Jews after their dispersion when Vespasian destroyed Jerusalem, first in Egypt and afterwards in Spain, where they suffered under the inquisition, and finaly in Russia, where the pogroms made life and property uncertain possessions are the matter of the picture.

On the same bill with the "Wandering Jew" is another picture, "The Eternal Struggle," featuring the Moscow Art Theater players under the direction of Kronstantin Slavis-Slavsky.

held the duplicate numbers were awarded whatever present might be described on the slip as read out by the announcer. Chromos, cheap walking sticks, cotton umbrellas and plaster of paris statuettes were among the gifts so distributed, and not many of them at that, but the passion of "taking a chance" incipient gambling—was rife in those days and the "gift shows" flourished, especially during the holidays.

One smart Yankee showman of those days outstripped all rivals with his lavish gift shows. This was T. J. Allyne, who, according to M. B. Leavitt's book, "Fifty Years in Theatrical Management," would give away sets of furniture, tons of coal, cords of wood, pianos, clothing, horses, cows and, on one occasion, a live bear. These were the "capital prizes," and were usually exhibited in the lobby or on the sidewalk near the theater to whet the cupidity of passersby and possible customers. Sometimes the winner, having neither the facilities nor the desire to lead away a cow or a horse, or to cart off a load of wood or coal, would sell his prize for the proverbial song and, usually, a representative of the shrewd showman bid in the prize for future use in the show's lottery system.

IT is recorded that this same Allyne once advertised to present anyone with a "fine steel engraving" of George Washington upon receipt of $1. The portrait of the Father of Our Country was described as the authentic and official one adopted and approved by the United States Government. Hundreds of $1 remittances poured into the office of the variety theater where Allyne was operating, and he made good on his promise by sending to each customer a 2-cent stamp bearing the engraved likeness of George Washington. But somehow Uncle Sam didn't like the scheme, and the authorities advised Allyne to stop the swindle or suffer the consequences. But as the stamps were genuine, the showman was able to prove that he had lived up to his promise.

Some of those old "gift shows" might have been appreciably bettered if the money spent even on the tawdry prizes had been paid to better artists and smarter acts. At any rate, the devious practice was abandoned when vaudeville superseded the old barum-scarum days of variety. The lottery, the wheel of fortune, the fish pond, the grab bag and other catch-penny devices—all at one time appanages of the circus, the minstrel, the pantomime and the variety shows, were not adopted in vaudeville as we know it.

.·. Facing the Music.

THREE soloists will be presented in the program which Don Albert musical director of Loew's State, has arranged for the fifth of the Sunday concerts which that theater's orchestra of 65 will present today at 1:30 o'clock. Dornay is a Covent Garden Opera Company tenor from London. Miss Sorenson is a lyric soprano; Miss Reynolds, a coloratura soprano. The two young women are St. Louisans. Loew's concerts are in addition to the theater's usual program. The program which Albert has compiled for today includes:

Odali Carena, the Russian dramatic soprano prima donna, who introduced Stravinsky's "Rite" at the Grand Opera in Paris, and sings in 10 languages, will make her first appearance in St. Louis next week at the Orpheum. She is making her debut in vaudeville, formerly was prima donna of the Petrograd Grand Opera Co., and her favorite numbers are the compositions of Mussorgsky, Tschaikowsky and Rimsky-Korsakoff.

Friday night, Dec. 24, at Temple Israel, William John Hall, organist and director of music, will present a new Jewish Ritual service. It will be rendered by the Temple Israel Quartet, consisting of Mrs. D. H. Cleland, soprano; Miss Olga Hambuchen Maryard, contralto; Clarence Bloomhuf, tenor, and John Rohan, bass. The quartet will also sing the Largo from the New World Symphony by Dvorak, and an anthem, "Silent Night, Holy Night." Mr. Hall's organ solos will consist of selections from the Pathetic Symphony of Tschaikowsky, an Aria by Bach, and Lamentation by Mossourgsky.

Adela Verne, the pianist and protege of Paderewski, who recently appeared at the Shubert-Rialto theater, will return to St. Louis next week, as one of the featured attractions at the St. Louis Theater. While classical music ordinarily does not take as well with the usual run of vaudeville patrons, who seem to prefer the lighter variety, Miss Verne "stopped the show" at every performance at the Orpheum.

The Morning Choral Club will repeat "The Laughing Pierrot" or the Weeping Pierrot," which was given last month at the Municipal Day program, on March 14. It will be in the nature of a benefit for the club's scholarship fund, but will also be included in the season membership tickets for any who wish to subscribe now.

The Christmas vespers of the club will be at St. John's Church Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 28, when Mme. Graziella Pampari, harpist, and the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra as soloist. A program of music appropriate to the season will be given under the direction of Charles Galloway.

Two Odeon concerts on Feb. 4 and April 19, with assisting artists, make up the year's program. Membership may be secured from Mrs. E. Anson More, 4764 Westminster place.

his leading woman in the comedy star's next picture, "Let It Rain." Miss Nixon's last appearance was in Raymond Griffith's comedy, "Hand Up."

Marie Prevost is surrounded by four directors in making "Getting Gertie's Garter." E. Mason Hopper is directing this adaptation of the stage farce, while in the cast are Charles Ray, Harry Myers and Del Henderson, all three of whom have directed a number of successful pictures. Other players in the cast are William Orlamond, Sally Rand, Fritzi Ridgeway, Franklin Pangborn and Lila Leslie.

The cast of "No Control," a circus story which Scott Sidney is directing, has been augmented by three kangaroos, a trick mule, 12 parrots, two pumas, two baboons, three lions and six dogs. Harrison Ford and Phyllis Haver have the featured roles in this screen version of Frank Conden's story, with Jack Duffy, Tom Wilson, E. J. Ratcliffe and Toby Claude in other roles.

Lois Weber, only woman director of films, has been signed to direct the Duncan sisters, Vivian Rosetta, in the screen version of "Topsy and Eva," their stage success. The Duncan sisters will continue in vaudeville on the coast for several weeks while the Pickford-Fairbanks studio is being enlarged.

Chester Conklin has been signed an important role in Bebe Daniels' next picture, "The Boy in a Taxi," which will be directed by Clarence Badger.

Victor Heerman, who will direct Ed Wynn in his first screen comedy for Paramount, has arrived in New York from California. The director has joined Wynn and Hobart, scenarist, in making preparations for the start of filming the latter part of December on the Paramount Long Island studio.

Elinor Glyn, whose story, "It," has just been produced with Clara Bow starring, is now writing the original story for Betty Bronson. The title of the new Bronson vehicle will be "Miss Ritzy," a story of modern youth. Production on Betty's picture is scheduled to begin soon.

CITY IN GERMANY DRY 6 DAYS

Court Orders Saloons Closed During Recent Trial.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 18.—The first town in modern Germany to experience the sensation of being dry does not like prohibition. Before the trial at Hesselfelde of 14 members of the republican order, Reichsbanner for participation in a shooting affray, the court invoked a dead letter ordinance passed in 1850, which stipulated that in case of threatened public disturbance the saloons might be closed.

Crowds poured into the town for the trial. The court thereupon prohibited the sale of all liquor. The lid remained clamped down for the six days that the trial lasted. The nearest approach to a disturbance was caused at a protest meeting against the dry order at which speakers shouted, "If this is prohibition, he don't want it."

GUNDLACH LETTERS OF NOTED TO BE SOLD

Autographs of Ferdinand, Isabella, Shaw, Lincoln and Louisiana Purchase Papers Included.

Original documents bearing on the purchase of the Louisiana territory, and letters of historical notables, from Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain down to George Bernard Shaw, are included in the late John H. Gundlach's collection of autograph letters and documents, which is to be sold in New York Jan. 5 and 6.

The sale is announced to take place at the gallery of the American Art Association Inc., 30 East Forty-seventh street, the afternoon of Jan. 5 and the evening of Jan. 6, following an exhibition which begins New Year's day. Mr. Gundlach, noted as a worker for civic advancement, acquired the letters and documents through a long period of collecting.

The Louisiana Purchase collection is a series of 32 autograph letters signed by Robert Livingston, American Ambassador to France, dated from Dec. 30, 1801, to May 11, 1803. Two of the letters were signed also by James Monroe. The letters were addressed to Rufus King, American Minister to England, and tend to give Livingston a very important part in the acquisition of Louisiana.

The document signed by Ferdinand and Isabella, royal patrons of Columbus, is dated July 15, 1494. A group of revolutionary relics includes letters of Gen. Greene, Marquis de Lafayette, Rochambeau, Arthur Lee and Robert Morris. Robert Fulton's "Notes on the Submarine Vessel," written in 1804, is a later item.

Letters of the Presidents include the signatures of Washington and his first five successors, and of Lincoln, Grant and Wilson. Civil War letters are signed by Gen. Sherman, Gen. Robert E. Lee and Jefferson Davis.

Other famous names which appear attached to letters in the collection are Sam Houston, Brigham Young, Edgar Allen Poe, Mark Twain, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Eugene Field, Robert Burns, Thomas and Jane Welch Carlyle, Thomas Paine, Emma Lady Hamilton, Dr. Samuel Johnson, Beethoven, Mozart, Grieg, Wagner, Heine and Schiller.

George Bernard Shaw is represented by a letter in which he spurns an inadequate remuneration, a typewritten manuscript on Dean Inge's "Outspoken Essays," and a typewritten and signed letter upon the outcome of the Great War. In this letter, Shaw says that Clemenceau, Poincare, Lloyd George, Marshal Foch and President Wilson should have been transported to a remote island as soon as the armistice was declared.

NEW 'BUTTERFLY' IN HAMBURG

BERLIN, Dec. 18.—Dusolina Giannini, New York prima donna, has given critics of Hamburg, where she starred for the first time in various operatic roles, something to think about by her conception of the title role in Puccini's "Madame Butterfly." The critics frankly admit that thus far they thought of Butterfly as a rather harmless, pretty Oriental girl who deserved pity but did not elicit a particularly strong appeal. Giannini, the critics say, transformed the opera into a gripping accusation against so-called civilization, and especially against false standards of honor adopted by men.

ROYAL FAMILY'S PRESENTS WILL HANG BESIDE POOR'S

Queen Mary Will Personally Supervise Decorations on British Tree This Christmas.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—Every member of the Royal family will be at Sandringham House for Christmas this year, except the Duke of Connaught, who is on the Riviera.

With many young friends of the Princes invited, it will be like one of the prewar Christmas parties, with the usual huge Christmas tree in the center of the big ballroom. The tree will contain personal presents for the family as well as many gifts destined for less fortunate people in the neighborhood, who will receive them during Christmas week.

Queen Mary, as always, is taking personal interest in the tree, which is cut from the royal estate, and will supervise the decorations and tying on of all the presents.

The dancing will be enlivened by the presence of Prince George, who has just returned from far Eastern naval service. He has the reputation of being the merriest of the four boys of the Kings' household and nearly as fond of dancing as the Prince of Wales.

NEGRO ENTERTAINERS STILL ARE ALL THE RAGE IN PARIS

One Folies Bergere Star Opens Her Own Night Club and Smart Set Is Clientele.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—The French craze for shows with Negro entertainers is unabated. Negro singing is still considered very chic in cabarets and Negro jazz bands from America are more in demand than ever. Cartoonists depicting the Charleston and the Black Bottom dances always use a Negro as the principal dancer, although his partner is more than likely Caucasian.

At the Folies Bergere, Josephine Baker, the Negro dancer, continues the brightest of all the stars. The Folies recently obtained an extension of her contract that will keep her at that theater until the spring of 1928. Meanwhile she has opened a night club of her own, where the clinetele so far is as smart as any to be found in Paris. She hired a Negro mammy and put her in the kitchen to teach the cosmopolitan patronage how batter cakes and syrup are served on the banks of the Mississippi.

Under his direction, a Yiddish performance called "Evil Man," will be given at the Shubert-Rialto Theater tonight. The proceeds of this performance will go to the treasury of the Blind Association.

Among the actors who will present this play, who are making a special trip from New York for the performance, are Ida Goldstein, Rosetta Yagar, Tessie Morowitz, Jacob Bernberg, Max Schwartz, Isadore Hyman and Max Tanenbaum.

Frank Harris' Book Withdrawn.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—A satisfactory understanding has been reached between Frank Harris and the French Government which a few weeks ago threatened him with a criminal suit for "outraging public morals." This was when the second volume of "My Life and Loves" was sold in Nice. The book has now been withdrawn from sale in France and all prosecution has been dropped. The passages to which objection was made, it is said, dealt with private conversations with notable Englishmen, living and dead.

Local Singers Will Appear With the Eucharistic Film

One of the outstanding features of the Eucharistic Congress, the official screen version of which is being brought to St. Louis for a limited engagement at the Odeon, starting Jan. 2, under the patronage of a large group of Catholic women, is the motion picture of a trained choir of 62,000 voices — the largest group of trained choristers ever to be assembled. The St. Louis Knights of Columbus Choral Club will intone the scenes in which the gigantic choir appears at the St. Louis showing. Rehearsals for the 62,000-voice chorus set a new fashion in musical instruction and training. The plan followed was first to train the 360 instructors in music in the schools. These were thoroughly drilled in the chant of the mass to be sung, after which each of the nuns, in turn, trained a group of the little ones.

The mass sung by the children was the famous twenty-century classic, the Mass of the Angels, a simple melody of the Georgian chant which is believed to have been written by an Irish monk, almost a thousand years ago.

When the children had learned the simple melody, groups of two, three and four thousand from several schools were assembled in theaters, motion picture houses, etc., with a view to training them to sing in unison. After several rehearsals in this way, groups of as many as 30,000 were called together in the stands of the "Cubs" and "White Sox" baseball parks where a number of rehearsals were held.

WHISKY BOAT LOST 50 YEARS BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN FOUND

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OMAHA, Dec. 18.—The famous "whisky boat" which went down in the Missouri River above Omaha more than 60 years ago, carrying down with it a complete cargo of first-class whisky, and for which old river men have been searching for half a century, is believed to have been located 15 miles north of Omaha on the Iowa side of the stream. Fifteen feet of the prow of an old steamer is protruding from the river bank where it was exposed by the wash of the heavy fall rains. The remainder of the old boat is buried under 10 feet of sand, gravel and dirt with some good-sized cottonwood and willow trees growing above the old hull.

The discovery of the old prow was made by Leo Elkrich, farmer, and the old hull is on Eckrisch's farm. For that reason Elkrich claims the whole thing, wreck, whisky and all.

But George West of Missouri Valley, Ia., 10 miles up the river, is a son of the owner of the "whisky boat," and says that if there is any whisky left, it belong to him and his brothers.

A. C. Anderson, prohibition director for this district, says the whisky belongs to the finder "if he can get away with it."

The "whisky boat" belonged to the late George S. West, river man, of Missouri Valley. It was en route from St. Louis to Fort Benton, Mont. It was loaded with whisky out of St. Louis late in the summer of 1863 and struck an extremely low-water stage north of St. Joseph, Mo. Above Omaha it struck on a sandbar and was so badly damaged that is was abandoned. There were no means of salvaging the cargo and whisky wasn't worth very much in those days, anyway.

ARMY ORDNANCE ASSOCIATION IS ORGANIZING ST. LOUIS POST

The St. Louis Post of the Army Ordnance Association is being organized by a committee on membership, comprising M. E. Singleton, G. L. L. Davis, Lieutenant-Colonel E. D. Campbell, Capt. W. C. Bliss and Capt. C. T. Burgess.

The local charter will be delivered at the post's inaugural meeting, at Hotel Coronado, Jan. 18, by Benedict Crowell, Assistant Secretary of War in the Wilson Cabinet, who is president of the Army Ordnance Association. He will speak on industrial preparedness. Other speakers will be Col. Frank A. Scott of Cleveland, a director of the association, and Gen. C. L'H. Ruggles of Washington, Assistant Chief of Ordnance.

It is expected Harry Scullin, president of the Scullin Steel Co., will be chosen first president of the local. Seventy applications for membership have been received.

To Discuss Christmas Carols.

"Christmas carols—Dickens' and Others" will be discussed by Percival Chubb before the Ethical Society, 3643 Washington boulevard, at 11 a. m. today. The program also includes carol singing and exhibition of toys made in the Ethical Toy Shop for distribution among children in city institutions. A "good cheer" party will be held Wednesday. On Christmas eve red-cloaked carollers will sing in Vandeventer place.

MUNICIPAL OPERA SCHOOL OPEN JAN. 4

Enrollment Opens Tomorrow and Will Close Dec. 31.

Applicants for positions in the Municipal Opera chorus for the 1927 season in Forest Park must register at the offices of the Municipal Theater Association, 1882 Arcade Building, between tomorrow and Friday, Dec. 31. The chorus training school will open Tuesday, Jan. 4, and each applicant must pass a satisfactory examination before gaining admission.

Positions in next summer's chorus, it was announced yesterday, will be limited strictly to singers who complete the training course. Perfect attendance at the school, vocal and dancing ability and stage appearance will all be considered when the 100 chorus members are selected before rehearsals begin in May.

Training classes will be held five nights a week, with the work so arranged that each student will have to attend but three of the five sessions. One night will be devoted to vocal work for female voices, another to male voices, with each section having a separate night for general stage instruction. On the fifth night the entire school will assemble for special instruction.

Effort will be made in the school to lay the groundwork for each opera considered for the summer program, in order that the rehearsals of the individual operas will be easier when that time arrives.

The training school will be under the supervision of David E. Russell, manager of the theater association, Charles Sinclair, general stage director and Louis Kroll, musical director.

PRIZE LIST BEING ARRANGED FOR NEXT ANNUAL BENCH SHOW

Mississippi Valley Kennel Club to Hold Competition at Coliseum in April.

The annual bench show of the Mississippi Valley Kennel Club will be held at the Coliseum, April 1, 2, and 3. The prize list is now being arranged by a committee headed by George P. Burleigh. Specialty shows will be conducted by the St. Louis Collie Club and St. Louis Beagle Club.

The Mississippi Valley Kennel Club is an organization of dog fanciers of St. Louis and vicinity. Gerald B. O'Reilly is president. Vice presidents are August A. Busch Jr., Louis M. Hall, Senator Harry B. Hawes, J. E. Holman Jr., Col. J. G. Miller, Percy J. Orthwein, Joseph Pulitzer, S. G. Wilson Jr. and A. E. Winkelmeyer. S. L. Paulter is secretary.

PIGEON OF VERDUN DIES

Bird That Bore Message Through Barrage Was Government Pensioner.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—One of the feathered heroes of the great war, a carrier pigeon that helped save Verdun, has just died of old age. The bird had a wound stripe on its leg band and was one of the Government's pensioners, having received a home and a larder from a grateful nation. Through a barrage of shrapnel the pigeon in 1916 carried a message that kept Froide Terre Hill from capture. In an order of the day the army cited the pigeon for "having mantained communication with the front line when all human means failed." In its flight through the barrage the pigeon was hit by a shell splinter that carried away its claws.

The pigeon will be mounted and placed in the Verdun War Museum.

SHORTAGE OF MILK IN FRANCE

Dry Summer Reduced Hay and Other Food Crops for Cows.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—There are no contented cows in France this winter. In consequence of the barnyard discontent, the entire country has had to go on short milk rations.

The dry summer reduced the hay crop to half its normal and shriveled up most of the beet roots, which also form part of the bovine diet in the winter time. The peasants cannot afford to buy imported cottonseed oil cake for their cattle, so the cattle have to go hungry. The less they eat the less milk they produce. Hence the national milk shortage. Rationing was generally adopted with the advent of autumn. The wholesalers rationed the retailers, and the retailers rationed their customers. Half a pint a day is about as much milk as the retailer will dole out to anyone person.

French Soldiers to Go to School.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—Illiterate conscripts of the French army soon will be under regular courses of instruction in the three R's. Hitherto regular officers, when they had time, tried to give their men something of the fundamentals, but the teaching was haphazard and all too many of the peasant poilus went home at the expiration of their 18 months' service just as unlettered as when they first donned the horizon blue. This is all to be changed. Civilian instructors twice a week will hold classes which all illiterate conscripts will be required to attend.

"Evil Men" at Shubert Tonight.

A performance of the play, "Evil Men," will be given this evening at the Shubert-Rialto Theater by a New York stock company for the benefit of the New York home of the Jewish Association for the Blind. Shaftel Needleman, executive director of the association, will make a brief talk on its needs.

EUROPEAN TRADE CONFERENCE

Local Firms Invited to Meet Commissioner J. T. Scott.

Local business men having European trade interests are invite dto confer with Trade Commissioner James T. Scott, who will be at the local Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, 1209 Liberty Central Building, tomorrow.

Scott, who served as assistant to the chief of staff, United States Army, overseas, as chief of the Lithuanian Relief Mission, and as an executive of the United States Shipping Board in England and Germany before becoming Trade Commissioner at Hamburg, Germany, is qualified to explain European economic and commercial conditions.

15,000,000 ACRES OF MISSOURI LAND IDLE

Forester Says Use Must Be Found for Wooded Areas Now Profitless.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Dec. 18.—There are 15 or 16 million acres of land in Missouri that are making no contribution to the prosperity of the State, according to Frederick Dunlap, State forester, who lives in Columbia.

"Thirty-five per cent of the State land is serving no useful purpose," he says. "It is a big problem and an urgent one to find a use for this land so that it may not only pay for its way, but make money for its owners and build up its neighborhood."

Dunlap thus refers to the vast wooded areas in Missouri, which total 40 per cent of the area of the State.

"The settlers found this land covered with oak, pine and many other kinds of timber," says Dunlap, "and have used it up until today very little of this vast area is stocked with any valuable growth of timber fit for sawing into lumber. Nearly everywhere merchantable trees have been culled, and the worthless and defective trees left standing.

"Not more than 2,000,000 acres of this land will ever be cleared and used for the growing of cultivated crops. The trend of farming is toward more careful cultivation of fewer acres, and in all but a few counties of Missouri less land is being farmed today than five years ago."

Dunlap says that a very large part of the idle wooded land lies in the Ozark region, where it is a heavy drag on development and growth. He points out also that since many wooded counties have made considerable progress in spite of the handicap of this idle land, this progress is but a fraction of the growth that is possible if the handicap can be turned into some sort of an asset. And he says this can be done.

"Outside the Ozarks our woodlands are pretty generally distributed over the State as timber patches on farms," he points out. "The farmer's timber patch is going to be called upon to pay its own way in the future much more generally than it has in the past few years.

"Few persons realize how much timber it is possible to grow on an acre of land each year because the natural growth is so largely lost on defective trees. This prevalent low production is due to the rotting of the inside of the trees as fast as they grow on the outside, thus leaving nothing but acres of hollow trees—worthless except for use as fuel."

According to Dunlap, growth measurements in Europe and in the United States indicate that with careful management our woodlands will produce up to 15 ties per acre each year, and that a growth of 10 ties each year can be done at no great trouble or expense.

"In order to get the benefit of all the growth that our woodlands can give us, we must first protect them from fires and excessive grazing, because these two are responsible for most of the defective trees in our woods.

"Fire is also an agent of destruction and a source of permanent injury to growing timber. Fire destroys young growth, burning it to the ground, and although it usually sprouts again, repeated fires keep it from getting ahead. It is through fire scars on older timber that fungus disease are able to enter the heart wood and cause rot which soon hollows out the tree and makes it worthless."

Dunlap also explains that cattle injure young growth by browsing and trampling the soil, making the ground hard and impossible for sufficient air and oxygen to enter to reach the roots. He says that defective trees must be removed, and sound trees planted to take their place, and that a technical forester should handle the stand of growing timber.

"The immediate need in Missouri," says Dunlap, "is for a public sentiment that will not tolerate fires in the woods, and that will regard our timber resources as a valuable asset, to be cared for and increased into a solid foundation of prosperity."

WINSTON CHURCHILL INVITES CHARWOMEN TO LUNCHEON

British Chancellor Enjoys Reputation of Liking Things Out of Ordinary.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—Winston Churchill as a boy at Harrow always was getting into scrapes. Even today the Chancellor of the Exchequer is fond of anything out of the ordinary.

Churchill is one of the youngest of British statesmen, having just celebrated his fifty-second birthday, but his colleagues contend that he will still enjoy a joke if he lives to be 100.

Churchill's latest "scrape" relates to a lot of elderly women whom he met in the hallway leading to his office. All carried little bags. Wondering what delegation was calling upon him so early, Churchill's inquiry elicited the fact that the crowd was made up of charwomen.

They did not want to see the Chancellor of the Exchequer at all, but were waiting for their pay. Churchill decided to get better acquainted with them. As the Christmas spirit was in the offing, the flat went worth that all these "nice, old ladies," were to come into the Chancellor's office at noon the next day. And they did. Mrs. Churchill was there, too, to assist her husband in looking after the guests of one of the strangest mealtime affairs Great Britain had experienced.

MOST CHRISTMAS TOYS SOLD IN U. S. ARE MADE IN AMERICA

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Santa Claus this year will distribute to American children more toys made in America than ever before.

The making of playthings for children has been almost completely transferred to the United States in the last two decades, says a Commerce department report.

In 1904, about half of the toys that came to children in the United States were produced in Germany. American factories turned out playthings valued at $5,578,000. Last year, the American output of toys reached more than $80,000,000, and this year it will be higher. All the foreign producers will supply scarcely five per cent of this amount.

Germany is still holding its place as the prime purveyor of toys to the world generally, however, for the American manufacturers do not sell much abroad.

The Best Cough Syrup Is Home-made

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have best cough medicine you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this famous home-made cough syrup. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. It tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, which has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Hair Stays As You Wish

By Edna Wallace Hopper

Perhaps you like hair like mine, wavy, curly and abundant. I get that with my Wave and Sheen. I never have my hair Marcelled.

Perhaps you have a permanent wave, and wish to keep it. Then enhance at the same time the luster and color of your hair. Wave and Sheen will do that.

Perhaps you like sleek hair ever in place. Wave and Sheen will give that to you in the best way that men know.

This is the formula used in Paris for all forms of modern hair dress, men and women. It makes hair stay as you wish it, fluffy or curled or smooth. All modern women in Paris employ it, and the up-to-date must here.

My Wave and Sheen keeps hair fluffy or curly, if you wish. It keeps hair smooth and slick if you desire. It is the keeper of hair beauty.

After all my experience with my Wave and Sheen, I cannot conceive of a man or woman who would not delight to know it.

Get a bottle at any toilet counter today. Mark how it keeps your hair in place, without a particle of grease. Mark how it keeps the fluff or curl or the permanent Marcel. Mark the new beauty it brings to your hair. I am sure you will always use it, as I do, when you see what Wave and Sheen does to the hair. The price is 75 cents.

COTTON PICKING CRISIS MET, CROP ABOUT IN ### Government Enrolled $1-a-Year Men to Mobilize Labor for Southern States.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—A campaign wherein a warlike government enrolls its $1-a-year-men again, and drafts its field forces relentlessly from far-flung territories, is just now drawing to a close within the southern part of the United States.

The annual struggle to get the cotton picked—this year complicated by an immense crop—apparently will be successful again, but only because the United States employment service was able to throw into action at the crisis an army of upwards of 300,000 men and women.

Returns are far from being all in yet, and Francis I. Jones, director of the service, will not be able to make his accounting of the situation for many weeks. But the emergency that bulked most seriously in the early fall days has unquestionably been met, though the forces assembled for the need had to be drawn from Porto Rico and Mexico.

The South this year will produce 18,000,000 bales of its best sung field crop.

Possibilities of trouble were foreseen long ago in Texas, from whence 6,000,000 of the bales will come, and the State growers summoned Jones to conference. The farm labor office of the employment service is organized for sudden expansions and later collapses. Volunteers and local Government employes in 42 states can be affiliated with it for emergency, going on the payroll at $1 a year to give them authority to function. The organization was expanded with utmost swiftness, and recruiting offices for cotton pickers sprung into activity everywhere.

The Arizona growers, notwithstanding, found themselves almost entirely without pickers, and with the aid of the service, two separate shiploads of Porto Ricans were embarked and then shipped across country to the danger spot.

Cotton picking is something of a skilled occupation. The trained hand, working on a piece basis, takes down $6 a day or even more, where the amateur gets a backache as his chief consideration.

FORMER KAISER PROUD OF SUCCESS OF LATEST BOOK

He Has Confided to Friends That He Will Write at Least Two More Volumes.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 18.—Former Emperor William II is so happy to be a success at last as an author that he has confided to friends that he will write at least two more books. His first literary endeavor "The Kaiser's Memoirs" was a failure. While the publishers' price of the book was $2 it can be bought new from any street vendor or rummage book shop for 12 cents.

The sale of his recent autobiographical work, "Pages From My Life, 1859-1888" has exceeded all expectations. In it he speaks with great candor of his relations with his English mother, his father and his grandfather, Emperor William I, and corroborates the theory that his childhood experiences embittered him against England and the whole world.

Leading book sellers report that they have been unable to supply the demand, as many copies are being sent to the United States. The ex-Kaiser is said to be extremely proud of his success and will continue the story of his life in the near future.

GERMANS GET CONCESSIONS

Obtain 30 Per Cent of All Awarded by Russian Government.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 18.—Sponsored by a system of Government credits, German industries have succeeded in obtaining 30 per cent of all the concessions awarded to foreign firms by the soviet Government. In a report on the favorable progress of Russo-German commercial relations, the German Ministry of Commerce says 40 of the 140 concessions came to Germany and that 20 went to England and 15 to the United States. Bids for 100 additional concessions by German firms are being considered.

The Friedrich Krupp works at Essen, the report adds, obtained one of the most important concessions for the manufacture and sale of agricultural implements. Former Chancellor Joseph Wirth is interested in a lumber company which is doing a $7,000,000 business in Russia annually.

Medal for Fritz Kreisler.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 18.—Fritz Kreisler, violinist, has received a medal in recognition of his benefactions to starving Austrian children. The medal, which bears Kreisler's picture on one side and an allegorical figure of Music on the other, was presented during his only concert of the season in the German capital. The presentation was made by Dr. Felix Frank, Austrian Minister to Germany on behalf of the Austrian Aid Society. Arthur Loewental, Berlin sculptor, designed the medal.

POST-DISPATCH CHRIST FESTIVAL WILL BRING TO THOUSANDS OF ### Children Will Be Entertained at Co Baskets of Provisions and Toys Distributed.

The Christmas hopes of thousands of St. Louis children are darkened by the fear that Santa Claus may not be able to find where they live when he makes his rounds the night before Christmas. It is a fear relieved only by such confidence as they can bring themselves to feel in the willingness and efficiency of the good Santa's helpers. There remain but few days in which to help.

It is help now that counts with Santa Claus. For a task such as his many arrangements must be made well in advance. The sooner he knows what help he is going to have the better it is. He makes his plans accordingly.

There still is a possibility that children of humble homes, whose hopes are as high as those of their more favored brothers and sisters in homes of plenty, will awake on Christmas morning to the one disappointment which no child can bear without heartbreak. They have many disappointments, these children who live in poor homes. They are schooled to expect disappointments and to accept them as their lot—something they cannot understand, but something immutable, to be borne with such fortitude as a child can command.

The Saint of Poor Children.

Christmas, though, is different. Christmas hopes and expectations are not like other hopes and expectations, foredoomed to failure. Is there not a Santa Claus? And is he not able to do all things? Does he not know the wants of poor little boys and poor little girls? And does he not supply them out of the abundance of his supplies and the boundlessness of his good will?

These are the questions asked in thousands of poor homes in St. Louis during the eager days before Christmas, eager days that become anxious days as the time draws near, anxious because of the doubts which distraught mothers suggest often if possible the blow that will fall when children awake on Christmas morning to find that Santa Claus has passed them by. It is only by raising doubts and deferring hopes and expectations that some mothers can make their Christmas preparations.

Always, though, in the heart of the mother who has no other hope than the hope that Santa Claus, with the help of the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival, will find his way to her house and bring happiness to her children on Christmas morning. That is what the Christmas Festival is for. It aims to come as near as is humanly possible to preventing any empty Christmas stockings. It can do its work, however, only as the thousands of Santa Claus helpers do their part by contributing generously to the funds that are needed for the purpose. The fund is far from the goal it must reach if the festival is to accomplish all that it should. The time is short.

Celebration at Coliseum.

There is another expectation bound up with the Santa Claus expectation in the hearts of thousands of St. Louis children. It is the expectation of the Christmas celebration at the Coliseum, the great event of a great day for children whose great days are few. People whose lives are lived in pleasant places, with surfeit of bright lights and entertainment, can have no comprehension of what the Christmas Festival means to these children.

There is little sleep in many poor homes the night before Christmas because of the expectations of what the next day will bring, coupled with a vague fear that something may happen to spoil it all. The doors will be closed at 10 o'clock, they have been told. What if they should be too late! What if the doors should be closed!

It is a terrifying possibility. It is a calamity not to be risked. So "Wake and call me early, Mother," is the oft-repeated admonition on the night before Christmas. Quite unnecessary in most cases because the children are awake of their own accord from their fitful slumber hours before the time set for the opening of the doors. Before Christmas day's sun has risen they are on their way, though the doors will not be opened until 9 o'clock.

It is a terrifying possibility. It a calamity not to be risked. So wake and call me early, Moth- r is the oft-repeated admonition the night before Christmas. Quite cessary in most cases because children are awake of their n accord from their fitful slum- hours before the time set for opening of the doors. Before Christmas day's sun has risen y are on their way, though the s will not be opened until 9 ock.

hat is one of the problems that men and women of the Christ- mas Festival Association have had to deal with from year to year. Each year the announcement is made that the doors will not be opened until 9 o'clock. Each Christmas day Locust street and Jefferson avenue are filled with children thinly clad and poorly protected against the weather, long before 9 o'clock, clutching tickets in numbed fingers, waiting for the warmth and light and music and entertainment that will be for them when the hour strikes.

Early Comers Shiver.

Chief of Police Gerk called attention to it again at last week's meeting of the Executive Committee, at the Jefferson Hotel.

"Is there no way," he asked, "to keep the children from coming to the Coliseum until time for the doors to be opened?"

Members of the committee could suggest no way except the old way of cautioning the children not to come until 9 o'clock, but everybody knew that they would come anyway.

"If the weather is cold," the Chief continued, "there will be suffering. One bitter cold Christmas morning there were children at the doors at a quarter past 5 o'clock in the morning. My men found them shivering there. Policemen went to homes in the vicinity and awakened the people and had them make fires and take the children in to keep them from freezing."

That is how eager the children are for the Christmas Festival, the warmth and the lights and the music and the entertainment, the candy and the toys.

Efforts are being made to get a building in the neighborhood to shelter the early comers if the weather is bad.

This year's entertainment is going to be worth all the waiting and the expectation. Eight hundred children from the municipal playgrounds will provide it. They have been under training for some time by their teachers, directed by Park Commissioner Pape and R. W. Tapperson of his department. They had their first full rehearsal yesterday at the Coliseum. There will be 13 dances by large groups of children depicting Christmas legends and clown acts and other specialties. And Falkenhainer's military band will play from the time that the doors are opened until the entertainment is over. Horns and other noisemakers will be distributed as well as candy. The remainder of the toys will be sent to the homes with the Christmas dinner baskets.

Letters of Appeal.

"As the Post-Dispatch is doing such splendid work in making many children happy on Christmas, I as a neighbor, want to call your attention to a young mother with three small children who divorced her drunken husband about 18 months ago and by order of the court he must support his three children, but fails to do so. This woman leads a very respectable and upright life, tries to raise her children, girls, right. This woman will not make known her needs and hardships. This is a case where some help is certainly needed, not toys, but food."

"I would like for you all to send me a Christmas basket as my husband is sick and disabled to earn a crust of bread and I am in needy circumstances. I have a few days' work but not enough to get me anything for Christmas. I hope that the Lord will get in the hearts of you good people. Last Christmas you sent me a lovely basket—everything was useful. I thank you all with many thanks and may God let you be successful."

"My mother has been a widow for five years and it is hard for her to make a living for Gladys and I. Gladys is 13 years and I am 8 years old. Our father is dead and our mother is not able to work. I need a coat for Sunday School and some shoes. Gladys and mother also need shoes and a coat. Hoping you will not forget our Christmas and we will appreciate it very much. We would also appreciate a Christmas basket."

"Will you please send me a basket? I am poor, sick and blind."

Had to Give Up Her Daughter.

"I would like to have a Christmas basket. I am poor and my husband has no work and I have a boy 8 years old and I had to give my little girl up for I could not keep her any more. I am trying to work, but I am sick myself. I take spells. I work to pay the rent, it is $4 a week, and $1 to live on, so you see we are in need."

"I am a cripple girl 11 years old and cannot walk. I wish you would send me something for Xmas. I would like to have some toys."

"I am a little boy, also have a little brother and sister. My papa is home sick since September, my mother is sick and cannot work, so I guess Santa Claus will not come to our house unless somebody will send him. Will you please send him to my house for my sister and brother."

"Regarding the Christmas giving, I am writing asking your aid. I am the mother of 10 children. Your aid will be highly appreciated from the little baby to the oldest."

"I thought I would write and see if you would send me a basket for Christmas. I am a boy just out of the hospital and I have no father and my brother is sick nearly all of the time and my mother is working trying to feed us and to buy medicine for my sick brother and I want us to have something for Christmas. Will you please send Santa Claus to us for we are not able to have any Christmas."

Service Man's Family.

"I am writing you in regard to Christmas for my two little babies. I have a little girl who is underweight and sick all the time, she has only been able to attend school four weeks this year, and my little boy is home sick too—just got over a bad spell of pneumonia and my husband is also afflicted with stomach trouble. He is an ex-service man and only able to work very little. We are behind with our grocery bill and we have a very hard time to make ends meet, especially since we have to buy so much coal. My husband just makes enough to pay rent. We have no heating stove and no gas, only coal. I wish someone that h[as] a heating stove would make us a present and just something for the babies."

"I am 81 years old and sick, live alone in one room and would thank you for a basket."

"In regard to hardships, I have worked but three days in two months. I have a large family, none working right now but me. I am working cleaning bricks and making 10 cents a hundred. I can hardly pay my house rent. Don't know what I would have done if the Provident Association had not helped me a little. It would please me awfully well if you would get me a job and some work clothes. I would like to have a basket too, but a job and clothes is what I need."

To Pack Baskets Tomorrow.

All the committees are hard at work on the details of preparation. The packing of the baskets with food and toys will begin tomorrow morning at the Pennant Building. Seventeenth and Locust streets. A large force of volunteers under the direction of Mrs. A. H. Sippy will attend to this work. The packing will be finished in ample time for delivery on the day before Christmas. Early that day a cavalcade of trucks will leave the building to make the rounds and deliver the food in ample time for the preparation of the Christmas dinner and the toys to be placed in the stockings that will be hung up the night before Christmas.

King George a Christmas Shopper.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—King George gets as much "kick" out of Christmas as any of his subjects, but he has tired of holiday shopping. So Queen Mary has taken on the additional burden of buying the King's gifts for relatives and friends and making most of the selections for the Prince of Wales, as she has done for years. The King made but one shopping expedition this year. That was to a charity bazar. He purchased jumping jacks for Princess Mary's two boys and a West Indian pickaninny doll for little Princess Elizabeth. Then he let it be known in the royal household that he had done his first and last shopping of the season.

CHRISTMAS SEAL SALE IS SETTING NEW MARK

Schools, Churches, Movies, Stores and Civic Groups Help Tuberculosis Fight.

Special events of the 1926 Christmas Health Seal Campaign of the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis forecast the most successful sale in history, according to Byron Moser, treasurer of the campaign. Practically every organized group in the city—business, civic, religious and social—is giving splendid co-operation, and Christmas eve will find the campaign at a triumphant close if events continue in the next few days as they have to date.

Schools are probably the largest organized group to sponsor the Christmas Seal Campaign, according to Moser, and approximately 500 women and girls volunteered their services for this event. The schools participating include city public schools, Catholic, county and private schools, business colleges and the two universities. Mrs. Arthur Lieber is chairman of the public school sale. Mrs. Paul Robyn of the Catholic school sale and J. L. Bracken of the county school compaign. Full returns have not been made, but indications are this year's sale will surpass those of previous years, Moser declared. The sale in county and Catholic schools will continue until the Christmas holidays.

Many Organizations Help.

Churches, business men's luncheon clubs, fraternal and civic groups, hotels, theaters, movies, industrial organizations, department stores, Union Station, organized labor and country organizations, including the Clayton Courthouse, are also co-operating in the Christmas Seal Campaign.

Last night was known as movie night in the schedule of special events, and seals and buttons were sold in the lobbies of more than 100 moving picture theaters in the city and county. The movies also are co-operating by showing films of the Christmas seal in action and the Missouri Theater is featuring a song about the Christmas seal in its organ solo. Other events of the next few days include the continued sale of seals and buttons in Union Station, city hall and Municipal Courts Building.

The sale of Christmas seals by mail, however, is the outstanding feature of the campaign, according to Moser. This method is used in all large cities in the country, and has proved by far the most successful and far-reaching of any plan. The National Tuberculosis Association recently made a survey of all the methods of money-raising, and the mail order was found to be the most effective and cheapest for seal sales.

Personal solicitation, according to the survey, requires the organization of volunteers, which calls for luncheons, "pep meetings" and other forms of entertainment to keep the workers interested.

The mail order, on the other hand, has no such expense attached to it. Practically the only expenditure it requires is postage, and that is a small item compared with the volunteer and cost of carfare or wear on an automobile which personal solicitation demands. In addition, the mail order not only reaches into every corner of the city and county, which is impossible for personal solicitation, but at the same time carries an annual report of the Tuberculosis Society's work, which shows the contributor how his money is spent.

27,642 New Subscribers.

Of this year's contributors to date, 27,642 are new subscribers, who have never bought either seals or buttons. In accounting for this increase in new contributors, Moser said the public health program promoted by the Tuberculosis Society during the last year was so extensive that large numbers of people were reached who never before had come into contact with the Tuberculosis Society's work. Anyone who buys seals or buttons becomes a member of the Tuberculosis Society, there being no regular dues.

Almost a thousand women in St. Louis city and county are engaged in promoting the campaign. Health week, with its story-telling hours in schools and five-minute health talks before luncheon clubs and various other groups, employed more than 100 women, while movie and theater nights each called several hundred volunteers. The sale of seals and buttons at Union Station is being conducted by more than 100 members of Catholic women's organizations and special campaigns in industrial organizations are enlisting the services of many more women. The largest event, however, requiring the services of women is the school campaign, in which approximately 500 women have participated. Among the volunteers who had executive positions in the public school division are Mrs. Arthur Lieber, general chairman; Mrs. A. A. Boettler, Mrs. Crawford Duncan, Mrs. H. P. Folk, Mrs. Flint Garrison and Mrs. Clarence Robbins.

GAIN IN MEXICAN SUGAR CROP

Increase of 26,700 metric tons produced Result of High Prices.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 18.—Mexico's sugar production for 1925-26 was 194,700 metric tons, according to a report just issued by the Agricultural Department of San Jacinto. Last year's crop was 168,000 metric tons.

The department's report points out that the high prices of sugar during 1920 encouraged sugar growers to increase their production.

NUTS FROM TREES ON GRAVE PLANTED YEARLY

Texas Carries Out Death-Bed Wish of Late Gov. James S. Hogg.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AUSTIN, Tex., Dec. 18.—An unusually large crop of pecans and walnuts was produced this fall by the trees which grow upon the grave-polt in the State cemetery here where the body of former Gov. James Stephen Hogg was buried 20 years ago. When Gov. Hogg was on his death-bed he said to members of his family and friends who were gathered around him:

"I want no monument of stone or marble, but plant at my head a pecan tree and at my feet an old-fashioned walnut tree; and when these trees shall bear, let the pecans and walnuts be given out among the plain people of Texas so that they may plant them and make Texas a land of trees."

This request was faithfully carried out. The two trees began bearing large crops of nuts a few years ago and each succeeding year their yields have increased in bountifulness. At first no systematic method of distributing the nuts for planting purposes was carried out. They were given here and there to persons who asked for them.

Through the co-operation of the sons of Gov. Hogg, arrangements have been made for the propagation of pecans and walnuts from the nuts of the two original trees. This will be done by the horticultural department of the State Agricultural and Mechanical College. Each year the nuts will be gathered and sent to the college to be planted in the nursery beds there. When the young trees are large enough to be transplanted, they will be distributed over the State, and in this manner, in the course of years, the dying wish of Gov. Hogg will have been fulfilled, in large measure.

Plan Texas to Mexico Air Service.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Dec. 18.—Plans are being made for passenger and mail airplane service between San Antonio and the city of Mexico, with a scheduled flying time of 12 hours, according to Robret V. Pesquira, former diplomatic representative to the United States and at the present engaged in the oil business.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BALLINGER, Tex., Dec. 18.—Two carloads of live and nine carloads of dressed turkeys will be shipped from here to Eastern markets for the Christmas trade. The approximate value of the fowls will be $100,000. The turkey business has been a paying proposition for raisers in this section this season.

EXPORTS FROM U. S. TO MEXICO THROUGH LAREDO A RECORD

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LAREDO, Tex., Dec. 18.—Notwithstanding the clerical boycott of all lines of goods and merchandise in Mexico, the value of exports from the United States to that country through this port of entry during the present year will exceed all previous records. Customs figures compiled here show that the total valuation of American-made goods and merchandise exported to Mexico through Laredo during November was $3,152,576.46, with consular duties paid thereon of $157,628.82. During October the total valuation of American-made goods and merchandise exported to Mexico through the port of Laredo was $3,510,379, with consular duties amounting to $175,518.95.

For the 11 months of the year 1926, up to and including Nov. 30, the total valuation of American-made goods and merchandise exported to Mexico through Laredo was $38,476,801.46, with total consular duties paid of $1,903,840.07. This shows that only $1,523,198.54 is lacking to reach the $40,000,000 mark, with the month of December yet to be included to complete the year.

CONQUER YOUR NERVES

—or Your Nerves Will Conquer You

Nerves! Nerves! Nerves! We hear and see it everywhere today! Only a few people can escape this enemy of health, youth and happiness!

It is not surprising that the toll of nervousness is so great, for the mile-a-minute life of today is enough to break down the strongest constitution.

If only a few of the symptoms of nerve exhaustion attack you—nervous indigestion, restlessness, "that tired feeling" and the mental symptoms: fear, self-consciousness, irritability—your life becomes dull and uninspiring—for to be nervous is to be but half alive.

Tonics and physical exercises alone can be of little avail in correcting nerve troubles. The cure lies only in a sound and thorough understanding of the functioning of the nerves, and more especially, knowledge of your own nervous characteristics and weaknesses.

If you are one of the unfortunate many who has sought relief in vain, you will find it in the pages of "NERVE FORCE," a book dealing with every phase of nerve troubles and their correction, and written by an authority who has devoted his whole life to the study and advancement of this science—Paul von Boeckmann. Send for the book today. It will be a revelation to you and will teach you for the first time how to master your nerves and avoid future "slipping." Your money refunded if you are not fully satisfied.

55,902 MILES OF ROADS IMPROVED WITH FEDERAL AID

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Federal-aid roda projects completed in the fiscal year 1926 contributed a net addition of 9417 miles to the mileage of improved roads in the Federal-aid system, according to the annual report of the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture. Added to the mileage improved with Federal assistance in previous years, the above brings the total length of improved Federal-aid roads up to 55,902 miles.

System 182,134 Miles Long.

At the close of the year construction was in progress on 10,962 miles, and projects involving the improvement of 2469 miles additional had been approved. Including the mileage projects in these latter stages, all of which are included in the Federal-aid system, the total mileage improved or in process of improvement with Federal aid was 69,334 miles. With the exception of a few hundred miles improved prior to the designation of the Federal-aid highway system in 1921, all of this mileage is included in the system.

The system now has an aggregate length of 182,134 miles. All this mileage has been selected by the state and Federal highway officials as essential links of a system adequate for the accommodation of interstate traffic. Considerable work has been done on the system by the states without Federal aid, so that it is now not far from three-fourths initially improved. The work of improvement, however, is not three-quarters done, as increasing traffic will make it necessary to improve to a higher degree a considerable mileage of low-type road, such as graded earth, sand-clay and gravel.

Routes Almost Improved.

The report states that the improvement of several transcontinental routes is approaching completion. There is now a route extending from Washington through St. Louis, Texarkana and El Paso to San Diego, which is 97 per cent improved. The route from Atlantic City, N. J., to Astoria, Ore., is seven-eighths improved, and from Boston to Seattle through the northern tier of states is 73 per cent improved and 69 per cent surfaced.

Twenty-five states have continuously improved highways entirely across them in at least one direction, and 16 of these have completed trans-state arteries in two directions.

The report contains a short discussion on national forest road construction, the relation of Federal aid and forest road work, and also a review of the more conspicuous accomplishments in highway research. Among the investigations which have been of most practical value is that which was directed toward the increase of efficiency of various road construction operations, a field in which savings of from 25 to 35 per cent in earth-moving costs have been shown to be generally possible and in which it has been found that as much as 20 per cent can be saved in the cost of grading on some jobs, effected almost entirely by changes in design of grades.

It has been shown that in concrete paving operations the daily output on most projects can be increased 25 per cent and sometimes 50 or even 100 per cent, some contractors having been able to reduce their bids surprisingly after having adopted improved methods suggested by the bureau.

Plans to Keep Road Clear of Snow.

Motorist Pays $20,000 Damages.

A New York motorist who gave a "lift" to some children had to pay $20,000 damages to the father in an accident while in the car.

55,902 MILES OF ROADS IMPROVED WITH FEDERAL AID

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Federal-aid roda projects completed in the fiscal year 1926 contributed a net addition of 9417 miles to the mileage of improved roads in the Federal-aid system, according to the annual report of the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture. Added to the mileage improved with Federal assistance in previous years, the above brings the total length of improved Federal-aid roads up to 55,902 miles.

System 182,134 Miles Long.

At the close of the year construction was in progress on 10,962 miles, and projects involving the improvement of 2469 miles additional had been approved. Including the mileage projects in these latter stages, all of which are included in the Federal-aid system, the total mileage improved or in process of improvement with Federal aid was 69,334 miles. # Scenic Tour to "Land of the Sky" Feasible in Winter

Generally Good Roads and Scenery Ranging From Parklike Kentucky Bluegrass Region to Rugged Mountains Along the Route.

By RICHARD G. BAUMHOFF.

Asheville, N. C., capital of the "land of the sky" and a year-round playground of much attraction and surprisingly low prices, is readily accessible from St. Louis by fine roads. The intervening country is of prime interest, including two mountain systems whose grades are jokes to modern cars.

In ordinary terms, Asheville is 720 miles away, but expressed in time its distance for the motorist may be as little as two days—for early risers and hard drivers—or three days, anyway. Berea, Ky., south of Lexington, would be a good night stop in attempting this jaunt in two days, for it is on the edge of the first mountains. Louisville and Middlesboro, Ky., are the breaking points for the trip when made in three days.

Trip Easily Made in Winter.

Skidamaree, gypsy car of the Post-Dispatch, made this journey in four days not long since, but time spent on the road each day was rather short. The Gypsy Baron, being on vacation, was in no hurry. Vincennes, Ind., Lexington and Middlesboro were the stops.

Winter should be no bar to the pleasure of this trip, unless at a time when snow is drifted deep. From Louisville to Knoxville, Skidamaree made it in almost continuous hard rain. Part of the mountain road between Knoxville and Asheville might be troublesome in a heavy rain, but it is said there that traffic keeps moving.

Storied French Broad River as seen from a highway bridge near the Tennessee-North Carolina line, on the route to Asheville.

The route, after crossing into East St. Louis, goes over Illinois Highway No. 12, on State street, which turns north at the Edgemont bluffs, and traverses dull prairie till the Indiana line draws near. It is concrete all the way, in striking contrast to the rickety bridge across the Wabash River at Vincennes, now closed for repairs, necessitating use of a ferry. The shady streets of Vincennes, 154 miles out, hold historical flavor.

Indiana No. 5 is the next road, cutting over 125 miles of rugged farm country, which in places is almost mountainous. Just half way are West Baden and French Lick. There are alternating stretches of pavement and of excellent stone and gravel.

Louisville, reached by a toll bridge from New Albany, Ind., is 279 miles out. St. Louis and Louisville are akin in several ways. The tourist will be interested especially in the attractive and unusual residence section on winding Cherokee drive, facing Cherokee Park.

Lacking State signs, the State road eastward is followed by I-L-L trail markers and Frankfort and Lexington signs. Kentucky is like a park for all of the 85 miles from Louisville to Lexington. Here is the first insight into the new South. Old and new plantation homes are intermingled; neat stone walls frequently serve as fences; tobacco fields abound; everything is clean and bright, and the highway is the smoothest of bituminous macadam.

The Colonels have clipped their goatees and joined the Rotary Club, and Old Black Joe is sporting a new green Ford.

Frankfort, the picturesque State capital, is scattered over the deep gorge of the Kentucky River and adjacent hillsides. It is one of the many places, large and small, throughout the nation which have obtained shiny new hotels in this motor age. The view when Frankfort bursts on the tourist approaching from the west is worth traveling far to see.

Heart of the Bluegrass Region.

Lexington, heart of the blue grass country and headquarters of the still royal majesty, the horse, is 370 miles from St. Louis. It is a lively, attractive city of 60,000 men, women and younger horse lovers, every one of whom knows more about Man o' War and his neighbors than any St. Louisan knows about Rogers Hornsby et al. 'Fore-the-war mansions, pastures full of beautiful equines and blue, blue grass, a bonded warehouse or two overflowing with bourbon, reminders of Daniel Boone in the days before he went to Missouri for elbow room—these are some of the sights—and more fine horses.

A detailed log prepared by the Gypsy Baron was published in these columns on Sept. 5, covering road conditions on the 227 miles between Lexington and Knoxville, across the storied Cumberland Mountains. Hence a detailed description of road conditions will not be given here, as stretches of varying types of road alternate frequently. Suffice it to say that the speedometer showed 193 miles of excellent surface and 33.5 miles of rough. Included in the former are 31.4 miles of concrete and different sorts of macadam and bituminous macadam. There are just three breaks in the smoothness of the route through Kentucky, which bears markers of Dixie A highway and U. S. No. 25. A good job of road building has been done, except that safety guards are lacking in many places.

Picturesque Country.

Fifteen miles south of Lexington there is an aged toll bridge across the Kentucky River, where the stream makes a huge U-shaped bend in a deep valley. Looking back from the steep ascent on the south, the traveler sees the curve of the current in a broad sweep of country.

ROUTE TO FLORIDA THROUGH MEMPHIS IS ALL-WEATHER

Starts From St. Louis Over Lemay Ferry Road—Mostly Concrete and Gravel With One Detour.

Progress in road construction now makes available a route to Florida that traverses Missouri, Tennessee and Alabama and is reported to be all-weather.

Its Florida terminus is Lake City, which is a motoring junction for Tampa, Jacksonville, St. Petersburg, St. Augustine, Orlando, Miami, Palm Beach and other Southern Florida watering places.

Starts Over Lemay Ferry Road.

This route, as recommended by the Touring Department of the Automobile Club of Missouri and the Joint Touring Bureau of the Post-Dispatch and the Automobile Club, starts from St. Louis over the Lemay Ferry road and follows Federal route No. 61 via Cape Girardeau and Sikeston, into Arkansas. From Blytheville, Ark., a southerly course is maintained to Memphis. The route keeps to the west side of the Mississippi River until one is directly opposite Memphis, where the river is crossed. The highway from St. Louis to Memphis is of concrete and gravel.

From Memphis the route bears southeast through Tupelo, Miss., and thence via Jasper, Ala., to Birmingham. This part of the route is on the Bankhead highway and is of concrete and gravel. Through Alabama it is marked as State highway No. 8, while through Mississippi and Tennessee Bankhead highway markers are followed.

Runs Through Georgia.

RICKENBACKER PLANS 100-CAR DAILY OUTPUT

Col. Tichenor, Merchandizing Director, Cuts Annual Overhead by $400,000.

H. L. Winter, general sales manager of the Rickenbacker Motor Co., who visited the factory branch in St. Louis the past week, said the outlook for the future of the Rickenbacker Co. is better than in any time in its history. He based this statement on the selection of Col. T. M. Tichenor, pioneer in the automotive industry, as head of the manufacturing and merchandising divisions of the company.

Tichenor has shown his ability as a reorganizer by reducing annual overhead expense by $400,000 and still maintaining an organization adequate to handle a complete output of cars, Winter declared, adding, this has caused financial interests to take an optimistic opinion of the company's future.

Rickenbacker expects to produce in 1927 a car that will exceed any other ever built in performance, durability, precision of workmanship and eye appeal, Winter said. The company is now producing more cars a day than the daily average last season, and plans to put out at maximum manufacturing capacity 100 a day by spring, he asserted.

REO ST. LOUIS, INC., FORMED BY KARDELLS

Plan to Handle Distribution of Reo Cars and Speed Wagons on Larger Scale.

Reo St. Louis, Inc., has just been incorporated by H. W. Kardell, J. C. Kardell and associates as an expansion of the Kardell Motor Car Co., to make possible handling the Reo distributorship in this territory on a larger scale. The corporation is capitalized for $100,000, and has executed a new lease on the large quarters at 3145 Locust boulevard which have been occupied by the Kardell Co.

H. W. Kardell is president and treasurer of Reo St. Louis, Inc., and J. C. Kardell is vice president. J. T. Scobee, president of the Florida Savings Bank, Florida, Mo., is to be actively associated with the corporation as secretary and a director. He is moving to St. Louis to reside.

Plan for Sales Increase.

The general manager is to be R. D. Hilty, a special representative of the Reo Motor Car Co., Lansing, Mich., who has been associated with Reo for a dozen years. Hilty, who is widely known among automotive sales executives, has a reputation as an automobile merchandizer.

"This expansion is being made so that we will be in a position to handle the large increase expected in sales of Reo cars and speed wagons in the coming year," said H. W. Kardell. "The change in name of our distributorship was made with the consent of the Reo factory. It means more than a mere change in name. It means also even closer relations between our distributorship and the Reo factory with consequent benefit to every Reo owner."

H. W. and J. C. Kardell have had the Reo franchise in the St. Louis territory ever since October, 1908. In the 18 years they have sold other cars and trucks, but Reo has always been their dependable leader. The two brothers are known throughout the St. Louis distribution territory, which includes Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, and have had a substantial share in building up the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association. H. W. Kardell was president of the Kardell Motor Car Co., which is succeeded by Reo St. Louis, Inc., and J. C. Kardell was vice president.

Reo Distributers for 18 Years.

The Kardell brothers started in business at 509 North Main street in 1904 as distributers of buggies and agricultural implements. In 1908 they took the Reo automobile distributership. In 1910 they formed the Kardell Motor Car Co. at 4150-56 Olive street. Their present building on Locust boulevard was built for them. It is a two-story structure 80 by 140 feet. In rear of it and fronting 75 feet on Washington boulevard is another building, 140 feet deep, which they use for service and used car showroom. H. W. Kardell said yesterday that the clientele they won in the old buggy and implement days had followed them ever since with Reo motor cars.

The Steiner-Fahrenkrog Auto Co., which has a large salesroom and service station at 4000 Page boulevard, is to continue as a Reo dealer. H. F. Fahrenkrog, until he joined Harry Steiner in forming the Page boulevard dealership, was treasurer of the Kardel Motor Car Co. He is a member of the Board of Education and was president of board. Steiner was sales manager of the Kardell Motor Car Co.

SCENIC TOUR TO "LAND OF THE SKY" FEASIBLE IN WINTER

lege, whose students earn their way by daily work of various sorts. The college maintains a good hotel, Boone tavern, and the student-waitresses would be insulted by tips. Daniel Boone once lived near Berea and an authentic portrait of him hangs in the tavern parlor.

The only detour in this route across Kentucky—and it will soon be eliminated by concrete under construction—starts at Berea, running for 12 miles over a steep mountain ridge, the first of the Cumberlands. This is Scaffold Cane, a name based on Indian lore. There is a steady upward climb for two miles, but the rocky road isn't bad.

Grandeur of the Hills.

From here on the Cumberlands are of true mountain grandeur. Sunshine clothes them with splashes of color and haze, while clouds envelop them in misty, white shrouds, through which the highway sometimes passes. There are few towns, and most of them are more attractive at a distance than close.

About 130 miles from Lexington the Cumberland River is encountered for the first time winding through the hills. At mile 139 is a big hydroelectric plant of the Kentucky Utilities Co., on a particularly wild part of the stream, with the road high above. This is a coal-mining section, as shown by the gaunt tipples and the busy railroad tracks, which seem out of place where they crop up in the forest.

Middlesboro is a rather pleasant little city, with a new hotel that is a delightful surprise. Skidamaree came upon that hostelry after a black and drenching evening in the mountains, and lo! there were soft lights, a thick steak, hot biscuits and an easy bed.

Beautiful Cumberland Gap.

Immediately beyond Middlesboro is the famous Cumberland Gap—a break in the range. Near the highway the Louisville & Nashville Railroad disappears into a mile-long tunnel, but motor cars can climb better than trains, and the excellent road twists in hairpin fashion in a steep two-mile pull, till it is 1700 feet above the sea. At this beauty spot of nature, in a section where early American stock is supposed to be unsullied by immigration, man has placed the inevitable "hot dog" and soda stand. The Pinnacle, a tree-clad shaft of rock, frowns down from its altitude of 3200 feet. Anyone who cares to scramble up a lesser peak to the west may find the stone marker denoting the junction of Kentucky, Virginia and Tennessee. Not far off is the Devil's Kitchen. In the vicinity are the remains of Civil War trenches. Far below is the little town of Cumberland Gap, Tenn., to which the highway drops.

Two miles south of that town is the entrance in the hills to Lincoln Memorial University. After crossing a smaller mountain or two, the road traverses populous farming country for some distance, then enters a section of picturesque glens and big hills, continuing into Knoxville, a leading city of Eastern Tennessee. From Cumberland Gap to Tazewell, Tenn. Highway No. 32 is followed, then No. 33 to Knoxville.

Into the Great Smokies.

Turning east at Knoxville on No. 9, the route passes farms in rolling country for about 25 miles, until the first dim outlines of the Great Smoky Mountains, which form the most fascinating part of the trip, appear on the eastern horizon. Constantly their bulk looms bigger, till at last the car is lost in them, climbing, coasting, twisting on a fine road of hard, sandy surface.

The Great Smokies are being sought with good reason for conservation as a national park. Their name was well chosen, for the haze and mist surrounding the endless, billowy summits and filling the dim canyons resemble the smoke of a myriad fires. Paralleling the highway is the French Broad, a gem of the gorges.

Gorgeous Scenery on Long Grade.

Local people use horns on their machines with a peculiar, penetrating note that strikes a visitor as the very voice of the lonely Smokies.

A bit of log is indicated: Start from Knoxville with the speedometer at 00.0, on bituminous macadam.

59.6—Bridge across French Broad, and start climbing the Smokies.

72.0—Another bridge over the French Broad.

76.6—Cross the line into North Carolina, route No. 20, high in the mountains.

83.4—Village of Hot Springs.

83.6—Over the French Broad by bridge again, and immediately start ascending Lonesome Mountain, a four-mile climb to an altitude of about 4000 feet, furnishing the most striking scenery of the whole tour. The road is a series of hairpin turns and short grades, but Skidamaree made it almost entirely in high gear. The wooded mass broods high on one side and on the other there is a sheer drop into the tortuous cleft.

90.4—Base of Lonesome, after a three-mile coast, crossing Laurel River, which rushes through a fissure. The next mountain is not quite so big, but almost all the way into Asheville the road is of the same winding sort.

121.2 — Bituminous macadam road is resumed.

128.5—Asheville.

It will be observed that the Gypsy Baron has not rhapsodized as much as usual about the Great Smokies. He's afraid to; nobody would believe him if truth were told about their beauty.

Asheville is a gay and progressive city, set in the mountains. The municipal guide placed in every room of all the hotels, relates the numerous things to do there and in the country all about. Sports of all kinds are at hand. The residential parks of Eastern millionaires are interesting, what with tame deer and unimpeachable butlers. Sunset Mountain, with a toll road starting right in town, affords a brilliant vista, especially at that hour when the orb of day departs in golden splendor and incandescents begin to sparkle in great dining halls, cozy bungalows and irrepressible new subdivisions.

Bevan Lawson, who for five years was head of the household remedies department of one of the largest manufacturing chemists in America, and later vice president in charge of development of the American Institute of Medicine, will discuss salesmen and salesmanship in the automobile industry at the National Automobile Dealers' Association jubilee convention Feb. 1-3, at LaSalle Hotel in Chicago.

NO CUT IN PRICE OR QUALITY SLASH BY AUBURN, SAYS CORD

That 1927 will be the most highly competitive period in automotive history is the belief of E. L. Cord, president of the Auburn Automobile Co., who said that Auburn was not entering any price war or quality slashes.

Cord said that the keen competitive condition had been making itself felt for months, but not until recently had it become acute.

The fact that at least four companies have brought out six-cylinder models which are listed at the same, and lower, prices as fours, is evidence of the brewing competition, he said.

ACCOUNTING OF USED CAR BUSINESS URGED

Frank R. Tate Discusses Trade-In Problem at Dealers' Association Meeting.

Adoption of a complete and thorough accounting system on used car business was recommended to dealers by Frank R. Tate, president of the Tate Motor Co., in an address at a meeting of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association in Hotel Claridge, Wednesday. This was the second of a series of educational meetings for the "concrete good" of automobile dealers, according to George Weber, president of the association and head of the Weber Automobile and Implement Co., who introduced the speaker.

Tate said the accounting of dealers' business should be based on the used cars and that allowance for trade-ins, costs of repairs, amount they sell for and loss or profit should be tabulated daily. He advised the dealers before accepting a used car to have it demonstrated by the buyer, who, Tate said, is usually more interested in the allowance than in purchasing a new car.

Give what the car is worth and accept only trade-ins on which a profit can be made, he suggested. Illinois.

Tate then showed how the [illegible] used car is kept, on a lot or storage, the more it will depreciate in value, and that holding one a year cuts its worth from $[illegible] $100.

Tate decried the practice of [illegible] dealers who allow fictitious prices on used cars because "they are afraid of losing a buyer," as well as those who accept used cars in lieu of first payments on new automobiles.

Selling of used cars is very [illegible] this year in several places here, he continued, saying that many [illegible] cars have been sold for a profit because they were bought at a [illegible] gain or traded in at a right [illegible]

Tate said 50 per cent of [illegible] used automobiles thus far this [illegible] were based on trade-ins. Tate [illegible] that there was overproduction at present, causing manufacturers to force dealers to handle more cars at less profit. To alleviate this condition, Tate advised association members to put in stocks of [illegible] series.

George Barry, president of [illegible] Barry Motor Car Co., is scheduled to talk on the used-car problem at a meeting next Wednesday.

RECORD OF 43 M. P. G. BY WHIPPET CERTIFIED

A. A. A. Observer Reports on Los Angeles-New York Run by "Cannon Ball" Baker.

A trans-continental record of 43.23 miles to the gallon of gasoline by a Whippet touring car, driven by "Cannon Ball" Baker, has been certified by Joe Nikrent, who accompanied Baker as official observer on the run, which was sanctioned by the American Automobile Association. Nikrent certified that Baker drove the Whippet 3559.8 miles from Los Angeles to New York and used $2.25 gallons of gasoline, leaving the coast city at midnight of Nov. 26 and arriving in New York at noon on Dec. 10. He stated that on Dec. 1 Baker drove the Whippet to a record of 53.6 miles to the gallon between Sweetwater and Dallas, Tex.

The route followed passed through Ajo, Ariz.; Deming, N. M.; El Paso, and Dallas, Tex.; Memphis, Tenn.; Indianapolis, and Philadelphia to New York.

Beats Former Whippet Run.

The record exceeds any previous economy record made by a stock touring car under ordinary driving conditions and officially observed by a wide margin. It betters an average of 34.69 miles per gallon made by an experimental Whippet model on a westbound trip by 8.59 miles to the gallon and exceeds the claimed economy of the Whippet by 13.28 miles to the gallon.

On the first day, 322 miles were covered to Aztec, Ariz. The average for the day was 41.33 miles to the gallon though mountains between Los Angeles and Yuma, Ariz., were crossed.

Tucson, Ariz., was reached on the second day, the distance traveled being 224 miles and the fuel consumption being 40.9 miles to the gallon.

At Deming, N. M., on Nov. 29, the distance covered was 836 miles and the fuel consumption was at the rate of 40.78 miles to the gallon. Up to this point no oil had been added.

At Sweetwater, Tex., on Nov. 30, with a total mileage of 1282, the average fuel consumption was 43.87 miles to the gallon.

The stop Dec. 1 was at Dallas, and on the run from Sweetwater to Dallas, Nikrent stated, 53.1 miles to the gallon were made.

On Dec. 2, the Whippet ran 307 miles to Arkadelphia, Ark., and the fuel consumption was 7.5 gallons, giving an average for the day of 40.9 miles to the gallon. At this point the grand average was 44.47 miles to the gallon.

Memphis was reached Dec. 3. Up to this point the average for the trip was 44.3 miles to the gallon.

On the Final Laps.

Saturday saw the car at Indianapolis. Tuesday the Whippet arrived at Uniontown, Pa., after passing through rain, hail and sleet with roads slippery from ice. The run was 251 miles. At Uniontown the mileage from Los Angeles was 3121, with an average per gallon of gasoline since the start of 43.55 miles.

Wednesday the run was continued into Gettysburg over icy roads. Thursday the final lap was covered to New York.

The car was inspected by Nikrent and A. J. Means of the New York Automobile Club, to see that no changes had been made in the car. Nikrent certified that the run was made without mechanical adjustments or repairs, except replacement of a spring hanger at Indianapolis, and that the car finished in perfect mechanical condition.

ROUTE TO FLORIDA THROUGH MEMPHIS IS ALL-WEATHER

Ingham, passing through Montgomery to Dothan. The markers of Alabama State Highway No. 7 are followed to this point. From Dothan east, through Ashford and Columbia to Blakely local markers are followed, and thereafter Georgia State highway No. 1 is traversed to Bainbridge. At Bainbridge, State highway No. 38 is taken through Thomasville to Quitman. From Quitman State highway No. 33 is followed to the Florida line.

Florida highway No. 9 is traversed to Madison, and thereafter No. 1 to Live Oak, whence a detour is followed to White Springs, whence Highway No. 2 runs to Lake City.

The highway between Birmingham to Marberry is concreted. Gravel is found through Montgomery to Pine Level, and a sand-clay stretch is followed thereafter into Anton. From Anton to Dothan the highway is graveled. Sand-clay is again encountered through Blakely and Bainbridge into Thomasville. Then a short stretch of paving and sand-clay is traversed to Quitman. From Quitman to Madison, Fla., the highway is concreted. Gravel and sand-clay are traversed to Live Oak, and a sand-clay detour brings one into White Springs.

Lake City is reached over a paved road from White Springs. From Lake City, any of the principal cities of Florida can be reached over all-weather roads of concrete or macadam.

The preferable routes from Lake City to the principal Florida resorts, as recommended by the Automobile Club of Missouri, are: Florida No. 2 to Ocala, No. 23 from that place to Plant City, and No. 17 from Plant City to Tampa and St. Petersburg; No. 1 to Jacksonville; No. 2 to Orlando, No. 22 from Orlando to Indian River City, and No. 4 from Indian River City to Palm Beach and Miami.

Claims Gasoline Economy Mark

TIRE DEALERS ELECT MERRILL PRESIDENT

Installing New Officers of Association Is Scheduled for Jan. 11.

James Merrill, president and manager of the Pie-Merrill Tire Co., Inc., was elected president of the St. Louis Tire Dealers' Association at a meeting in the Claridge Hotel, Tuesday night. Other officers chosen were C. V. Quinn, vice president; Joseph Delebar, secretary; A. P. Woehrle, treasurer, and Joseph Kuemmerle, sergeant-at-arms.

Jesse C. Johnston, whose term as president of the association expired Dec. 1, was elected chairman of the board of directors. Other members elected to the board were, W. L. Bowcott, Elmer Hiltz, Walter Gilbert, E. L. Meyer Jr., E. L. Steinman and L. B. Wyner.

Johnston, who presided at the meeting, in a report on the convention of the National Tire Dealers' Association at Memphis, said that while little was accomplished there, the newly elected board of directors is composed of successful men in the tire business, who will work for a stronger national organization.

A vote of confidence in the national board was adopted at the meeting and ordered to be telegraphed to its members who were conferring with the tire manufacturers' officials at Akron, O.

The Better Business Bureau is taking an active interest in the Tire Dealers' Association, which may bring improved conditions in the latter's business in St. Louis, Johnston declared.

Merrill, accepting the new office, asked for co-operation among members to put the association on a better footing in 1927.

The installation of officers is scheduled to take place at a dinner and dance in the Claridge Hotel, Jan. 11.

TWO NEW 6-CYLINDER TRUCKS BROUGHT OUT BY REPUBLIC CO.

Models 50 and 60 Said to Combine Speed With Power; Chassis Are Low-Swung.

The Republic Motor Truck Co., Inc., of Alma, Mich., announces two new, fast, low-slung six-cylinder trucks, models 50 and 60, of which the F. C. Meyer Motor Co., St. Louis distributer, expects to receive a shipment by Jan. 1.

Model 50 has a rated capacity of 1½ to 2 tons, and model 60, 2 to 2½ tons. Both trucks have bevel gear axles. The wheelbase of model 50 is 154 inches, with 142 inches and 170 inches available. The wheelbase of model 60 is 163 inches, with 151 and 179 inches available. Model 50 develops 50 brake horse power, while the model 60 engine develops 70 horse power.

The larger frames are tapered from the forward rear spring hanger to the end; to avoid the usual frame kick-up and at the same time maintain the underslung effect. The distance from the ground to the top of the frame on model 50, is 25½ inches, and on model 60, 26½ inches.

The service brake is mounted on the front propeller shaft at the center bearing support, and consists of a drum with two shoes on a tubular member. The brake is designed for frequent application without overheating. The emergency brakes, the internal expanding type, are on the rear wheels.

Wheels are all-metal. On model 50, 30x5-inch pneumatic tires are standard with dual rears. On model 60, 32x6-inch pneumatic tires are standard, with dual rears.

VICTORY HIGHWAY BODY ELECTS TOPEKAN PRESIDENT

Ben Blow Again Made Manager—No Missourian on Board of Directors.

Ben Blow, who has been re-elected vice president and manager of the Victory Highway Association, was in St. Louis Monday in the interest of the highway, which follows the route of Federal No. 40 from the AtRlantic through St. Louis, Kansas City, Denver and Salt Lake City to San Francisco.

T. C. Whiteker of Topeka, Kan., where the Victory Highway Association has its headquarters, has been elected president of the body. For the first time in years no Missouri man is on the Board of Directors, due, Blow said, to lack of co-operation by this State in working to improve the Victory Highway in other states and in keeping it before the motoring public.

Blow is also field secretary of the National Automobile Club, San Francisco. Membership in this club, Blow said, has increased in about a year from 17,000 to 37,000.

NEW PAIGE CARS EQUIPPED WITH CUSTOM BUILT PISTONS

Custom built pistons are being installed in Paige cars at the factory in Detroit. Officials of the company say these new aluminum alloy pistons differ from those used in any other car.

Last summer the Paige Company sent three cars equipped with these pistons to the Indianapolis Speedway where they were run day and night for 10 days. Each of the cars rolled up 10,000 miles—averaging 1000 miles every 24 hours. A careful account was kept of the oil used and of engine performance.

A Year's Record as a Guide to Buyers

The facts regarding Dodge Brothers sales during 1926 are worth recording. They represent the ever-increasing recognition of fundamental worth and extra value.

As the year draws to a close, the sales approximate 340,000 cars—an increase of more than 30% over 1925.

This again tells the story of public appreciation of dependability, but tells it more impressively than ever before. It reflects the value and importance of the numerous improvements that create an even greater degree of smoothness, silence and ease. It emphasizes the greater comfort and beauty.

The record for 1926, both in engineering progress and sales growth, is the best in Dodge Brothers history. In sum and substance it is nothing less than a helpful guide to every buyer who seeks the largest possible value for each dollar expended.

CHRISTMAS PLANS OF BOY AND GIRL SCOUTS

Community service will be the keynote of St. Louis Boy Scout, Girl Scout, and Campfire Girl activities at Christmas. Nearly every one of the 400 troops in the three organizations has planned a Christmas troop good turn, besides citywide good turns by each organization as a whole. Distribution of baskets of food and packages of toys to needy families, visits with gifts to hospitals and charitable institutions, the singing of Christmas carols, and the conducting of Christmas parties at missions and community houses are among the services planned by individual troops.

The Girl Scout Council week before last exhibited nearly 1000 dolls, made by the girls, to be distributed by children's organizations. The dolls were shown for four days at the Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney store and selected by representatives of the distributors according to individual requests from children under their care. At present 704 of the dolls have been picked by 12 organizations, and others are being taken daily.

The Boy Scouts and the Campfire Girls are co-operating in gathering toys to be mailed to children in the Illinois River flood area. Most of the inhabitants of the flooded district—Grafton to Peoria Riverside—are under the care of the Red Cross, which would not be able to supply the children a Christmas. The Scouts and Campfire Girls will take care of over 500 of these.

Many Boy Scout troops will distribute Christmas carol cards in their neighborhoods. If signed these cards will bring singers to the house Christmas eve. The boys will not sing as scouts, but will join the carolers. Three groups of Girl Scouts, however, will sing at hospitals, Barnes, Shriners', Children's, Bethesda and City Hospital. They will also form part of the night groups singing on the streets.

Scout Troop Notes

J. W. Gepperti, a naval aviator, visited the troop last meeting and spoke on airplanes and first aid. Dr. Weese of Barnes Hospital also visited the troop recently and spoke on first aid and bandaging.

A surprise hike will be held today, rain or shine.

Troop 226 of the Bethany Lutheran Church, is on a week-end hike to the Lions' Den. This is the first trip the troop has made to the camp.

South District.

Scout Executive Earle W. Beckman and Educational Director William J. Puffer of headquarters explained the objectives of the St. Louis Council for 1927 last Wednesday evening to 91 scoutmasters, assistant scoutmasters and troop committeemen attending the annual dinner of the South District scout leaders at the Advent Lutheran Church. All the men present pledged their troops to follow the program. Assistant Scout Executive G. W. Haun spoke on the coming winter camp at Irondale, and Scoutmaster McCoy told of the cabin purchased by the South District and presented to Camp Irondale. The dinner was served by the Ladies' Aid Society of the church.

Three South District troops reregistered last week: Troop 67 of the Madison School, Troop 118 of the Chouteau School and Troop 160 of the Emmanual Methodist Church.

Two new troops are to be organized in the district in the near future, one at the Marvin Memorial Church, Twelfth and Sidney streets, sponsored by the Men's Brotherhood of the church, and the other at the Mount Pleasant School, backed by the school patrons' association. Troop committees have been selected for both troops, and scoutmasters are being considered.

On Dec. 10, six years to the day from the time he joined as a Tenderfoot in Troop 38, Scout Hugo Brenner put in his application for assistant scoutmaster of the troop. He has advanced through the ranks, through assistant patrol leader, patrol leader and scribe and from Tenderfoot to Merit Badge Scout.

ST. LOUIS SCOUT WINS NATION-WIDE ESSAY PRIZE

A nation-wide essay contest conducted by Boys' Life, the official publication of the Boy Scouts of America, has been won by a St. Louis boy, Eagle Scout Charles Guletz of Troop 141, meeting at the Sigel School. For winning the contest, which consisted of 1000-word essays on the reasons why the scout subscribed to Boys' Life, Guletz received a prize of $5.

Guletz, who is 16 years old, has been a scout about two years. He was first in Troop 117, but transferred last March to 141. Passing through the ranks of Tenderfoot, Second Class, First Class, Star and Life Scout in less than two years, he became an Eagle Scout, the highest rank in scouting, last October. As a result, Scoutmaster Thompson made him a junior assistant. He has 23 merit badges.

Baptist Church held its annual parents' night Dec. 3. The program consisted of the depiction of a day in camp, beginning with the early morning and ending with taps.

Troop 27 of the Lafayette Park Baptist Church hiked to Powder Creek on the Geyer road a week ago Saturday. The feature of the day was a trailing hike in the forenoon. Seventeen tests were passed, and three boys became second class.

Troop 34 is now meeting at the New Shenandoah School, Tennessee and Shenandoah avenues. The first meeting was held last Tuesday. Kenneth Allen was appointed senior patrol leader at the meeting, and William Buehl and Dramer Weissenborn were appointed patrol leaders. The troop Fathers' Club also elected officers and planned a definite winter and spring program for the scouts. Among other things decided upon are a fathers' and sons' dinner, the obtaining of a permanent camp site, and the reorganization of the troop drum and bugle corps.

Last Sunday the scouts hiked to Dillon's farm southwest of Jefferson Barracks and put in a day of test-passing and scout games.

Seven scouts and the scoutmaster of Troop 66 hiked to a point south of Jefferson Barracks a week ago yesterday afternoon. Several tests were passed.

The troop committee of Troop 189 met before the troop meeting last Friday evening, to plan activities for the troop for the coming year. They also voted to attend the South District dinner in a body.

Twenty-one scouts and six adult leaders of Troop 245 took an overnight hike to a cabin on the Meramec River near Fenton, Dec. 4 and 5. Night stunts, including night raiding games and flashlight games, featured the hike. The troop attended church en masse Sunday morning. Sixteen tests were passed on the hike.

Troop 250 held a reorganization meeting a week ago Thursday under the new Scoutmaster, Robert Spohr, who was a scout himself several years ago. The 18 scouts who were present spent most of their time on tenderfoot work.

West District.

The West District Leaders' Association will hold its annual dinner at 6:30 o'clock tomorrow night at the Pilgrim Congregational Church. Scoutmasters, Assistant Scoutmasters and Troop Committeemen from West District troops have been invited to attend. Music will be furnished by the orchestra of Troop 59, which will be further represented by the scoutmaster and all but one of the six Troop Committeemen.

The Assistant Scoutmaster and Senior Patrol Leader of Troop 46 gave a demonstration of outdoor cooking at the last meeting of the troop, using a charcoal fire. Biscuits were baked under a tin can, and meat broiled on a wooden "backwoods broiler." Samples of the cooking were distributed among the scouts.

Some of the scouts are to distribute gifts to poor families Christmas day.

Scouts Andrews and Shepard were made Assistant Scoutmasters at the last meeting of Troop 82. Lawrence Mendonso became patrol leader of the Wolves, and John Yonker patrol leader of the Beaver patrol. Tansel Clements and Alvin Yonkers are the assistants, and Charles Schwerdtmann of the Wolves became scribe.

Assistant Scoutmasters Newton and Miller and Troop Committeeman Sproul took the scouts of Troop 101 of the West Park Baptist Church on an overnight hike to e clubhouse near Fenton last Saturday and Sunday. After a meal of stew, the boys hiked to Fenton, while a treasure trail was being laid. A hunt for the "treasure," conducted by translating messages in various codes, occupied the evening. The "treasure" proved to be a bag of pecans.

After breakfast the next morning the boys were divided into two groups, for a nature observation contest. One under Scout Rathenberg identified the larger number of natural specimens, and was declared winner. Sunday school services were held in a natural amphitheater.

Troop 119 of the Shaare Zadek Congregation held a reorganization meeting last week and elected Abe Trieman senior patrol leader and Joe Astor scribe. New patrols were formed, and leaders elected to each, Aaron Chelist becoming patrol leader of the Eagle Patrol, Sam Schnibman of the Pine Tree Patrol, Neal Nathanson of the Beavers and Henry Weiner of the Bear Patrol. A new merit system was established, under the supervision of the senior patrol leader, together with a patrol project system that will give each patrol something definite to do every meeting.

Suburban District.

Troop 85 reregistered last week with 70 Scouts, including associates, many of whom, formerly active Scouts, are now married.

Central 1 held its first organization meeting last Thursday evening at the Central School, Price and Bonhomme roads. W. A. Schwalbert, former scoutmaster of Troop 67, is scoutmaster of the new troop. Field Executive M. N. Leavitt attended the meeting, and spoke to the boys on the activities and purposes of scouting.

Troop 2, Overland, held its first Parents' Night Dec. 10. The boys dramatized the various Scout laws and demonstrated a number of Scout activities. The evening wound up with a campfire scene, stories and songs. Later the troop was congratulated by Troop 1, Overland, for the completeness of the program. Scoutmaster Evers of Overland 2 was formerly a committeeman of Overland 1.

Troops 153, Webster Groves 15 and Pacific 1 are due to reregister before January, and Webster Groves 6, Webster Groves 11 and Maryland Heights 1 are due in January. Webster Groves 15 held a birthday dinner and completed reregistration in one evening.

Troop 3, Webster Groves, is planning the distribution of Christmas baskets to needy families on Christmas eve. The Scouts have also organized a six-piece orchestra.

Girl Scout Activities

The girls of Arrowhead Troop 7 devoted their last meeting to practicing a play they will give at the City Infirmary Dec. 22. The troop hiked to Sugar Creek, near Kirkwood, last Sunday, returning by way of Osage Hills.

The older scouts of Coenia Troop 56 spent the last meeting answering a questionnaire sent out by the national headquarters. The others passed parts of their Tenderfoot tests.

NEGRO OPERETTA WEDNESDAY

Will Be Presented at Odeon to Show Advance of Race.

Designed to portray the advancement of the Negro in music and literature since the days of the Civil War, the operetta, "Arrival of the Negro," will be presented next Wednesday night at the Odeon Theater, with a cast of 200 persons. Proceeds will go toward establishment of a community camp for Negro women and girls under auspices of Wheatley Branch, Y. W. C. A.

The production in St. Louis will be directed by the composer, J. Berni Barbour, of New York. The operetta was given in New York last Nov. 23.

Sermon on "This Way to Christmas."

The Rev. Dwight Bradley, pastor of First Congregational Church, Webster Groves, will preach at 11 a. m. today on "This Way to Christmas," with a vesper book-sermon at 5 p. m. on Lewis Browne's "This Believing World."

CONGRESSMAN WILL TRAIL CATTLE AGAIN

Hudspeth Will Follow 1000 Head 250 Miles Over Trails in Texas.

By the Associated Press.

ALPINE, Tex., Dec. 18.—A chaparejos-adorned member of Congress, cowboy from head to foot, soon is to duplicate a scene common in Texas 50 years ago.

Claude B. Hudspeth of El Paso has bought a 1500-acre ranch in the mountains and expects to "trail" 1000 head of registered cattle from his ranch near Del Rio, Tex., on the Mexican border, to the new ranch in Brewster County, a distance of 250 miles.

The moving of these cattle overland, across mountains and over the unmarked plains of Southeast Texas, is looked upon as a feat which only the old-time cattlemen could accomplish.

Congressman Hudspeth, a cowboy who came to this country with a printing press strapped on his saddle horn, will be one of the cowboys in charge of the herd.

It will be impossible to travel the highways on account of automobiles, and rail transportation is out of the question because the ranch is remote from any railroad.

One of the greatest obstacles will be fording rivers. The largest stream they will have to cross is the Pecos. Cowboys, cattle and horses will have to swim this river, just as the covered-wagon pioneers did it.

Not since the '70s, when cattle were driven by the thousands over well-marked trails to railroad terminals in Kansas, and to the Pacific coast, has there been such a scene in real life as the Texas Congressman is undertaking.

Much of the route will be through mountain canyons, where the cowboys must camp for days, far from civilization, while the herd creeps forward a few miles a day.

Hudspeth started in East Texas as a printer's devil. When 16, feeling the call of the West, he mounted a pony and rode to Ozona, in West Texas, where he started a newspaper. Ill health led him to the outdoor life of the ranches.

QUEEN OF SPAIN VISITS MOULIN ROUGE IN PARIS

Insists Upon Seeing Attractions Enjoyed by King Alfonso a Few Weeks Before.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 16.—Queen Victoria of Spain is an up-to-date sovereign who wants to see everything interesting when she visits Paris particularly if King Alfonso already has had a chance to see it.

After dutifully attending the classic Comedie-Francaise and the opera, on her last visit here, the Queen expressed a desire to go to the Moulin Rouge to see the revue. The Police Commissary assigned as escort threw up his hands in horror.

"But your majesty!" he remonstrated. "The protocol, has your majesty thought of that?" By the "protocol" he meant the agreement between Powers to protect visiting dignitaries against any situation which might be regarded as unworthy of their position.

"Yes," heplied the somewhat nonplussed police official.

"Well, he told me you took him to the Moulin Rouge," the Queen resumed, imperturbably, "so I see no reason for my not going there as well." Her majesty went.

BRITISH SEEK TO BUY EXILE HOME OF 'MAN IN IRON MASK'

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—Plans of the French Government to sell the Island of Ste. Marguerite, where the "Man in the Iron Mask" was imprisoned for 10 years, have met with much antagonism.

The report that British capital was planning to turn the island into a model winter resort has brought protestations from every part of the Riviera. The district is already objecting to the numerous subdivisions financed by foreign capital.

The Island of Ste. Marguerite, which is about four miles in circumference, is situated at the mouth of Cannes Bay. The "Man in the Iron Mask," made famous by Dumas, was incarcerated in the Ste. Marguerite fortress in 1687. History still disputes his identity. In 1878 Marshal Bazaine, who was accused of treason in surrendering Metz to the Prussians, was an inmate of the prison. He succeeded in escaping the following year.

It is reported that the French Government has been offered a large sum for the island, but newspapers and societies are fighting the proposal.

Queen Mary Plays "Spilliwobble."

LONDON, Dec. 18.—"Spilliwobble" has invaded Buckingham Palace. It is a new game and was seen for the first time by Queen Mary at the Dolls' Hospital when she was inspecting toys. The Queen had a good laugh when "Spilliwobble" was shown her. She took much interest in endeavoring to make the little balls run into cups by means of a magnet. The attempt failed, much to the Queen's amusement, so she ordered a set for the palace. She thought also the King might be interested in "Spilliwobble."

ALL BUT FOUR MEMBERS OF POINCARE CABINET AUTHORS

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—Nine of the 13 Ministers in Poincare's cabinet are authors. Poincare himself and Barthou, his Minister of Justice are members of the French academy. Ministers of War Painleve, produced some noted mathematical treatises as well as war books. He belongs to the Academy of Sciences.

Briand, Foreign Minister has published the speeches he delivered when the separation of church and state was effected in France. Sarraut, his colleague of the Interior, has written several books on civil government.

Herriot, Minister of Education, is perhaps the most versatile writer in the cabinet. His fields of endeavor include literary biography ("Mme. Racamier"), political science ("To Create," "To Act"), nature description ("The Norman Forest"), and travel sketches of Germany, Russia and America.

Andre Tardieu, Minister of Public Works, has published "America in Arms."

The poet of the cabinet is Georges Leygues, Minister of Marine, who, besides two volumes of verse, has a life of his distinguished predecessor, Colbert, and a pedagogical work to his credit. Leon Ferrier, Minister of Colonies, has published two books on fishing and fish culture.

SCHUMANN-HEINK SINGS ON KSD TONIGHT

World - Famous Contralto to Give Program of Nine Numbers in Atwater Kent Hour.

Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, famous contralto, is to sing from KSD in the Atwater-Kent Radio Hour, at 8:15, Central Time, tonight. Mme. Schumann-Heink for years has been recognized as probably the world's greatest contralto, and for 50 years has been a singer of outstanding note. The year 1926 marks her golden jubilee as a singer, her sixty-fifth birthday and her twentieth anniversary as an American citizen.

She was born in Austria in 1861. Her father was a Bohemian, a poorly paid army officer, and her mother was an Italian.

She was placed in the Ursuline Convent at Prague when she was 12 and it was there that a nun discovered her remarkable voice. She was designated to sing in the Cathedral, where Mme. le Claire, French prima donna, heard her and begged to give her lessons. So her family moved to Gratz, where Mme. le Claire lived, and Excellence Benedek, a well-to-do army officer, provided funds for her lessons for several years.

Then he sent her to the director of the Hof Opera in Vienna. The director looked at her, and said, "With such a face and no personality she could never hope to be a singer. She might better go home and run a sewing machine." Undaunted, she made a successful concert debut in Gratz and went to Dresden to study under Franz M. Wuellner. It was not long before she made her operatic debut as Azucena in "Il Trovatore" at the Dresden Opera. She remained with this royal opera company for four years, being married in the third year, and then progressed to Hamburg. Her husband died there, leaving five children and pitifully small pay.

During an engagement in Berlin Opera she met Lillian Nordica, who took an interest in her and urged her to go to America. But she was first to have the honor of singing in the Wagnerian shrine at Bayreuth. For two years Maurice Grau, impresario of the Metropolitan Opera in New York, tried to engage her for America, but another contract with the Hamburg Opera prevented her coming here until 1899. The American public took Schumann-Heink, singer and mother, straight to its heart. From $8 a performance in the Hamburg Opera she soon earned more than $180,000 in a single year.

Mme. Schumann-Heink this evening will be assisted by Miss Florence Hardeman, violinist, and the Atwater Kent Orchestra, under direction of Louis Edlin. Stewart Willie will be her accompanist. The program of the evening will be as follows:

Overture: Henry the VIII Dance—

JOHN M'CORMACK ON KSD NEW YEAR'S DAY

Rosa Ponselle, Mischa Elman, the Violinist and Cortot, the Pianist, on Same Program.

With John McCormack, famous tenor, heading four operatic and concert artists of world-wide reputation in one of radio's greatest programs, KSD will make the evening of New Year's day long to be remembered.

McCormack, Rosa Ponselle, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera; Mischa Elman, the violinist, and Alfred Cortot, one of the great pianists, will give from KSD a New Year's concert of two hours sponsored by the Victor Talking Machine Co. With them will be heard the Victor Salon Orchestra under direction of Nathaniel Shilkret.

Three of the artists will be heard on the air for the first time. McCormack has been heard on each of two previous Victor New Year's programs in the East.

Elman is being heard in concerts this season with the Elman String Quartette. The Jan. 1 broadcast will be not only his first appearance before the microphone, but also his first solo concert of the season. He will sail for Europe a few days after the Victor presentation on KSD.

Cortot also will sail for Europe soon after the concert. He is now on a concert tour which is announced as his last in America for two years.

VIKINGS TO GIVE CHRISTMAS PROGRAM TUESDAY EVENING

The half hour of the Vikings from KSD on Tuesday evening, from 7 to 7:30 o'clock, will be given over to a presentation supposed to be given by a party returning to Vikingland by steamer to observe the Christmas holiday. The Viking instrumental quartet and Edwin Whitney, nationally known play interpreter, will present this program from the Viking Christmas Ship forging through turbulent wintry sea.

Whitney will read from two stories of the famous Hans Christian Anderson, one of them being "The Little Match Girl." One of his most unusual specialties was his appearance in Chautauqua, in a portrayal of all of the 21 characters of the play "Turn to the Right." He was a member of the Whitney Brothers' Quartet, which was one of the first to make phonographic records.

The selections to be offered by the Viking Instrumental Quartet Tuesday evening will be as follows: "Julefest" (Christmas hymn); "Juiestiminung" (Christmas spirit); "Jule" (Tree song); "Around the Jule Tree (march); "Christmas Dance"; "Den Lille Misse" (Christmas Elf); "Beautiful Is the Earth."

His football record is one of the best. He played four years on the Rutgers' team and was named on an all-America football team.

From time to time he has appeared on the New York stage, one of his vehicles being "Emperor Jones." He was seen this year in "Black Boy." He made his first public appearance on the concert stage in April, 1925, when he and his associate, Lawrence Brown, who will be his accompanist in his broadcast program, gave the first concert of all Negro music ever given by individual artists on any stage.

TALES OF HOFFMAN' ON KSD TOMORROW NIGHT

The WEAF Grand Opera Company will present a tabloid version of "Tales of Hoffman" under the direction of Cesare Sodero for the audience of KSD, at 9 o'clock central time tomorrow evening. This production has been given by the WEAF Grand Opera Company several times and is one of the most popular of the many given by this talented group.

The soloists who will be heard tomorrow evening will include: Hoffman, Guiseppe di Benedetto, tenor; Olympia, Genia Zelinska, soprano; Dr. Miracle, Carl Rollins, baritone; Niklausse, Devora Nadworney, contralto; Giuletta, Frances Sebel, soprano.

"Tales of Hoffman" is a fantastic opera in three acts composed by Jacques Offenbach, and is the masterpiece of this composer. It was composed in the summer of 1880, but Offenbach died before its first performance, which was given in the Opera Comique in Paris, February, 1881. The libretto was written by Jules Barbier and was founded on three tales of the gifted writer, E. Th. A. Hoffman.

The first act really serves as a prologue to the opera and shows a scene in a tavern with students drinking; Hoffman, the hero of the opera, is singing for their entertainment and sings of three of his peculiar adventures. The first of these shows Hoffman as a pupil in the house of Spalanzani, a famous scientist. While there, he falls in love with Olympia, whom he believes is Spalanzani's daughter. Olympia, however, is a mere automaton made by the scientist and can talk, sing and dance like a human being. Hoffman's first bitter adventure ends when the doll is broken to bits.

The second of his peculiar tales shifts the scene to Venice and deals with Giulietta, who is a creature under the sway of Dapertutto but in love with Schlemihl. Hoffman kills Schlemihl, but Dapertutto flees with Giulietta, ending Hoffman's second adventure. In this act occurs the famous "Barcarolle."

The third adventure concerns Antonia, a beautiful singer afflicted with consumption. Her father has forbidden her to sing because in her weakened condition the effort taxes her strength. Realizing that Hoffman has fallen in love with her, the father orders her confined to the house and instructs the servant, Franz, to keep Hoffman from seeing her. Franz, however, being deaf and not properly hearing the instructions concerning Hoffman, welcomes him when he comes to the house. Hoffman learns the secret and the reason for Antonia's confinement and forces her to promise him that she never will sing again. However, a little later she breaks this promise due to the goading of Dr. Miracle, her evil genius. The song sung for Dr. Miracle causes her death and thus brings Hoffman's third love affair to a tragic ending.

The epilogue goes back to the wine shop with the same scene for the prologue. The Muse of Art comes and offers Hoffman consolation as a balm for his wounded heart. The visit of the muse fills Hoffman with joy, but soon he falls asleep, overcome by drink, bringing the opera to a close.

Acme Enclosed Free Edge Cones and Acme Reproducing Units, (Designed for use exclusively with the free edge cone) eliminate resonance and preserve the tones, pure, round and clear. A fixed edge cone, to produce the same results, would have to be three times the diameter, too clumsy for your living-room. High notes are reproduced toward the center of the cone; low notes, toward the edge. The laws of vibration make it possible to produce low notes with a small cone, provided the edge is free and enclosed, and provided the reproducing unit is especially designed for use with a free edge cone.

"...I've said before that radio sounded as if the orchestra or the singer were right in the same room with me, and now with my new Acme Speaker I say it again. But I realize, that until now, I never really meant it...."

The wonderful new Acme Loud Speaker successfully reproduces voices and music in your own home as clearly as they were originally created in the broadcasting studio. It reproduces the voice of the singer in all its thrilling, tender beauty. It brings out the different personality in each voice, so that you can tell one voice from another. It recreates orchestral music so clearly that you can hear each instrument playing. It reproduces low notes and tones as clearly as high notes and tones. You hear the bass and treble, harmony and melody.

All this was not done in a moment, Acme engineers worked five years and made 256 experimental speakers, before they arrived at the new Acme Enclosed Free Edge Cone and Acme Reproducing Unit, which together are responsible for this great increase in radio enjoyment.

From time to time he has appeared on the New York stage, one of his vehicles being "Emperor Jones." He was seen this year in "Black Boy." He made his first public appearance on the concert stage in April, 1925, when he and his associate, Lawrence Brown, who will be his accompanist in his broadcast program, gave the first concert of all Negro music ever given by individual artists on any stage.

The program for this broadcast follows:

The WEAF Grand Opera Company will present a tabloid version of "Tales of Hoffman" under the direction of Cesare Sodero for the audience of KSD, at 9 o'clock central time tomorrow evening. This production has been given by the WEAF Grand Opera Company several times and is one of the most popular of the many given by this talented group.

The soloists who will be heard tomorrow evening will include: Hoffman, Guiseppe di Benedetto, tenor; Olympia, Genia Zelinska, soprano; Dr. Miracle, Carl Rollins, baritone; Niklausse, Devora Nadworney, contralto; Giulietta, Frances Sebel, soprano.

"Tales of Hoffman" is a fantastic opera in three acts composed by Jacques Offenbach, and is the masterpiece of this composer. It was composed in the summer of 1880, but Offenbach died before its first performance, which was given in the Opera Comique in Paris, February, 1881. The libretto was written by Jules Barbier and was founded on three tales of the gifted writer, E. Th. A. Hoffman.

The first act really serves as a prologue to the opera and shows a scene in a tavern with students drinking) Hoffman, the hero of the opera, is singing for their entertainment and sings of three of his peculiar adventures. The first of these shows Hoffman as a pupil in the house of Spalanzani, a famous scientist. While there, he falls in love with Olympia, whom he believes is Spalanzani's daughter. Olympia, however, is a mere automaton made by the scientist and can talk, sing and dance like a human being. Hoffman's first adventure ends when the doll is broken to bits.

The second of his peculiar tales shifts the scene to Venice and deals with Giulietta, who is a creature under the sway of Dapertutto but in love with Schlemihl. Hoffman kills Schlemihl, but Dapertutto flees with Giulietta, ending Hoffman's second adventure. In this act occurs the famous "Barcarolle."

The third adventure concerns Antonia, a beautiful singer afflicted with consumption. Her father has forbidden her to sing because of her weakened condition the effort taxes her strength. Realizing that Hoffman has fallen in love with her, the father orders her confined to the house and instructs the servant, Franz, to keep Hoffman from seeing her. Franz, however, being deaf and not properly hearing the instructions concerning Hoffman, welcomes him when he comes to the house. Hoffman learns the secret and the reason for Antonia's confinement and forces her to promise him that she never will sing again. However, a little later she breaks this promise due to the goading of Dr. Miracle, her evil genius. The song sung for Dr. Miracle causes her death and thus brings Hoffman's third love affair to a tragic ending.

The epilogue goes back to the wine shop with the same scene for the prologue. The Muse of Art comes and offers Hoffman consolation as a balm for his wounded heart. The visit of the muse fills Hoffman with joy, but soon he falls asleep, overcome by drink, bringing the opera to a close.

Arndt and a program consisting of duets by Misses Ella Joraschky, soprano, and Mabel Wierhake, alto, and trios by Miss Joraschky, Miss Marguerite Kohrs and Miss Wierhake.

Program for Old Cathedral Mass.

The solemn high mass at midnight Christmas eve will bring also a brief sermon by the Rev. J. Anthony de Moor. At this mass, as well as at the second solemn high mass at 10 o'clock Christmas day morning (this second mass is not to be broadcast) the Old Cathedral choir will render the following program:

Novel Organ Recital.

From 2 until 3 o'clock KSD will broadcast a novel recital on the organ at Station WLW, which will be transmitted from Cincinnati to New York and retransmitted to KSD and its allied stations for broadcasting.

Three organists have been engaged to play this special Christmas concert. They are Paul Staderman, Lillian Flogstedt and Johanna Grosse.

The program is the Christmas gift of Powel Crosley Jr. to the radio audience. The WLW studio organ has been heard the last two years by radio listeners through the greater part of the country.

The program will be widely varied, beginning with beautiful Christmas carols, continuing with such melodies as "To a Wild Rose" and some of Victor Herbert's works, popular hits of 1926, well-known melodies, such as Handel's "Largo," and melodies of the season.

Graham McNamee will make the introductory and concluding announcements. A brief address will be made by Powel Crosby, president of the Crosley Radio Corporation.

Other Afternoon Features.

From 3 to 3:30 o'clock, the South Sea Islanders, who are well known to KSD's audience, will give a special program.

At 3:30, a special Eveready hour program will begin and will continue for an hour.

At 4:30 the Smith Brothers, a KSD feature act, will go on the air for half an hour.

Handel's "Messiah" at 6:30.

At 6:30 will begin the broadcasting from New York of the most famous of all oratorios, Handel's "Messiah." The soloists will be Alice Godillot, soprano; Litta Grimm, contralto; Charles Harrison, tenor, and Wilfred Glenn, baritone. They will be assisted by a chorus and orchestra. All are singers of note.

"Messiah," which is popularly regarded as Handel's greatest work, was composed by him in only 23 days in 1741, and was first produced a year later in Dublin, Ireland. Possibly, its most famous single number is the sounding "Hallejuah Chorus."

New York Symphony Program.

At 8 o'clock, KSD will broadcast a concert by the New York Symphony Orchestra, Walter Damrosch conducting. The first number will be the Pastorale, "There Were Shepherds in the Fields," from Handel's "Messiah." Other numbers will be:

Spanish rhapsody, Chabrier; Pizzicati for strings from Symphony No. 4, Tschaikowsky; (a) "In the Spinning Room," Dvorak; (b) "Moment Musicale," Schubert; waltz, "The Beautiful Blue Danube," Strauss.

The French composer, Chabrier, represented here by his popular orchestral work, "Spanish Rhapsody," also composed several operas and many piano pieces. He died in Paris in 1894.

Lovers of string music delight in the Pizzicati for strings from Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony. Tschaikowsky, who is probably best known for his "Symphony Pathetique," was ultra-Slavonic in his choice of material, seeking strongly defined rhythm and bizarre effects with a general disregard of classic tradition.

The Bohemian composer, Dvorak, directed the National Conservatory in New York from 1892 to 1895. While in this country he advised the upbuilding of a national school based on plantation music, and even attempted to embody the elements he suggested in his "From the New World" symphony. Both in his chamber music and in song Dvorak created a wealth of melody.

Schubert's "Moment Musical" is known to every concert-goer. Damrosch has already given a part of Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony" in a Balkite hour.

Strauss' popular "Blue Danube" waltz is only one of nearly 500 dance pieces written by this popular Austrian composer. For years he was director of the court balls in Vienna. In 1872 he made a concert trip to America.

At 9 o'clock there will be a brief recital from New York by Harvey Hindermeyer, tenor.

Then there will be an hour and a half of dance music from Le Perroquet de Paris and Vincent Lopez' orchestra.

Watt and Kilowatt.

The unit of electrical power is the watt. A watt is the "power" represented by a current of one ampere flowing under a pressure of one volt. A kilowatt is 1000 watts.

CHANGE IN WJZ SCHEDULE

Henceforth the Sixty White Minutes will be heard from WJZ at 8 o'clock Tuesday nights instead of Wednesday nights. The next broadcasting of this feature will take place at 8 o'clock next Tuesday night.

Jack Denny and his Club Frivolity Orchestra will furnish the orchestral music and support the soloists, Frank Munn, tenor, and Virginia Rea, soprano. Virginia Rea in the broadcast on Dec. 21 will be heard in two selections, "The Forest Song" from De Koven's opera "Robin Hood" and "Little Batteau," the latter selection being one seldom heard in broadcast circles. Munn will sing, "All the World Is a Garden of Love" and "The Voice with a Smile." Two vocal duets by Frank Munn and Virginia Rea will be featured, the first being "The Angelus" from the musical comedy, "Sweethearts," the other, "My Gift to You."

HARRY RESER A REAL MUSICIAN

Harry Reser, who directs the Clicquot Club Eskimos, heard from KSD each Thursday evening at 8 o'clock central time, is a real personality in broadcasting.

Reser was born in Ohio and is said to be a direct descendant of Davy Crockett. His musical education began early and at the age of 5 he was reputed to be an excellent guitar player. At 7, he began to study the violin. After graduating from high school, he started as a clerk in a railroad freight office.

His music career as a profession began when he answered an advertisement for a pianist and was successful in getting the job. After playing the piano for some time, he took up the banjo. He was banjo soloist at Shea's Hippodrome Theater in Buffalo and joined Paul Whiteman as banjo soloist for his London engagement.

The scene is laid in the Seventeenth Century in Venice and the complicated plot deals with the loves and jealousies of the street singer, La Gioconda; Enzo Grimaldo, a nobleman beloved by Gioconda; Alvise Badoero, the inquisitor, his wife Laura who is engaged in an affair with Enzo, and the spy, Barnaba. La Gioconda saves her rival Laura and stabs herself.

The opening selection in this broadcast will be Moskowsky's "Malaguena," which will be followed by the playing of Holmes' Tone Poem, "Land of the Blue Sky." There will be two parts of the latter selection, first, "Prayer at Dawn," and second, "By the Sea." Other selections will be the "Air on G String," of Bach, and a composition infrequently heard, "Frightened Birds," by Frank Lionel Curtis. This broadcast will end with Schubert's "Minuet."

WBBM PLANS RADIO VISIT TO BETHLEHEM

Tour to Birthplace of Christ and Other Holy Land Shrines to Be Broadcast.

A radio visit to the birthplace of Christ will be broadcast by WBBM (226M) at 8:15 Wednesday night, when "Speed Buggy," with Billy Spears, travel talker, and Fred L. Jeske, will visit the Holy Land.

The grotto which tradition says is the birthplace of Jesus is the site of the Church of the Nativity, built by the Emperor Constantine in 330 A. D. Within the church radio tourists will see the Shrine of the Nativity on which are 15 lamps whose flames are never allowed to die.

From Bethlehem to Jerusalem the radio tour will follow the route taken by the Wise Men from the East. It will pass the field where the shepherds watched their flocks by night and saw the star in the East.

On the night after Christmas, Sunday, Dec. 26, the "Speed Buggy" will go to Egypt. It was into Egypt that Mary and Joseph fled with the infant Jesus, to escape the persecution of Herod.

RUSSIAN MUSIC ON WBBM

Music by Russian composers will be broadcast at 8:15 Tuesday night, Dec. 21, from the Stewart-Warner Air Theater, WBBM (226M).

Dan Baker, tenor, will sing Rimsky-Korsakow's "Song of the Shepherd Lehl." His Concerto in C sharp minor will be played by Lester D. Mather, concert pianist, with Martin Carlisle, piano; Norman Sherr, organ, and Charles Quinn, violin.

A string quartette number by Tschaikowsky, arranged for a trio, will be played by Charles Quinn and Miriam Hadley, violins, and Peter Quinn, cello. They also will play "The Lark," by Glinka.

Hazel McBroom, contralto, will sing "Pine Tree" by Balakireff, one of the founders of the Russian school of music.

"Little Prelude," a number written in no particular key, and an Etude in G sharp minor, both by Scriabin, will be played by Mather, who will also play excerpts from "Pictures at an Exhibition," by Moussorgsky.

WILLIAM STRUEBER TO SING CHRISTMAS NIGHT FROM KMOX

William Strueber, baritone, will sing from KMOX Christmas night at 8 o'clock. He will be accompanied by Maud Mueller.

Strueber was one of the soloists with the St. Louis Symphony last year, and recently returned from the East where he has been studying and doing concert work. He had several years' stage work in various Victor Herbert operas and was a soloist at the opening of the Famous Players' Theater in Boston several months ago.

Strueber has arranged the following program for Christmas night: "Silent Night, Holy Night," Gruber. "Trees," Oscar Rasbach. "Even Bravest Heart May Swell," from "Faust," Gounod. Piano selections, Maud Mueller. "Because," Guy d' Hardelot. "Who Knows," Ball. Duet, Mr. Strueber and Miss Mueller. "Holy Night," Adam.

CONTRALTO SINGS FROM WJZ

Grace Divine, contralto, will give a brief recital from Station WJZ at 6:45 o'clock Tuesday night. She has devoted much time to song interpretation with Frank La Forge. Miss Divine has sung with the San Carlo Opera Co.

In her broadcast recital, she will sing "Madchenfluch" (Brahms), "Zueignung" (Strauss), "Men Min Fogel" (Sibelius) and "Ungeduld" (Schubert).

Harmonated Reception
"The Last Word in Radio"

THE Discriminating Radio Public has been quick to respond. From Coast to Coast enthusiastic letters come in with every mail. They say the Fada 8 excels in tone, volume, selectivity and distance. They report as many as 93 stations logged in two nights. They are amazed at the perfect selectivity despite the presence of powerful nearby broadcasting stations or close wave lengths. They say it's the last word in radio. Well—it is. Let your hearing be your guide.

MISS MARJORIE NIEDRINGHAUS

Palm Beach Is S... Country Club f...

A PAINTER'S dream of enchanting Palm Beach, with its colorful Spanish architecture and its graceful palms, was realized in miniature Friday night at the St. Louis Country Club, where a fashionably gowned company gathered to pay homage to one of the season's loveliest buds—Miss Anne Kennard Wallace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brookings Wallace, at her debut party.

A Southern moon shone over imaginary ocean and gleamed through silvery Spanish moss which hung everywhere on the vines and foliage which covered the walls. Broad green branches of three score banana trees dipped gently overhead as if swayed by breezes of the Southland. Octagonal shades of various sizes covered with conventional Spanish designs in brilliant colors covered the dozens of lights.

In such a setting the dinner tables were laid, simulating the smart out-of-door restaurant so popular in the famous winter resort, each decorated with vases of the yellow roses of the South, sweetpeas and baby's breath, interspersed with lighted green candles. Long windows were converted into make-believe doorways of surrounding homes, with gay striped awnings swinging over them.

The patio of a Spanish hacienda was built literally into the lounge of the club. Through arched doorways might be caught glimpses of interiors with chintz covered furniture and fireplaces, and in corners were gilded towers, suggestive of the medieval. About the second floor, was a balcony, with palms and ferns overhanging its ledge.

The receiving party, Miss Wallace, her parents, and her guest, Miss Anne Marvel of Wilmington, Del., stood at the entrance of the house itself, surrounded by thousands of flowers arranged in beautiful baskets. Behind them rose double marble stairways covered in bright red carpet to a broad terraced veranda where an orchestra twanged Southern airs on banjos during the reception. An awning shaded the front of the house, and upon entering through one of the passageways one found a tea garden with a fountain playing in the center.

The reception room of the club was canopied with bright colors to represent the entrance to a house where a party might be in progress, and more of the moss and palm decorations were in evidence. Here deep cushioned chairs and lounges were provided for the comfort of the guests. Even the dance orchestra had its own balcony with carpeted steps leading to the interior, and a wooden grating about the edge.

Miss Wallace wore the white satin and chiffon gown embroidered in rhinestone and pearls, in which she appeared as a special maid of honor to the Queen at the Veiled Prophet ball, and carried an arm bouquet of yellow roses. Mrs. Wallace was in pink chiffon adorned in mirror crystals and carried "Arch Criminals Evade Punishment"

Senator Heflin denounces the Fall-Doheny verdict as a travesty on justice.

Nature is more inexorable than man in meting out punishments. Sometimes the penalties of man-made laws are evaded, but never those of Nature.

Eyestrain headaches and other annoying symptoms give ample notice that all is not well with your eyes.

Have your eyes examined without delay and secure proper Glasses to correct your particular defect of vision, or Nature will inflict severe penalties without fear or favor.

For 25 years I have specialized in the correction of visual defects solely by means of proper Glasses. My Scientific System of Eye-Testing has been uniformly successful in over 30,000 cases.

500 POINSETTIAS IN SHAW'S GARDEN CHRISTMAS SHOW

"Mexican Flame-Flower" Really Is Not a Flower at All in Its Present Stage.

The annual Christmas show of poinsettias has opened in the Floral Display House at Shaw's Garden, with more than 500 shown in white and pink as well as the favored scarlet of the Christmas flower, or "Mexican flame-flower."

Actually, the vivid "flowers" are pseudo-flowers, like the dogwood "blossoms," and the real flower is an insignificant affair of dull yellow and green.

The display will continue through the holiday season.

"Ingaluk" approves "Furs of Dependable Quality"

Note: Ingaluk was greatly amazed at the wonderful transition of the Furs from the raw pelt that he was accustomed to seeing to the gorgeous Fur garments on display at Leppert-Roos.

FUR—the clothing of the people of the frozen North where clothing warmth against the bitter cold and clothing sturdiness against their rugged life, is the principal prop of their existence.

Those are the qualities of Fur—warmth and durability.

Outer clothing warmth for a people whose blood has been thinned by our extreme Summer weather, is essential during our Winter months, and the durable quality—the regal appearance and the wisdom used in designing our fur coats, makes them an ideal and lasting gift—and an excellent investment.

You are cordially invited to visit our store and look over our pretentious line of fur coats and other garments exquisitely designed of carefully picked pelts.

Another Proverb

The proverb "Time and tide wait for no man" will live forever, but with the present trend of Americans it could appropriately be changed to read: Americans wait for neither time nor tide.

Life seems to be a regular "Rugby" game.

Even children "want it now"; a slogan reads "do it now"; marriages are often "hurry-up" affairs; the public shouts "let's go."

Unnecessary sacrifice of lives is a daily occurrence because of it. Are we LOSING or NOT USING our reasoning powers?

22-STORY LOFT BUILDING PLANNED BY HADLEY-DEAN

To Replace Present Structure at Eleventh and Lucas — Five-Story Structure Also to Be Built.

Skyscraper Is to Be Leased —Both Buildings to Involve Investment of More Than $2,000,000.

By Berry Moore.

Plans were disclosed yesterday by the Hadley-Dean Glass Co. for the erection of a 22-story loft building at the northwest corner of Eleventh street and Lucas avenue, and for a five-story fireproof building at the northwest corner of Eleventh and Morgan streets. The company now occupies a seven story building on the Lucas avenue corner.

Under prevailing cost of construction, the two buildings, with the sites, will entail an expenditure of $2,000,000 or more. L. G. Hadley is president of the company which was established in the Eleventh and Lucas avenue building 30 years ago. Both buildings will be financed fro the resources of the Hadley-Dean Co.

Designed as the future quarters of the glass company, the five-story building will be built first. Construction will be of reinforced concrete and fireproof, with both the Morgan and the Eleventh street fronts of Sani Onyx glass, a comparatively new composition for exterior finish, as a distinguishing feature. Gravity conveyors and the latest appliances for the fast handling of glass will be installed.

Additional Stories Possible.

A building that will eclipse anything of the kind in the country is contemplated. It will be constructed to permit additional stories, in order to provide for future expansion. The entire site, having a frontage of 237 feet on Eleventh and 125 feet on Morgan, will be occupied by the new building. Cornet & Zelbig conducted negotiations for the site which was assembled piece-meal, and for which a record price was paid.

Polished plate glass, manufactured by the Edward Ford Plate Glass Co. of Rossford, Ohio, and the products of the Libby Owens Window Glass Co., at Toledo, Ohio, are distributed by the Hadley-Dean Co. in the seven states tributary to St. Louis. All kinds of mirrors also are manufactured by the company.

Construction of the 22-story building is to be started as soon as the five-story structure is completed. The Eleventh and Lucas avenue building is to be razed to make way for the proposed 22-story loft building.

With 5000 square feet to the floor, the new loft structure will embrace approximately 110,000 square feet, exclusive of basement. Constructed of re-inforced concrete with high speed passenger and freight elevators, the building will rival the finest of its kind in the country. It will be for the exclusive occupancy of jobbers and wholesalers, to whom it will be leased.

Possible Federal Building Site.

Noteworthy among the sites submitted for the proposed new Federal Building, are the southeast corner of Twelfth and Market [illegible] the east side of Twelfth, [illegible] Pine to Chestnut, and the block on the west side of [illegible] boulevard from Olive to [illegible] streets.

Apparently the real estate fraternity is impressed with [illegible] Twelfth and Market street corner, which virtually would group the new Government building with the City Hall and other Municipal buildings, which will form a part of the Memorial Plaza. Realty men believe that the new Government building on this corner would work the rehabilitation of Market street. Both Market street and Twelfth boulevard, under the provisions of the $87,000,000 bond issue, are to be widened in this part of the city.

Oreon E. and R. G. Scott own the Market street corner, which they acquired at a special commissioner's sale from the Peper heirs. This corner, it is understood, is available at a comparatively reasonable price.

The present Federal Building block at Eighth and Olive streets is regarded as the logical location for a modern department store structure. There is, however, a wide divergence of opinion as to its value, which has been placed as high as $6,000,000. One of the most astute owners of property in this part of the city places the value of this block at $3,000,000.

To Replace Present Structure at Eleventh and Lucas — Five-Story Structure Also to Be Built.

Skyscraper Is to Be Leased —Both Buildings to Involve Investment of More Than $2,000,000.

By Berry Moore.

Plans were disclosed yesterday by the Hadley-Dean Glass Co. for the erection of a 22-story loft building at the northwest corner of Eleventh street and Lucas avenue, and for a five-story fireproof building at the northwest corner of Eleventh and Morgan streets. The company now occupies a seven story building on the Lucas avenue corner.

Under prevailing cost of construction, the two buildings, with the sites, will entail an expenditure of $2,000,000 or more. L. G. Hadley is president of the company which was established in the Eleventh and Lucas avenue building 30 years ago. Both buildings will be financed fro the resources of the Hadley-Dean Co.

Designed as the future quarters of the glass company, the five-story building will be built first. Construction will be of reinforced concrete and fireproof, with both the Morgan and the Eleventh street fronts of Sani Onyx glass, a comparatively new composition for exterior finish, as a distinguishing feature. Gravity conveyors and the latest appliances for the fast handling of glass will be installed.

Additional Stories Possible.

A building that will eclipse anything of the kind in the country is contemplated. It will be constructed to permit additional stories, in order to provide for future expansion. The entire site, having a frontage of 237 feet on Eleventh and 125 feet on Morgan, will be occupied by the new building. Cornet & Zelbig conducted negotiations for the site which was assembled piece-meal, and for which a record price was paid.

Polished plate glass, manufactured by the Edward Ford Plate Glass Co. of Rossford, Ohio, and the products of the Libby Owens Window Glass Co., at Toledo, Ohio, are distributed by the Hadley-Dean Co. in the seven states tributary to St. Louis. All kinds of mirrors also are manufactured by the company.

Construction of the 22-story building is to be started as soon as the five-story structure is completed. The Eleventh and Lucas avenue building is to be razed to make way for the proposed 22-story loft building.

With 5000 square feet to the floor, the new loft structure will embrace approximately 110,000 square feet, exclusive of basement. Constructed of re-inforced concrete with high speed passenger and freight elevators, the building will rival the finest of its kind in the country. It will be for the exclusive occupancy of jobbers and wholesalers, to whom it will be leased.

Possible Federal Building Site.

Noteworthy among the sites submitted for the proposed new Federal Building, are the southeast corner of Twelfth and Market ..., the east side of Twelfth, ... Pine to Chestnut, and the ... ock on the west side of ... h boulevard from Olive to ... streets.

Apparently the real estate ... ternity is impressed with ... e Twelfth and Market street corner, which virtually would group the new Government building with the City Hall and other Municipal buildings, which will form a part of the Memorial Plaza. Realty men believe that the new Government building on this corner would work the rehabilitation of Market street. Both Market street and Twelfth boulevard, under the provisions of the $87,-000,000 bond issue, are to be widened in this part of the city.

Oreon E. and R. G. Scott own the Market street corner, which they acquired at a special commissioner's sale from the Peper heirs. This corner, it is understood, is available at a comparatively reasonable price.

One of the most astute owners of property in this part of the city places the value of this block at $3,000,000.

This block, privately owned and improved on a commensurate scale, would be an appreciable source of revenue in the form of taxes to the city, it is pointed out as an argument in behalf of its sale.

$197,217,600 TOTAL MISSOURI PERMITS

Missouri had $197,217,600 in contracts for new building and engineering work during the first eleven months of 1926, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation. This was an increase of 10 per cent over the figure for the corresponding period of 1925. The 1926 eleven months' total of contract awards has already exceeded the 1925 yearly total by 4 per cent.

The November construction volume in Missouri amounted to $12,-213,900, which showed declines of 62 per cent from October of this year and 46 per cent from November, 1925.

Last month's building record for the state included: $4,781,600, or 39 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $2,452,800, or 20 per cent, for commercial buildings; $1,873,000, or 15 per cent, for public works and utilities; $1,100,000, or 9 per cent, for public buildings; $777,000, or 6 per cent, for industrial buildings; $453,500, or 4 per cent for educational buildings; and $380,000, or 3 per cent for social and recreational projects.

A. R. SCHOLLMEYER SELLS 2 FLATS FOR OTTO A. HAMPE

Unusual interest was manifested last Wednesday in a sale of two double apartment flats by A. R. Schollmeyer for Otto A. Hampe, Public Administrator.

A large crowd of buyers was present and the bidding was lively.

Operators in real estate expressed the opinion that this class of property will always find a market in spite of the prevailing opinion that too many flats have been built in the last two years. The successful bidder, was J. H. Bendick, who bought both buildings.

M. A. A. TAKES OPTION ON FOURTH AND LUCAS SITE

Present Quarters of Organization Too Small; Directors to Pass on Plans Within 90 Days.

The Missouri Athletic Association has acquired a 90-day option on property a tthe southwest cornrer of Fourth street and Lucas avenue, in the rear of the present M. A. A. building at Fourth and Washington avenue.

Within the period of the option, the Board of Directors will consider a plan to close the purchase and erect an addition to the building. The club has been cramped for space in its present building, it was stated at the club offices yesterday.

The Eclipse Realty Co. at present holds the property covered by the option, a building numbered 615 North Fourth street. The price named in the option was not made known.

A proposal for merger of the M. A. A. and the North Hills Country Club is under consideration, and will be voted upon by the membership, a special committee having approved the plan. It was stated that the proposed addition to the building was not directly connected with the merger plan.

JOHNS-MANVILLE PLANT INSPECTED

The outlook for business conditions in 1927 are quite favorable, according to T. T. Dyman, western general manager and director of the Johns-Manville Co., while in St. Louis recently.

Lyman came here to inspect the company's new warehouse at 3900 Chouteau avenue, adjacent to the Frisco and Missouri Pacific tracks. The new warehouse will be ready for occupancy about Feb. 15.

While in the city he also approved the new location of the administration offices of the St. Louis branch of the company, in the new Pennant Building, Seventeenth and Locust streets. The new quarters will be ready Jan. 1.

The Pennant Building is under the management of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., which negotiated the lease.

LUCIAN ERSKINE RESIDENCE IN COUNTY IS COMPLETED

The residence of Lucian Erskine on Somerset avenue near Clayton road was recently completed and is now occupied by him. It was designed by Julius E. Tarling, architect.

It is of the English type with matt brick exterior and slate roof. From the reception hall one steps down into a story and one-half living room with open wood beam trusses. At the far end is stone mantlepiece. Other rooms leading from the reception hall are the dining room and guest room.

The landing of the main stairs forms a balcony which overlooks the living room. The second floor contains the family bed rooms, with ample servants' quarters.

ENGLISH COTTAGE SUITABLE FOR SHERWOOD FOREST SITE

A house for Kennett R. McMath is nearing completion on the Jackson road, Sherwood Forest. Modified English cottage architecture was chosen as most suitable for this setting at the edge of an oak forest, since the high roof angles lose themselves pleasantly in the overhanging branches, and the use of vertical timbering on a portion of the second story repeats the brown of the tree trunks.

From the road one ascends a flagged terrace and enters the hall from a low-pitched porch of timber through a heavy planked door pierced with a peep-hole of rondels. On the right, in a small wing, is the living room with a fire place at the far end set in a screen of cypress planks and flanked by brightly painted book shelves harmonizing in color with the faded green of the ceiling beams.

On the left of the hall is the dining room. At the hall's extremity, beyond the staircase, a door opens into a small garden room of many casements that overlook the garden lying in a clearing between the trees. Hall & Proetz are the architects.

The firm also sold for the account of the Claynorth Realty Co. to Arthur A. Guenther 50 feet on Willys avenue in Claynorth place.

DAVID R. FRANCIS JR. BUYS SITE FOR COUNTRY HOME

The Mercantile Trust Co. has been appointed rental agent for the Chalfonte apartments at 5568 Pershing avenue. This is a 24-family apartment with three, four and five room efficiencies and heat, light, ice and janitor service are furnished.

SPRINKLER FIRM BUYS MORE FACTORY SPACE

Isaac T. Cook & Co., Inc., report the sale of the four-story building, 2212-16 Wash street, to Crowder Bros. for the Gibson Furniture Co.

The purchasing company, at present located at 2018 Locust street, manufactures and installs automatic sprinklers and automatic sprinkler specialties, being the only firm manufacturing this line west of Chicago. The firm, which is one of the pioneers in its line, was organized some 30 years ago by A. B. Crowder Sr., who is still associated with the business. The devices manufactured are approved by insurance interests.

New quarters were necessary to provide for the large increase in business, and the new home will give this company sufficient factory and warehouse space to serve its customers. Extensive alterations will be made in the premises immediately, to adapt them to the purchaser's needs.

During the past year many sales of factory buildings have been closed by Isaac T. Cook & Co., Inc., with concerns that heretofore rented their manufacturing space.

Rhodes Realty Co. Moves Office.

The Rhodes Realty Co. announces that the offices of the firm are being removed to 1019 Pine street, the Majestic Hotel Building, from 702 Chestnut street.

UNUSUAL COLONIAL HOUSE DESIGNED FOR W. E. BAIRD

William E. Baird, vice president of the International Shoe Co., has recently broken ground for a very unusual colonial country house. It has been designed as true to type as possible.

The exterior walls are of wide clapboards, which, instead of being laid in the usual manner, or lapping over one another, are laid flusn so that the surface is perfectly smooth. The windows are of the colonial type, with small panes of glass and traditional green blinds and shutters. The house is long and low, so that as viewed from every angle, the house seems to hug the ground.

The roof will be of old-fashioned hand-split shingles. The interior entrance hall contains an open circular stairs of most graceful proportion and detail. The large living room with fireplace at one end has both ends paneled and a low paneled wainscot running around the two sides. The wall above this wainscot will be covered with hand blocked colonial paper. The architects, Study & Farrar, who have specialized in fine country houses, have designed this room after one of the historic rooms recently installed in the wing of the Metropolitan Art Museum, known as the early American wing.

A simple treatment is used in the dining room with an introduction of quaint china cabinets at either end of the room. One of the few places that this house departs from the old colonial mansion is the addition of a modern sun room. This room, however, has been designed with its walls covered with lattice, so as to give something of the effect of the old lattice tea houses or garden pavilions found on many of the old New England estates.

$6,200,000,000 FOR BUILDINGS IN U. S. IN 11 MONTHS

CONSTRUCTION COST SLIGHTLY HIGHER

Permits in 481 Cities Total $351,048,785 for November; Were $405,212,-895 Last Year.

A loss of approximately $300,-000,000 in building operations throughout the United States for the year 1926, as compared with 1925, is indicated from reports of building permits issued in the leading cities and towns of the country and made public yesterday. These reports, made to S. W. Straus & Co. by the various building departments, revealed losses in the aggregate of approximately 5 per cent.

While the reports for the current month are not yet complete, it was pointed out that there is nothing in the situation to show that they would appreciably change the year's building losses as now indicated, and it is expected that the nation's 12-months' building program will approximate $6,200,-000,000, as compared with $6,500,-000,000 last year.

While the loss in building operations thus runs into a large amount in the aggregate, the slowing down processes now at work are not of sufficient consequence to prove a disturbing factor, it was said. In many of the larger cities, the figures show activities slightly ahead of last year. Building operations in the five boroughs of New York are expected to exceed $1,-000,000,000, which means that about one-sixth of all the building of the United States is now within New York City. Chicago, where building operations will this year run close to $400,000,000, or about on the same level as last year, will account for more than 6 per cent of the nation's total building. Gains of considerable consequence also are indicated in Detroit, San Francisco, Newark, Pittsburg, Milwaukee, Seattle, Albany and Buffalo.

Construction Cost Higher.

Many of the suburbs of the larger cities have made remarkable records. Yonkers and Mount Vernon, N. Y., are included among the 25 leading building cities. The latter led the country in point of increase with a gain of 101 per cent.

Notwithstanding various disturbing factors in Florida, Miami occupies eleventh place among the building cities of the nation, based on the year's records so far.

About one-half of the building operations of the country have taken place in the 25 principal building centers. These 25 cities as a group have a loss for the year of 2 per cent.

The figures reported from the entire country indicate that the curve of decline is much sharper now than it has been at any time during the year. In 481 cities reporting, November permits were $301,601,-559, compared with $351,048,785 in November last year, and with

CORPORATION BUYS LOT FOR NEW BAKERY

Century Electric Also Acquires Property for New Structure.

The St. Louis Bakers' Corporation Association has purchased 300 x118 feet at the northeast corner of Theresa and Chouteau avenues, and the Century Electric Co. 124 feet on the south side of Pine street, 79 feet east of Twentieth street.

Plans have been completed for a mammoth bakery plant for the Chouteau avenue corner, which was acquired through the Franciscus Realty Co. Located in the industrial belt the site had switching facilities in connection with the Missouri Pacific Railroad. It is graded and imediately available or the proposed iprovements.

A building will be built on the Pine street site, purchased by the Century Electric Co., which now has large buildings on both sides of Pine, between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, and at Nineteenth and Olive streets. The new building will supplement these.

LeGrand Jones, representing the Century Electric Co., handled negotiations for the ground, which was owned by the Lion Realty Co. and Lyle Garrison. Construction in both instances is to proceed forthwith.

LeGrand Jones also effected a sale of the northeast corner of Tenth and Wash streets, improved with a two-story business building, for $20,000. The name of the purchaser is withheld.

COURT ELIMINATES ONE OF MAN'S TWO WIVES

Mrs. Lillian Bott Hoffman Obtains Annulment From Alleged Bigamist.

William Charles Hoffmann at last has only one wife. For the last seven months he had had two and that circumstance caused him no end of trouble and caused the wives a lot of extra work in keeping him bailed out of jail.

Yesterday, Circuit Judge Hartmann, in the Court of Domestic Relations, relieved the situation a little for everybody concerned by granting a decree of annulment to Mrs. Lillian Bott Hoffmann, wife No. 2. He also restored her maiden name of Lillian Bott. She is 21 years old and resides at 1805A Cass avenue.

According to wife No. 2 Hoffmann, who is still under bond on a bigamy charge, is now residing with Mrs. Daphne Higgins Hoffmann, wife No. 1, at 3606 North Twentieth street. The bigamy charge resulted last July when he disappeared and Mrs. Lillian reported the matter to the police. That was two months after he married her and she learned he already had another wife. He was arrested a few days later at the home of Mrs. Daphne and was locked up in jail at Clayton for 24 hours before the two wives got together and rounded up a bondsman who furnished the required $2000 bail. They left the Sheriff's office together and in remarkable accord.

Hoffmann was married to wife No. 1 on Feb. 14, 1920. According to the story she told at the time of his arrest, she learned last February that he was paying attention to Miss Bott. She took him to face the girl and offered to get a divorce, but Hoffmann said he didn't want it.

The marriage to wife No. 2 took place at Clayton on May 26, last. Mrs. Lillian said, Justice of the Peace Werremeyer performing the ceremony. She declared Hoffmann previously had told her he was divorced. Then after the ceremony he told her he wasn't divorced at all but expected to be any minute. She says they did not live together at any time after the ceremony and that Hoffmann returned to Mrs. Daphne. After his arrest both wives told the Prosecuting Attorney of St. Louis County they didn't want him prosecuted. They were told, however, that they had no choice—the State would do the prosecuting.

DEMOCRATIC SUPPORT FOR POLICE HOME RULE

Senator McCawley Indicates, However, That Party Will Oppose State Constabulary.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 18.—Democratic support in the Legislature for police home rule for St. Louis and the other larger cities of the State, and opposition to the proposal for a State constabulary under control of the Governor, was made known here today by State Senator McCawley of Carthage.

McCawley, who was the author of the State "bone dry" law, favored taking city police control from the Governor and refusing to create a State police force, on the ground that Gov. Baker had failed to enforce the prohibition law in St. Louis. The Governor has announced his own opposition to the proposed State police act.

McCawley referred to a recent statement by the Governor, when the W. C. T. U. petitioned him to direct the Attorney-General to take over prohibition law enforcement in St. Louis, that "I think we have enough to do to look after affairs here."

"Frank Admission."

"That," McCawley said, "is the frankest sort of an admission that the power lodged with the Governor over law enforcement in our large cities and the administration of criminal justice there through remote control from the executive office in Jefferson City is a governmental mistake.

"The reason assigned by the Governor for not taking a hand in prohibition enforcement is the reason why I will not vote to enlarge the power of the Governor by imposing upon the people a State constabulary controlled through the Governor's office, and also the reason why I favor home rule for St. Louis, Kansas City and St. Joseph, the same as in rural communities."

McCawley said that more than 100 bootleggers had been sent to the penitentiary in the last four years, from territory outside St. Louis and during the last two years 65 places had been padlocked in Kansas City for liquor law violations.

"During the same period nearly 3000 policemen in the city of St. Louis, controlled by executive fiat from Jefferson City, have been unable to present a case resulting in the conviction and imprisonment in the penitentiary of a single bootlegger," McCawley said, "or in the locking of one of the hundreds of so-called 'soft drink parlors' in the city.

No Convictions in St. Louis.

"Hundreds of prohibition convictions throughout Missouri, where there are no Governor-controlled police forces, and no convictions in St. Louis, where an army of policemen is accountable only to a boss on Capitol Hill in Jefferson City, demonstrate the futility of duplicating agencies for law enforcemnt."

McCawley quoted from an address made by Baker before a meeting of drys in Jefferson City on Sept. 2 last, in which the Governor said, "had I the power as Governor of Missouri I would remove every officer derelict in his duty in the enforcement of this law (State bone dry law), or any other law on the statutes of the State."

"In the face of that statement the Governor now finds he has 'enough to do in Jefferson City,'" McCawley said, "so much in fact he cannot render any aid to the enforcement of prohibition in St. Louis. Too much power in the hands of the Governor works like too much power on a motor vehicle—the power plant shakes the whole machine to pieces."

DEMOCRATS MOVE TO FORCE TAX REDUCTION THIS SESSION

Garrett Takes First Step to Nullify Decision of G. O. P. Against Revenue Revision.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18. — A movement for the discharge of the House Ways and Means Committee from jurisdiction over the $335,000,000 Democratic tax reduction bill was started today by Representative Garrett (Dem.), Tennessee.

The committee voted a week ago to table all bills for tax legislation at this session, and Garrett's proposal as one only leader placed before the House in a resolution, would force the issue.

Immediate consideration of the tax bill by the House itself is asked. Under the rules, however, the Garrett resolution may not be called up until 30 days after the date of the committee's action.

LUXURIES OUST NECESSARIES

By the Associated Press.

SPOKANE, Wash., Dec. 18. — There are more automobiles than kitchen sinks in small American towns, and the voice of the radio is heard more often in rural regions than the swish of suds in the washing machine, declared Mrs. J. C. Gawler of Yakima, Wash., chairman of home economics for the Central Federation of Women's Clubs, in a report of her work, which shows that in towns of less than 2500 many necessaries are lacking where luxuries abound.

The vacuum sweeper has not swept the broom from the home, and while washing machines and even stationary tubs are noticeably absent "there are any number of homes that have phonographs, radios and pianos," the report said. Advertising, Mrs. Gawler noted, is important in the trend for better home equipment.

PROTESTS AGAINST TAPPING OF WEAF RADIO PROGRAMS

National Broadcasting Company Asks St. Paul Station to Stop Rebroadcasting by Telephone.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—The National Broadcasting Company issued a protest today against the "tapping" or rebroadcasting of WEAF programs by telephone from station WCCO of St. Paul. The company, which owns station WEAF and leases station WJZ, charges that the Program Service Co. of St. Paul has been hooking up the radio with special telephone wires leased from the Tri-State Telephone Co. of St. Paul and rebroadcasting WEAF programs sent out by station WCCO. It is alleged 1000 subscribers are charged $5 a month for loud speaker connection with the telephone switchboard.

Merlin Hall Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Co., said WCCO had been asked to stop the rebroadcasting because clients using the WEAF chain for entertainments as "Good-Will Advertisement" have complained. Mr. Aylesworth holds that national programs are distributed by landwires to stations contracting for the National Broadcasting Co.'s service and, "cannot be used for profit either by tapping or picking up the broadcast."

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 18.—The Program Service Company discontinued carrying WEAF programs rebroadcast from WCCO over its telephone lines today, it was announced. Objection by authorities of the New York station led to the order. Service from other stations will be continued. The Program Service Company, which has more than 1000 clients, carries programs over its special telephone wires.

U. S. KEEPS EYE ON VOLCANO

Establishes Observatory at Mineral (Cal.), Near Mount Lassen.

By the Associated Press.

MINERAL, Cal., Dec. 18.—The United States Geological Survey has laid a finger on the pulse of Mount Lassen, only active volcano in continental United States, exclusive of Alaska. An observatory was established here today, 10 miles from the Peak, with seismographs on concrete piers, so placed that the tilting of the earth a mere inch 20 miles away would be recorded.

The temperature of the Peak will be kept as faithfully as a fever chart in a hospital and even the tiniest vibration will be magnified 200 times by the intricate scientific instruments. Portable seismographs will be placed at various points on the Peak.

MEMPHIS, MO., BANK CLOSED

MEMPHIS, Mo., Dec. 18.—The Farmers' Exchange Bank was closed today by order of the directors. A bank examiner, after going over the accounts last week, reported to the Finance Commissioner, who summoned the directors.

Commissioner French has allowed the directors ten days in which to reorganize and procure new capital, and an effort is being made to obtain aid. The bank's statement, Nov. 22, showed assets of $52,186.76, in capital stock surplus and undivided profits, cash on hand and due from other banks, $20,596.54; other cash items, $248.10. The bank had savings deposits of $116,953.71. The total resources were more than $300,000

Kansas City Police Arrest 14 Frequenters in Effort to Determine Ownership.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 18.—Thirty-five new $5 bills, bearing the same serial numbers as some of the currency obtained by six robbers, who yesterday held up a bank messenger of the Fidelity National Bank & Trust Co. and escaped with $79,600, were found tonight by police in a raid on a gambling game. Thirteen frequenters of the place and the proprietor professed ignorance of how the money got into the game. They were held for questioning.

Will A. Green, messenger, who was held up, William MacAvage his guard, and eight witnesses of the robbery, were called to police headquarters, but failed to identify any of the men arrested in the raid.

Lincoln R. Toyne, Chief of Detectives, ordered a general roundup of gambling places in the hope of uncovering more of the stolen money.

Fire Destroys $60,000 Theater.

CARLINVILLE, Ill., Dec. 18. — An incendiary is suspected of having set fire to the Marvel Theater, which was destroyed today with a loss of $60,000. The building was of fireproof construction throughout. Three years ago it was set on fire but the blaze was discovered in time to stop it.

WOMAN ALONE IN HOME IS FATALLY BURNED

Stove on Which Mrs. Anna Bellison Was Standing When Cleaning Wall, Collapsed.

Funeral services for Mrs. Anna Bellison, 64 years old, who died Friday night of burns suffered in an unusual accident at her home, 5229 Neosho street, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow from the residence to St. Matthew's Cemetery.

Mrs. Bellison was standing on a stove cleaning a kitchen wall Friday afternoon when the stove collapsed, throwing her to the floor. In extricating herself she stepped on matches, which had spilled on the floor. The matches flared up, igniting her clothing and burning her about the body and limbs.

Alone in the house, Mrs. Bellison extinguished the flames by wrapping herself in blankets. She then telephoned the butcher shop of Joseph Schwach, 5400 Nottingham avenue, and persons in the store hurried to assist her, bringing along George Smit, a druggist, to administer first aid. They found her sitting on the kitchen floor enveloped in the blankets. She died at 11 p. m., nine hours after the accident. Her husband, William, and five children survive.

SEEKS $50,000,000 ADDED FEES

U. S. Customs Appraiser Investigating Oriental Rug Import Values.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—An investigation that may lead to the basing of duties on Oriental rugs on their value in the American market—about thrice that in the foreign market—and thus adding approximately $50,000,000 to the yearly customs receipts, was under way today.

F. J. H. Kracke, appraiser of the Port of New York, who started the inquiry, has summoned leading Oriental rug importers and their books, and it has become known that one of the purposes of the investigation is to determine whether the original markets are price controlled. The butt of the investigation is the Chinese rug market, it was said. Oriental rugs are now subject to a duty of about 55 per cent of foreign manufacturing value. Imports of Oriental rugs are estimated at about $50,000,000 annually, a value that is increased to about $150,000,000 in the American market.

Congressman Madden, Ill.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Representative Martin B. Madden of Illinois, chairman of the House Appropriation Committee, is confined to his home by illness. At his office it was said he was suffering from a cold, and that the attack was not a recurrence of the serious illness of two years ago.

$50,000,000 OIL AND GAS SUIT

State of Texas Also Seeks Title to 608 Acres of Land.

By the Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., Dec. 18.—Suit for recovery of $50,000,000 in oil and gas taken from 608 acres of land in Harris County, and title to that land, to which the State claims possession, was filed today in the Fifty-Third District Court by Attorney-General Dan Moody against the Atlantic & Gulf Petroleum Co., a Delaware corporation. It also names as defendants Mrs. W. H. Willie of Norman, Ok.; E. C. Stockdick of Sidney, Neb.; A. Stockdick of Katy, Tex., and Mrs. Laura Crow, wife of F. P. Crow of Harris County.

The suit seeks recovery of receipts on 25,000,000 barrels of oil, which the Attorney-General claims has been taken from the tract since Jan. 1, 1900, and an accounting. The State claims that the defendants have been in illegal possession of the land since that date.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18. — The Independent Industries, Inc., of New York, manufacturers of knitted garments for women, was directed today by the Federal Trade Commission to discontinue the advisement and labeling of garments as "monastik." Such a designation is held by the Commission to be an unfair trade practice.

BREWSTER DENIES KLAN INSPIRED HIS FIGHT ON GOULD

Governor of Maine Says New Senator Was Beneficiary in Primary of Excessive Campaign Funds.

COULD NOT CONDONE VIOLATION OF LAW

Statute Declares Nomination Is Void if More Than $1500 Is Spent With Candidate's Knowledge.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

AUGUSTA, Me., Dec. 18.—There appears no doubt from public records and the common talk of the State that if the United States Senate committee investigating the right of Senator Gould to take his seat should ever visit Maine it could uncover a primary "slush fund" in his behalf comparable in proportion to those spent in Illinois and Pennsylvania for other Republican Senators' nominations.

The formal inquiry of the Secretary of State, Frank W. Ball, produced as strange a ruling on Ball's part as this State has known. It resulted in Ball's decision that whatever excessive expenditures may have been made in Gould's behalf were without his knowledge or consent.

The testimony established beyond doubt that more money than the law allows was spent to win for Gould the Republican nomination. It did not establish, because of Mr. Ball's ruling, who had spent that money.

Under the law if more than $1500 is spent in the primaries on behalf of a candidate for the United States Senate, with his knowledge and consent, his nomination is void. Likewise, any person who spends money in his behalf, bringing the total above the $1500 limit, is guilty of a misdemeanor and may be fined $500.

Brewster's Letter.

On the day of the hearing before Ball Gov. Brewster made public a letter telling why he had not supported Gould in the campaign. It charged him with excessive expenditures and accused Gould of being in the position of having received stolen goods if he had not actually bought the nomination himself.

That letter finished the chances of Gould's Democratic opponent. It brought down on Brewster renewed charges of being dominated by the Ku Klux Klan and by force of circumstances appeared to link Fulton J. Redman, the Democratic candidate, Gov. Brewster and the klan in an "unholy alliance."

To clarify his own position, in view of the revival of the "slush fund" charges against Gould, Gov. Brewster made a statement to the correspondent denying that the klan or any other thing except his conscience led him to attack Gould. Brewster said:

"I declined to preside at a meeting during the recent campaign because the successful nominee had stated to me that his friends had spent grossly excessive sums in his behalf illegally. One of the major issues in Maine in the last two years has been law observance and law enforcement, and it did not seem proper for the chief executive of the State, elected upon such a platform, to condone in this way the violation of the law.

"No responsible person has ever denied that the successful candidate was the beneficiary of the expenditure of very considerable sums in plain violation of the law. Indorsement of such procedure places a premium upon law violations as the way best calculated to bring success. The law becomes nothing but a handicap imposed on those who conform to the rules.

Repugnant to Fair Play.

"It is repugnant to the most elemental instincts of American fair play, and I find nothing in the principles of the Republican party that requires me as chief executive to indorse such a course or silently to acquiesce when such conditions prevail.

"The klan in this situation, was merely a red herring dragged across the trail of a dispassionate consideration of the problems of the State of Maine. I have never asked any favors of the klan and the klan has never asked any favors of me.

"One who is reputed to be connected with the klan stated to me that various parties were considering bringing charges against the successful nominee. I immediately communicated this information to the chairman of the Republican State Committee and to the candidate himself.

"I have never been a member of any secret organization other than the college fraternity which I joined at Bowdoin. Charges of klan influence in appointments are effectively refuted by any dispassionate examination of the major appointments of the last two years, which include the appointment of a Jew to a prominent judgeship in a county where the klan is reputed to be strong and where the Jewish vote is negligible.

"The most important appointment of this present year has been to the Supreme Court, and for that position I named one of the leaders in the nation in the fight against the klan. He is William R. Pattangall, who introduced the anti-klan resolution in the Democratic national convention two years ago. Mr. Pattangall was the Democratic nominee for Governor of Maine two years ago and conducted his campaign exclusively upon opposition to the klan."

Senator Walsh Receives Evidence in Case From Canada.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Senator Walsh (Dem.), Montana, who asked for the Senate investigation of the qualifications of Senator Gould (Rep.), Maine, today received the official journal of Justice McKeown's court in New Brunswick, Canada, dealing with the stories that the Maine Senator had paid $100,000 to Canadian officials 15 years ago in connection with a railroad contract. The Montana Senator said he was now seeking to get the official evidence on which the Judge based an opinion, and if he obtained this, he would be prepared to proceed with the inquiry before the Senate Elections Subcommittee early in January.

Traces of Prehistoric Cannibalism Found in Missouri, Gerard Fowke Tells Members of Historical Society

Veteran Archeologist Also Clarifies and Explodes a Few Theories of the Ozarks Concerning Caves, and 'Sho 'Nough Caves.'

The determination not to let Europe get the better of us in the matter of "prehistoric men" was given as one prime obstacle to uncolored knowledge of what happened in Missouri before history, in a lecture by Gerard Fowke, archeologist who installed the Missouri Historical Society's museum, at a meeting of the society Friday night at Jefferson Memorial.

Over-enthusiasm, cave-ins, the practice of paying premiums to workmen for specimens found and the thrifty habits of groundhogs were named as like obstacles. Fowke quoted a peculiar classification of caves by Ozark hill-folk, told of a huge prehistoric flint quarry near Mincke, on the Meramec River, said that the Iron Mountain section now was thought to be probably the first terra firma that emerged for this era, and presented evidence that some prehistoric Missourians were cannibals.

Ozark Cave Terminology.

"They tell you of six kinds of caves in the Ozarks," he related. "First there are 'varmint caves,' into which a rat can crawl, but nothing larger. Next are 'game caves,' big enough for a possum to hide in. Then come dog caves, hog caves, cattle caves and 'sho-'nough' caves."

"When they tell you, 'That's a sho-'nough cave up that-'ere holler,' you'll find in that hollow a cave that is a sure-enough cave. I found one with an entrance 100 feet across and 40 feet tall.

"No evidence he had found, he said, gave any indication of a different race preceding the Indians. He told of excavating 1000 wagon-loads of ashes from one Ozark cave, and finding exactly the same sort of pottery and flint relics, and human remains of exactly the same race, all the way down through strata representing many centuries.

Groundhog Buried Glass.

"Under a ledge in one corner," he stated, "we found a pocket where the bones from hundreds of meals had been tossed. For 12 or 14 feet down and some 40 feet along the wall we dug out more bones than earth. All of them had been cooked and cracked, and among the bones of animals we came across the bones of children. None of the children had been more than 16 years old."

He described a "roof dust" which builds up on the floor of dry caves like stalagmites in wet caves, and gives a similar gauge of immense periods of time. "Under a huge pile of roof dust," he related, "we found a piece of a glass bottle.

"Now, if that had been a fragment of a skull, the papers would have been full of a prehistoric Missouri man 100,000 years old. There are archeologists who might have said that bottle meant that Missourians knew how to blow glass 100,000 years ago. But I was skeptical, and I knew something about groundhogs. A groundhog had hidden that piece of glass in his hole, and when the hole collapsed there was no sign it had ever existed."

Distinct Types of Mounds.

Fowke repeated his theory, which has become general, that the Mississippi, Illinois and Mississippi rivers once had other junctions, and the Mississippi flowed miles to the eastward, along the Illinois bluffs, so that the Cahokia mounds were of the came great group with the Big Mound which, until demolished in 1869-70, covered a whole city block at Broadway and Mound street.

These flat-topped and rectangular mounds, he said, were differ nt entirely from the conical, or ordinary burial mounds of the Ohio valley and elsewhere. He listed three other distinct types: The 19 or more Lucas mounds at the present mouth of the Missouri, and the seven like them near Chesterfield, which he judged were of a series with others running along the Illinois River; the 47 low mounds, 30 to 60 feet across, on a hill near Ferguson, of a type with thousands of others to the southward, all the way into Texas; and stone-walled burial mounds which Fowke excavated years ago along the Missouri River to Kansas City.

Describing the Ferguson mounds, he remarked, "Nothing ever was found in them except ashes and charcoal and the ordinary bits of flint and pottery. Archaeologists puzzled over them for years, but it remained for a man in Oklahoma who knew as little about achaeology as I know about astronomy, to tell us what they were, which shows you can't tell by the looks of a frog how far he can jump.

"He followed them from Oklahoma northward, all the way into the southeastern swamps of Missouri, along the trail of the Caldoan migration, and then it struck him that, except that they were made of dirt instead of grass, they looked exactly like the huts of the Pawnees and the Wichitas, both Caddoan tribes.

A Mound Builder Is Just That.

"That's what they were—houses. 'Millions of people,' they say, lived in them. They would have been millions if they had all been living in them at one time. But the soft timbers which supported the dirt roof soon rotted out, and each family probably had several such houses to a generation.

"At first, when they were where they could get strong timbers, they roofed them with dirt. They made them strong—Lewis and Clark told of seeing them covered with Indians when their expedition passed along the river. When the tribes reached the prairie they could find no strong timbers, and had to roof them with grass.

"The only difference between the 'Mound Builders' and the other Indians was that they built mounds and the others didn't. A skull from the heart of a mound is the skull of an Indian. If you take a piece of flintwork from a mound and another from the surface and place them side by side, nobody can tell you which is thousands of years old and which is 150 years old."

DAVIS CHEERS UP THE ARMY

Recognizes Discouraging Conditions but Points to Service.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—An expression of full realization "that many of you have performed your duties during the past year under discouraging conditions," marks the annual Christmas greeting sent to the Army today by Secretary of War Davis.

"I hope that at this holiday season you will feel some recompense in the knowledge that your efforts have resulted in constructive accomplishments," he said. "The nation continually gains in appreciation for the peacetime efforts of our army toward civic advancement."

BANKERS IN $5,000,000 DEAL

Blair & Co. May Purchase Marion, O., Steam Shovel Co.

MARION, O., Dec. 18.—Plans for sale of the controlling interest in the Marion Steam Shovel Co. of Marion, to Blair & Co., Inc., Investment Bankers of New York City, were announced here tonight by Frank A. Huber, president of the local company.

Although the sale price was not announced, it was estimated that the company's holdings are worth approximately $5,000,000. The New York banking concern has taken an option on the property which expires Feb. 10, 1927. Plans are now under way to close the deal within the next few weeks.

DAWES TURNS GUNS ON DIRECT PRIMARY

Says It Promotes Bloc System and Carries Menace of Dictatorship.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18. — Top-heavy campaign funds, and all the evils that attend them, were laid at the door of the direct primary system tonight by Vice President Dawes, who argued in an after-dinner speech here for a return to the old method of choosing political nominees by convention.

The Vice President mentioned no names, but reminded his audience of "recent political events" under the primary plan and declared politics had reached a stage where a candidate for state or national office must have either a fortune or a going political organization behind him if he hoped to succeed.

With this declaration Gen. Dawes linked a renewal of his plea for revision of the Senate rule, to prevent a few individual from so obstructing legislation as to put the Government into a predicament "against which the common sense of the whole country cries out."

The address was delivered before the Pennsylvania Society of New York, and was the second in which the Vice President had attacked the primary system.

"The rapid expansion of state and municipal business and patronage, coupled with the indifference of qualified voters, half of whom do not go to the polls at a general election, and many less to the primaries, often results in the nomination of candidates selected and controlled by those having a buiness interest in the continuance of an existing administration," he said. "Under the old convention system such a condition would encourage the drafting and nomination of clean candidates by the opposition party in order to gain an advantage from a clear issue at the polls between clean and unclean government.

"The primary system is responsible for an enormous and improper use of money in contests under it and is steadily tending to debauch our electorate. Since it lessens the opportunity of minority parties properly to make an issue of corruption before the public it largely insures immunity to vote buyers from political or legal consequences with resultant increase in their activity.

"The Primary system of nomination, lessening the dependence of candidates for nomination upon their party record and relation to their party organization, adds constantly to the number in Congress of those wearing the party label who fight their party's policies.

"Largely because of the direct primary, therefore, we are threatened with a regime of the bloc system in Congress from which, if it is not arrested, carries the danger of a breakdown in Parliamentary efficiency which today is such an outstanding characteristic in the government of European countries; a situation so acute there as to have resulted in the abandonment, at least temporarily, of Parliamentary government in Poland, Belgium, Italy and Spain."

"It is intimated that those who desire to see the primary system largely abolished do so because it takes less money to buy a convention than to buy off a majority of those voting in the primary. It would be just as logical for one to charge those who favor the retention of the primary with a desire to see the while electorate corrupted instead of the smaller number which comprises a convention. There is, of course no real merit attached to either contention, but it illustrates the low grade of argument to which we may expect to listen in connection with primary reform."

William C. Sproul, former Governor of Pennsylvania, who also spoke, said while he "lamented the conditions which had led to the heavy expenditures in the recent senatorial elections in Pennsylvania," he thought Senator-elect Vare should be seated. He opposed Vare's election, but felt constrained to defend the rights of the Senator-elect.

"I feel," said Sproul, "that to deny Vare the seat to which he has been lawfully elected by the people of a great sovereign State would be a revolutionary attack upon the constitutional rights of the states which would be dangerous in the extreme."

POSTAL PROPOSALS UP IN AIR

Congressional Committee Adjourns Without Reaching Agreement.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—The life of the joint Congressional Post-office Committee expired today without an agreement having been reached on differences over its majority and minority recommendations previously submitted to Congress.

The majority report of the committee, now pending before the Senate, proposed a reduction in the rate on private mailing cards from 2 cents to 1 cent; a reduction in the second-class rate from 2 cents for each two ounces to 1 cent for each two ounces "without regard to weight or distance;" creation of a "collect-postage-on-delivery post-card" service, and some modification of the fourth class rates. Senator McKellar (Dem.), Tennessee, offered a minority report proposing restoration of the 1920 second-class rates, repeal of the 2-cent service charge on parcel post, and restoration of a 1-cent rate on third class matter.

FORMER CHIEF KILLED SELF, DANVILLE POLICE NOW THINK

By the Associated Press.

DANVILLE, Ill., Dec. 18.—Officials investigating the death of Don Bryant, former chief of police at Urbana, whose body was found beside a lonely road near Lyons Thursday night, are inclined to believe it a case of suicide but are investigating. Most of the clews and theories which indicated murder have incorrect or, in the light of further facts, appear to support a suicide theory.

The steel jacketed bullet taken from Bryant's body is of the same caliber and make as those remaining in the clip in his automatic pistol. His papers scattered, about including the picture of a woman conducting a beauty shop here who declares they were to be married as soon as each obtained a divorce, and the presence of a valuable watch and money on his person opposed the theory that he had been killed by robbers. The picture had been torn to small pieces and scattered about his automobile, which stood near his body.

Officers have found no one who saw him on the latter part of his trip from Urbana, whence he had gone Thursday on business and to see his estranged wife. They are disposed to believe he became despondent at his failure to persuade his wife to get a divorce. Mrs. [illegible] Lohmiller, the beauty specialist with whom he is said to have been enamored, today admitted they loved each other and had planned to marry as soon as each could get a divorce.

DEFENDANT IN GOODYEAR SUIT CHARGES PREJUDICE

Files Affidavit Against Federal Judge and Also Accuses Other Stockholders.

By the Associated Press.

TOLEDO, O., Dec. 18.—An affidavit or prejudice and bins against Federal Judge John M. Killits and a request that another Judge be designated to try the suit of Katherine Geddes Benedict against the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., F. A. Sieberling and associates was filed in United States District Court here today by Russell L. Robinson, one of the defendants in the original suit.

In the affidavit Robinson denies jurisdiction of the court over his person and says he believes Judge Killits "has personal bias and prejudice against him and in favor of the plaintiff," and in favor of other defendants, who "are adverse in interest in this action."

The affidavit says that from May 1, 1921, John Sherwin of Cleveland and Clarence Dillon of New York have been in complete control of the management of the Goodyear Tire Co., through ownership as joint tenants with Owen D. Young of 10,000 shares of management stock, and that they have elected eight of the 15 directors at all annual meetings since May, 1921.

POLICE UNABLE TO FIND ANY WHO LOST IN $500,000 FRAUD

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—A subpena for Harry J. Schlacht, president of the Downtown Chamber of Commerce, was issued today by Keyes Winter, in charge of the Bureau for the Prevention of Frauds of the Attorney-General's office, in connection with the alleged $500,000 East Side housing swindle.

Winter said that he would insist that Schlacht produce whatever information he had tending to show that confidence workers were fleecing East Siders out of their savings for false real estate improvement bonds.

The action by the bureau head came simultaneous with the announcement by Police Commissioner McLaughlin that his detectives could find no one who had either bought or sold the so-called fraudulent bonds, or even been approached by any agent with any similar proposition.

RUPERT HUGHES DEFENDS HIS BOOK ON WASHINGTON

Answers Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart: Claims Authority for Every Statement.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 18.—Rupert Hughes, novelist, the correctness of whose biographical work on George Washington has been challenged by Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart of Harvard, said here today that every statement in his book was supported by quoted authority. Hughes said the part concerning Sally Fairfax, particularly objected to by Hart, was obtained from old letters and documents of Washington.

"When Prof. Hart first challenged my work last month in a statement printed in an Eastern newspaper," Hughes said, "I wrote him asking very politely that he send me a list of what he called errors and unsupported statements. We had some correspondence on the matter and I thought it was ended. There is not a single unsupported statement in the biography."

CIVIL WAR VETERAN, 94, DIES

Leopold Berresheim, a Civil War veteran, died from the infirmities of age at his home in St. Charles yesterday afternoon at the age of 94. Berresheim was engaged in the fire-clay business until his retirement about 25 years ago. He was born in Germany and came to St. Louis at the age of 16, living in this vicinity ever since. Two sons survive, John H. of 4640 Alsace avenue, and George J., who lives in Colorado.

MOSLEY FAVORED FOR SEAT IN COMMONS

Socialist Husband of Granddaughter of Levi Leiter of Chicago Hopeful.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—At Lloyd's, where wagers are made on everything from tomorrow's weather to the date of doomsday, odds of 10 to 4 are offered that young Oswald Mosley, wealthy Socialist husband of Lady Cynthia Mosley, granddaughter of the late Levi Z. Leiter, Chicago millionaire, will be elected to the House of Commons next Tuesday. He is a candidate in the parliamentary election at Smethwick, near Birmingham.

The Mosleys recently spent ten weeks in America, visiting the chief industrial centers of the Atlantic Seaboard and the Mid-West to study labor conditions and production methods.

The campaign has been one of the bitterest ever fought in Great Britain. The personalities of the Mosleys, their wealth, fine clothes, automobiles and palatial homes, have been the center of more interest in the vote-getting struggle than Mosley's political differences with his opponents—M. J. Pike, Conservative, and W. Bayliss, Liberal. Lady Mosley, who is the daughter of the late Marquis Curzon, has been in the thickest of the fight.

At the outset Mosley announced his wife had dropped her title for electioneering purposes. He refers to her as "The Missus." She nurses tenement babies while he spouts Socialist doctrine at the street corners, with a red flag in each hand. At times she leads the singing of Laborite songs.

Bones were broken, meetings dispersed and reporters mobbed in first bitterness was injected into the campaign by the announcement of Sir Oswald Mosley that his son "was born with a gold spoon in his mouth and had never done an honest day's work in his life."

In the final stages of the battle the big political guns of Britain boomed in Smethwick. Ramsay MacDonald, former Labor Premier, traveled from London to bless Mosley's candidacy. Premier Baldwin sent a personal message to the Smethwick Conservatives; his daughter Betty backed it by plunging into the fight to offset Cynthia's campaigning. The day Betty arrived, however, Premier Baldwin's Socialist son, Oliver, also reached the town, to thwart his sister's efforts. So the Smethwickians were set to wondering about the criss-cross political beliefs of England's first families.

CHICAGO LAYS CLAIM TO BEING HEALTHIEST LARGE CITY

Death Rate Now Only 11.40 Per 1000 Population, Commissioner Reports.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—Chicago is the healthiest large city in the world, with a death rate of only 11.40 per 1000 population, compared with 23.19 in 1876, said the triennial report issued today by Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, Health Commissioner.

Campaigns against impure water, and milk, better babies campaigns, the abatement of the smoke evil and a crusade against venereal diseases, were given as the main factors leading to the low death rate.

A pure milk campaign reduced the death rate from typhoid fever from 173.8, per 100,000 population, in 1891, to 1.5 at the present, the report said.

Lyons, a native of Colombia, South America, was identified by Weinstein's daughter, Jeannette, 16 years old, who was in the shop when the father was shot and killed and was struck herself by the gunman.

Bonfield was killed Wednesday as he attempted to arrest Lyons and a companion after they had held up employes of the University Extension Conservatory here.

GRAIN SHIPS REACH PORT

By the Associated Press.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Dec. 18.—The grain-laden steamers W. E. Fitzgerald and Monroe C. Smith limped into port today, their rigging and hulls solidly encased in ice, after weathering the winter furies of Lake Superior. They had been out of communication with other shipping for six days and were sighted off Iroquois Point, in lower Lake Superior, this morning. The two tugs, Alabama and Sabin, immediately pulled out into the 10-inch ice field and convoyed the intrepid mariners into port. Much concern had been felt in marine circles for the safety of the ships. They carried no wireless.

The steamers Wm. C. Fitch and Thomas Britt were reported stuck fast in the ice off White Shoals in Lake Michigan.

FRENCH BUDGET BILL, BALANCED, IS PASSED

First Since War—Provides Estimated Surplus of $7,000,000, Spends $1,581,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 19 (Sunday).—Both the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies agreed at 3 o'clock this morning on the 1927 budget, which calls for 39,728,310,792 francs (about $1,589,000,000) in receipts and 39,541,443,921 francs ($1,581,000,000) in expenditures.

The chamber took only about 27 days in discussing the various sections of the budget and passed it Dec. 9. The Senate started debate on Dec. 16 and adopted the budget last Friday.

As finally approved the French budget represents the first balanced budget accepted by parliament since the war.

BOULDER CANYON DAM BILL READY FOR COMMITTEE VOTE

Batch of Amendments Rejected as Reading Completed; Foes Still Can Block Action.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—The Swing-Johnson Boulder Canyon dam bill was brought to a point today by the House Irrigation Committee where a final vote on it is being reported to the House is in order at any time. This came about through the rejection of a batch of amendments pending since last year and the completion of reading of the bill, section by section, with amendments in order.

Representative Swing (Rep.) of California, one of its authors, is hopeful a final vote will be taken when the committee meets Monday. He reintroduced the bill in the House as a preparatory step for final vote, the object being to have the bill printed as revised.

Whether other committee members, including Representative Hayden (Dem.) of Arizona, who are opposed to the bill, run counter to the plans, remains to be seen, as it is possible for them to present a number of motions as substitutes for the motion to vote on reporting the measure.

Amendments rejected today were sponsored by Representative Leatherwood (Rep.) of Utah, and were designed to place prospective development on the proposed dam under control of the Federal Power Commission, and to give private companies the right to construct power units.

ITALY TO DROP WAR-BREAD DIET DURING HOLIDAYS

Government Consents to Making of Rich Cakes of Wheat Flour for Christmas.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Dec. 18.—Responding to the national appeal, the government has consented to allow the population a respite from the diet of "war bread" for the duration of the Christmas holidays and children will have their fill of rich cakes made from wheat four.

Nearly every region has a special delicacy, without which Christmas would be as melancholy as an American Thanksgiving without turkey or an English yuletide without plum pudding. So, thanks to the government's decision, Milan will have its "panettoni," a heavy raisin-filled cake known in America through the Italian table d'hote. Rome will have its yellow "panialli;" Bologna its "ciambella." Siena its fruity "panforte" and Tuscany its "ricciarelli." In other parts of the nation, children will gorge themselves with similar heavy sweets.

BROWNING SUITS SUPPRESSED

Justice Refuses to Make "Slush" Public Until Trial Is Called.

By the Associated Press.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Dec. 18.—Supreme Court Justice Morschauser today declined to allow any of the details of the separation suits filed by Frances Howard Browning and her husband, Edward W. Browning, to become public until the suits are heard in Putnam County Court at Carmel next month.

Refusing to grant requests for an examination of the papers and also denying the plea of Browning's counsel for a bill of particulars, Justice Morschauser said the "slush" contained in the complaints of the two parties should not be disclosed until it became part of the testimony. The Court further denied the petition of Mrs. Browning's lawyers for permission to examine the wealthy New York realtor before the trial, to determine the value of his estate.

The order, however, did not include the bulk of the equipment of the company which was said to be owned by Mordkin.

ANAGUA, Nicaragua, Dec. 18. Discussing the situation in Nicaragua and future possibilities, Adolfo Diaz, conservative president, made references today to the United States and Mexico. He said his Government could carry on alone for a month or two against the Mexican-aided revolution, but if left unaided against Mexico, the latter should win.

I accepted the presidency of Nicaragua," he said, "expecting that the United States would aid Nicaragua to restore order and secure peace. The day after my inauguration I appealed to the Government of the United States soliciting its support

"Since then two expeditions have come to the shores of Nicaragua, arms, munitions and personnel from Mexico have been landed, and the Liberals sent to set up a government. I am confronted with the question, if the aid which I expected is not received, whether I will not be better, in order to save lives and the industries of Nicaragua to deal with President Calles direct now. I cannot believe, however, that the United States Government will stand aloof and allow Mexico to overthrow a Nicaraguan Government recognized by the United States and recognized under the conditions which exist.

"The population of Mexico is 14,000,000; the population of Nicaragua is 600,000. If Mexico is determined to set up a Liberal Government in Nicaragua, and if the United States and Nicaragua can find no way to stop Mexican aid to this revolution, would it not be more humane to hand over the Government to the Calles government and its proteges."

the Associated Press.
AN SALVADOR, Dec. 18.—The government of Salvador has recognized the Diaz regime in Nicaragua by virtue of the Central American pacts signed at Washington to which Salvador gave limited approval.

The directors of the principal newspapers in Salvador have sent a message to the Pan-American Union at Washington, declaring that organization "useless." The message asserts that the union did not even forward to the Department of State telegrams of protest against the recognition by the United States of the Diaz Government, charging that the Diaz Government was "one of usurpation, repudiated by the peoples of Central America." The publishers request the Pan-American Union not to invite them to future conferences for cementing Pan-American relations.

MISSION TO REVISE POSTAL RATES DISSOLVES

Majority Files Statement That Difference of Opinion Prevents Recommendation.

the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 18. — The of the joint Congressional Commission created nearly two years ago to inquire into the advisability revising postal rates came to an today without a final majority report being made.

The majority filed a statement both the House and Senate announcing that because a "difference of opinion" there was no recommendation to supplement that made last May and published at that time.

"The recent investigations of the Postoffice department," the Minority reported, "do not lead the Postmaster General to any conclusion which may be taken as further recommendations on the part of the commission."

Senator McKellar (Dem.), Tennessee, filed a minority report, opposing that rates on second class matter, as existing in 1920, should be restored as should the one cent rate on third class matter. He also recommended repeal of the service charge of two cents on parcel post.

the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—A plot to storm the Dupage county jail at Waukegan, Ill., and free five Chicago men serving sentences for robbery was disclosed tonight when Sheriff Lawrence Hattendorf sent out an appeal for aid in finding the plotters. Acting on information, Sheriff Hattendorf searched the cells of the five prisoners and found the bars of the windows sawed through.

The delivery, according to the sheriff's information, was to have taken place Monday night, when a man dressed as a policeman was to have entered and overpowered the outer guard. Although a dozen deputy sheriffs were waiting in ambush, the attempt did not take place.

HUNDREDS OF UNION MEN AT CHARLES J. LAMMERT'S FUNERAL

Painters Secretary Formerly Served as a St. Louis Election Commissioner.

More than 500 persons, many of them union painters, attended funeral services for Charles J. Lammert, secretary-treasurer of the International Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers, at St. Francis de Sales Catholic Church, Gravois and Ohio avenues, at 9:30 a. m. yesterday.

It is estimated that several thousand persons viewed the body of the labor leader while it lay in state at an undertaker's chapel Friday. About 150 automobiles were included in the funeral cortege from the undertaking establishment to the church and then to St. Peter and Paul's Cemetery. Active and honorary pallbearers included local and international labor leaders and political friends of Mr. Lammert, who had served on the St. Louis Board of Education and as an Election Commissioner.

Mr. Lammert, who was 50 years old, died at Lafayette, Ind., international headquarters of the Painters' union, last Tuesday of dropsy. Before moving to Lafayette three years ago he was a leader in labor union promotion here for 25 years and had served as president of the St. Louis Building Trades Council and the local Painters' District Council. He is survived by his widow and four sons.

WOMAN INJURED IN FACTORY GETS VERDICT FOR $15,000

Mrs. Maud Oakley Sought $25,000 for Accident to Machine in September, 1923.

A jury in Circuit Judge Franklin Miller's court yesterday returned a verdict for $15,000 in favor of Mrs. Maud Oakley of 4622 Olive street, against the Crunden-Martin Manufacturing Co. because of injuries suffered by her in an accident at the plant of the company, where she was employed as a machine operator. She was feeding stovepipe metal into the machine when a platform occupied by her tilted so that her clothes became caught by the "dogs" of the machine and she was drawn against it.

She sued for $25,000, alleging negligence on the part of the defendant in not furnishing her a safe place to work. The company denied liability, contending that Mrs. Oakley was an experienced operator and could by the exercise of ordinary care have avoided the accident, which occurred Sept. 8, 1923.

MAIL CARRIER RETIRES AFTER 40 YEARS ON $1000 PENSION

George Shaw, a letter carrier serving in and about the environs of the Jefferson-Gravois business circle for approximately 40 years, will retire from active duty on Christmas day, when he will be awarded a pension of $1000 a year under the civil service act. The pension is the maximum to those who have served 30 years and have attained the age of 65.

Shaw, who lives at 3314 Ohio avenue with his wife and daughter, entered the postal service in 1887, and practically all his work in the department has been on the south side of the city. On Friday he was guest of honor at a gathering of co-workers and business men in Benton Park substation, Sidney street and Texas avenue, when he was given a gold watch and Morris chair.

Besides representatives of the Jefferson-Gravois business men, there were present two assistant superintendents of mails, George Stoehr and Del La Berg, who extended the tribute of Postmaster Alt, on Shaw's efficient record. Shaw thanked his friends for the gifts.

SEAPLANES MAY RACE IN 1927

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Plans to hold a special convention in Paris, Jan. 25, to consider the advisability of holding the Schneider Cup international air races in Italy next year, rather than postponing them until 1928, were set forth today in cable advices to the American National Aeronautical Association. Godfrey Cabot, who is representing the association abroad, cabled that the Paris special meeting had been agreed upon and intimated that there was a strong disposition on the part of Europe's aeronautical leaders to reconsider the 1928 race decision.

By reason of Italy's sweeping victory in the Schneider race held last November at Norfolk, Va., the next air classic will take place in that country. Should the race be held next year, the American entries will be hard pushed if they provide themselves with new racing machines that will give them a chance to recapture the trophy.

BAR STEALING OF SERMONS

Illinois Methodist Pastors Adopt Code of Ethics.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—A good Methodist minister tells the truth "tactfully and constructively and does not steal sermons from his colleagues."

These two principles are among 10 incorporated in a code of ethics for ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church compiled by occupants of pulpits of the denomination in Northern Illinois.

Other foundation stones in a successful ministry, the code sets forth, are physical fitness, ability to keep a secret, prompt payment of debts and sufficient study to keep abreast of current thought.

The preachers agreed that they must refuse to united improper persons in marriage and bear in mind that money is of secondary importance.

ARNOLD RECANTS ON NEWTON STATEMENT

Citizens' Terminal Committee Attorney Says He Was in Error as to Hearing.

Glendy B. Arnold, attorney for the Citizens' Terminal Committee, which is backing the proposal for exchange of the use of the Eads and Municipal bridges, yesterday corrected his statement, made several days ago, that Congressman Cleveland A. Newton attended a recent hearing as attorney for the Manufacturers' Railway. Arnold said he was mistaken in saying Newton was at the hearing. He was thinking of another hearing, he said when he saw Newton, at that time present as an individual and not as counsel for anyone.

Arnold's statement followed a denial made by Newton, who insisted he represented no private interest. Arnold's first statement was evoked by a bill, presented by Newton in Congress, which would authorize the city to condemn and acquire the highway deck of Eads bridge, to be operated free of tolls. Such action would materially alter the bridge situation, as to the proposed exchange of uses.

The Terminal Association, Arnold said, was in no way responsible for his erroneous statement regarding Congressman Newton. Arnold said he was not in the employ of the Terminal, and that from his experience in the bridge negotiations, he does not believe that, as Newton has suggested, the Terminal is in a conspiracy to gobble up the Municipal Bridge. The Terminal, Arnold argues, can use the Municipal bridge whenever it desires to do so, as can any railroad, since the act of Congress, providing for the bridge, gives all railroads equal rights of use.

KILLED H'SBAND OVER CHILD

By the Associated Press.

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 18.—A quarrel between husband and wife over the spanking of their child led to the shooting and death of Timothy Patrick J. Power, 38 years old, district fire chief, here today. The wife, who said she fired the fatal shot accidentally, was arrested on a charge of murder.

Power struck her, Mrs. Power told the police, after he had protested against her slapping their 14-year-old son. She declared she seized a revolver, warning him she would shoot if he did not resist. She pulled the trigger as a threat, but "had no idea of firing" the weapon, as it usually was locked by a safety catch, she said in a statement to the police.

DIVORCES SCHOOL TEACHER

Smith originally filed suit, charging general indignities, but his petition was dismissed before his wife's cross-bill was heard. They were married in 1908 at Decatur, Ill., and separated in 1919, when Mrs. Smith and the son went to live in Los Angeles because of ill health.

RUSSELL SCOTT MAKES LAST STAND TO ESCAPE GALLOWS

Illinois Supreme Court Asked to Grant New Trial to Murderer of Drug Clerk.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 18.—The fate of Russell T. Scott, under death sentence at Chicago for the murder of Joseph Maurer, a drug clerk, rests with the Illinois Supreme Court.

The case was submitted to the court today by Attorney William Scott Stewart, counsel for the man who has thrice escaped the gallows and First Assistant State's Attorney George Gorman, both of Chicago. Scott, after escaping the noose, spent nine months in the criminal insane hospital at Chester, later was found to be sane and again heard the death sentence imposed. Attorney Stewart bases his chief argument for a retrial of the case on the fact that Judge Kavanagh declined to grant a change of venue to Scott. Stewart also declared the trial in Cook County was unfair and was more like a third degree inquisition. A decision is not expected before the February term.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NASHVILE, Tenn., Dec. 18.—A feud between a woman undertaker and a rival company, headed by her divorced husband, today resulted in a fist fight over the body of a boy. The trouble started when Mrs. Letty Sweeney, woman undertaker, was called to get the body of James Fowlkes, 10 years old, killed in an automobile accident. The family called Mrs. Sweeney under the impression that her establishment had taken the place of the Funeral Home, Inc., conducted by her divorced husband, A. S. Sweeney. Later the father of the boy called Sweeney and told him that a mistake had been made and that he wished the body transferred from Mrs. Sweeney's place to Sweeney's Funeral Home.

Sweeney sent R. L. Owen, an embalmer, to get the body. Mrs. Sweeney knocked Owen down.

The father of the boy had to obtain a writ of replevin to remove the body from Mrs. Sweeney's place to her ex-husband's.

Goodwin, 25 years old, now in jail at Clayton, was shot when attempting to hold up the Schwerdtmann Drug Store, Delmar boulevard and Melville avenue, University City, on Sept. 27, he told the police he attempted the robbed to procure funds for his wife who was ill. Yesterday the wife, Mrs. Josephine Goodwin, living at the Berger Htel, 6668 Delmar boulevard, filed suit for divorce in Circuit Court at Clayton because of his attempt at robbery.

She said they were married in November, 1925, and separated in June, when his alleged association with habitual criminals became unbearable.

SHOPPERS WATCH ROBBERY

Torpedoes Keep Back Crowd in Store—Jewels Recovered.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—Hundreds of Christmas shoppers watched in panic as thieves smashed a glass jewelry case at The Fair, big State street department store, today, exploded several torpedoes to scatter the crowd, scooped up $11,000 worth of gems and trinkets within reach and dashed away.

Two minutes later a traffic policeman, a woman shopper and a mail clerk who leaped over the show case in pursuit captured a man who identified himself as Douglas Craig, 45, and recovered all of the loot, valued at several thousand dollars. Spectators differed as to whether there were one or more robbers. Store attaches believed that Craig had a companion who escaped. In the midst of a heavy holiday rush, the man, or men, hurled a rock through the show case, and drove back the throng by dropping torpedoes on the stone floor several women fainted.

OFFICER'S DRY JOKE ALL WET

SEWARD, Alaska, Dec. 18.—On orders from Attorney-General Sargent, Harry I. Staser, Deputy U. S. Marshal in Seward, was dismissed today after a newspaper dispatch from Anchorage, Alaska, came to light. The dispatch related that Staser agreed with Maj. Horace Kemp, U. S. A., that in 30 places along the main street of Anchorage a man could get a drink. Kemp commanded a detachment of troops in Anchorage. The post was abandoned Dec. 3 and Kemp returned to the States.

Staser said he was joking and that he thought he ought to have a chance to defend himself.

K. G. ORMISTON GIVES BOND IN LOS ANGELES

Prosecutor Charges Double-Cross in Radio Man's Appearance on the Coast.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 18.—Somewhere in Los Angeles Kenneth G. Ormiston, key figure in the Aimee Semple McPherson case, tonight awaited the next move of the law, his arraignment Dec. 27 on an indictment charging criminal conspiracy. He surrendered to authorities here today, then was released on bond. He succeeded in having bail reduced from $10,000 to $2500.

Ormiston asserted he had not agreed nor bargained with the District Attorney or anyone else to tell any story about the McPherson case. Mrs. McPherson, evangelist of Angelus Temple, where Ormiston formerly was radio operator, is facing trial for conspiracy and perjury. She disappeared last May, reappearing five weeks later at Douglas, Ariz., saying she had been kidnaped, and she repeated her story to a grand jury, ostensibly to cause the indictment of her alleged kidnapers. The State contends her whole story was false. At least part of her absence was spent, the State contends, in a cottage at Carmel, Cal., with Ormiston.

E. J. Dennison, who took a leading part in presenting the State's conspiracy case against Mrs. McPherson and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, at their preliminary hearing, charged that he was double-crossed by Ormiston's "private captors," who have had him in tow since he was found at Harrisburg, Pa., more than a week ago. Dennison, after obtaining an indictment against the radioman from the grand jury, in an effort to facilitate his extradition, was endeavoring at the time Ormiston arrived in California to bring about his arrest in Chicago on a fugitive warrant.

Ormiston refused to say where he would stop pending his next court appearance.

13 PASSENGERS INJURED IN CHICAGO-ST. LOUIS BUS

Machine Skids Into Ditch and Turns Over Near Joliet, Ill.; Two St. Louisans Hurt.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JOLIET, Ill., Dec. 18.—Thirteen passengers were injured, seven severely, when a Chicago-St. Louis motorbus left the road and overturned five miles north of here early today. The bus skidded into a ditch and was saved from sliding over a 40-foot embankment by two fence posts, against which it lodged.

Among the more severely injured were two St. Louisans, Thomas Payne, 41 years old, 4909 McPherson avenue, who suffered internal injuries, and Louis Gordon, 27, 4013 West Pine boulevard, injuries to the spine and bruises. Others seriously hurt were H. F. Farley and Gustav Wickman, Kansas City; Walter Kennedy, Lake Mills, Ia.; Marion Ice, Miami, Fla.; Miss Emma Thomas, Geneva, Switzerland, and L. L. Alexander, Augusta, Me. Eight passengers escaped injury.

The bus driver, Lucas Webber, Chicago, who had swerved to avoid hitting a touring car, suffered cuts and bruises. All were taken to the St. Joseph Hospital here, where physicians expect them to recover.

MAN COLLAPSES AND DIES IN PATROL ON WAY TO COURT

Ernest C. Evert Had Been Arrested on Drunkenness Charge and Spent Night in Cell.

While being taken in a police patrol wagon from the Carr Street Station to Police Court yesterday morning, Ernest C. Evert, 45 years old, a fireman employed at the Ambassador Hotel, Sixth street and Lucas avenue, collapsed and was dead when city hospital was reached. Apoplexy was said to have been the cause.

Evert was arrested last night on a charge of drunkenness when he was found lying at Sixth and Morgan streets. Police said he appeared to be in good physical condition when he was placed in the wagon.

A week ago Evert collapsed in Judge Bayer's court when testifying on the stand in a case in which two men were charged with robbing him. A few days previously he had approached two policemen standing near Seventh street and Franklin avenue and pointed out the two men, declaring they had held him up three times in two weeks and were waiting to hold him up again. The men were arrested, but Judge Gayer discharged them when, after Evert's collapse on the stand, physicians said he had been drinking.

PRESENT SITE FOR FEDERAL BUILDING SO FAR NEGLECTED

Agent W. J. Field Says Historic Eighth Street Location Has Been Little Discussed in Conferences.

NEW STORIES MIGHT BE ADDED THERE

Supports Post-Dispatch Editorial's Contention That Convenience and Accessibility Must Be Regarded.

W. F. Field, site agent of the United States Treasury Department, in his inquiry of the last 10 days as to a site for the new Federal building, has given his time almost wholly to discussions of a site other than the present one, on the central downtown block bounded by Eighth, Ninth, Olive and Locust streets.

He has discussed, with property owners, real estate agents and civic organizations, two alternatives—using the lot owned by the Government at Fourth and Chestnut streets, or getting a new site to the west, preferably in the Memorial Plaza vicinity.

A Post-Dispatch reporter talked with Field on the suggestion made in an editorial in yesterday's Post-Dispatch, that the present Eighth street site should be used for the new building, as a means of stabilizing downtown realty conditions, and to avert a danger of overbuilding of office structures.

Few Have Mentioned Site.

"Very little has been said to me, since I have been here, about using the present Eighth street site," Field said. "That does not mean the Government has overlooked the possibility. Naturally, most of the people who come to see me are interested in some proposal for a new site.

"I do not think the Government would consider the idea of tearing down the present Federal building and erecting a new one on its foundations. If the site were used, the present building would be retained, and more stories added to it. I am not an architect, and perhaps an architect could work out this problem, but I would be afraid the result would be an architectural monstrosity.

"An objection to demonishing the present building and putting up another on its site is that it would mean a long period of scattering the branches of service in makeshift quarters, with great inconvenience to the public and more or less demoralization to the service.

"The Eighth street site would bring, in my opinion, not less than $5,000,000, and probably much more. I base this on the statement of several authorities on downtown realty, one a leading banker. By selling this site, the Government would realize enough to provide for a new site and a new building of 8 or 9 stories, which would house all the Federal offices and save the Government the rent it is paying to the Pierce, Planters, Title Guaranty and other downtown buildings. That looks like a good business proposition for the Government.

Plaza Vicinity Convenient.

"Of course, public convenience and accessibility must be kept in mind, but these can be had in a less valuable location than the present one. The Plaza neighborhood, which the City Plan Commission members have recommended, was considered by the city to be convenient enough to serve as the location for the City Hall and court buildings.

"There is probably merit in the argument that retention of the Eighth street site would help to stabilize values downtown. Whether the erection of a large business building on this site would be a good thing for the business district, I am not prepared to say. Naturally, the Government does not wish to harm the business community. However, we must plan, in this matter, for 25 years hence, as well as for the next few years."

Field will remain here part of this week, and may return to St. Louis from Washington after Christmas for further consideration of the site question. He has shown a sympathetic attitude toward the city's river front improvement plan, and therefore a willingness to consider alternatives for the Fourth street site. A new Federal building on that site, as pointed out by the Commission, would interfere seriously with the river front plan.

FORD NOT TO MAKE NEW MODEL

Manufacturer Quoted as Denying Plan for 6-Cylinder Car.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Henry Ford has no intention of producing a new model car.

"We have no intention of producing a six or an eight-cylinder car or anything else of the kind outside our regular products," the automobile manufacturer is quoted as saying in an interview today. "We made sixes 20 years ago. Concerning the outlook generally in the industry for the next year, Ford said he expected a steady growth it has shown in the last year or two.

4 KILLED, 5 HURT WHEN WATER TANK CRASHES IN PLANT

Reservoir Topples Off Supports and Plunges Through 3-Story Candy Factory Into the Cellar.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 18.—Four persons were killed, five were removed to hospitals because of injuries and a number of others were hurt less seriously when a 10,000-gallon water tank on the roof of the T. H. Wunderle candy factory fell today. Those killed were Marie Hammill, 22 years old, Robt. Couger, 28; Charles Kobise, 20, and John Driscoll. They were crushed by falling timbers and debris when the big tank crashed through the building from roof to cellar.

The cause of the collapse was as yet unknown tonight. It was reported at first that there had been an explosion which toppled the tank from its brick foundations on top of the 3-story building. Employes and officers of the company denied this, however.

Most of the employes leave the plant at 11 a. m. Saturday. Those caught today had remained to earn over time pay. There was no warning, they said, except the grinding of twisted steel as the supports of the tank collapsed.

Rescuers worked until almost dark. They were halted by Fire Chief Davis until the tottering walls and lose beams are made safe.

MRS. M. H. GUGGENHEIM SUES FOR SEPARATE MAINTENANCE

Wife of Physician, Who Remarried Him After Divorce, Seeks $500 Monthly.

Mrs. Maude H. Guggenheim yesterday filed suit for $500 a month separate maintenance against Dr. Louis K. Guggenheim, 6820 Delmar boulevard, with offices in the Carleton Building. She alleges general indignities, declaring that early in 1925 the defendant became sullen and refused to accompany her to theaters and other places of entertainment and that he was cold and critical in his demeanor toward her.

She further avers that Dr. Guggenheim forced her to surrender $4000 in bonds which belonged to him and which he had turned over to her, and that on March 15, 1925, he struck her on the wrists and arms and later struck her with a telephone receiver.

Dr. and Mrs. Guggenheim were remarried Feb. 24, 1924, about a year after she had obtained a divorce from him, and they again separated on March 30, 1925. In April of last year he sued for a divorce, but recently dismissed the petition, his wife's suit sets forth. Custody of their two children, Paul, 11 years old, and Mary, 9, is sought by Mrs. Guggenheim. Dr. Guggenheim yesterday declined to discuss his wife's present suit.

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—A nine-hole golf course 38 stories above the street is to be the prized possession of the Chicago Press Club. It will be on the roof of a skyscraper the club plans to erect as a center for the advertising, publishing and allied interests.

The Press Club, Chicago's second oldest, will occupy five stories and the basement of the structure, which will be erected at the corner of Michigan and Grand avenues. There will be 23 stories in the main portion of the building, with a tower 15 stories high.

ALL JAPAN PRAYING FOR DYING EMPEROR

Theaters Closed, Business Suspended Pending Outcome of His Illness.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Dec. 19.—There was practically no change in the condition of Emperor Yoshihito at 8 o'clock this morning, a bulletin issued by the household department said. It is considered probable that his present condition will continue for several days.

The household department, replying to inquiries by more than 100 newspaper men gathered about the summer palace grounds at Hayama, gave assurance that the bulletions issued gave the exact condition of the Emperor.

The anxiety of the newspaper men was caused by the Japanese custom of withholding announcement of the death of an emperor until the body has been taken to the palace at Tokio. Such announcement would be made by the household department, and would also announce the succession to the throne of Crown Prince Hirohito, who since 1921 has been Japan's regent, acting for the invalid Emperor.

Virtually all of official Japan has gathered at Hayama, a village at the seashore 33 miles from Tokio.

Every temple and shrine in the nation is crowded with worshipers, praying for their sovereign. All parties and holiday festivities are suspended, social and business life has halted. Foreign diplomats have cancelled all functions and theaters are closed.

ATTORNEY QUESTIONS HEFLIN ABOUT JESSE SMITH'S DEATH

Calls On Senator for Basis of Statement That Daugherty's Confidant Was Murdered.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18. — Department of Justice officials today notified Senator Heflin (Dem.), Alabama, that District Attorney Buckner of the Southern District of New York was sending him a letter requesting a statement of his information concerning the death here several years ago of Jesse Smith, close friend of former Attorney General Daugherty.

In the Senate Thursday in commenting on the Fall-Doheny verdict Heflin charged that Smith was murdered in Daugherty's apartment and did not commit suicide. Heflin said tonight he "would be glad to render any suggestions and information concerning the death of Smith when I receive Buckner's letter and learn what information he desires."

BETTING ON CATALINA SWIM

One Wall Street Firm Offers Odds That No One Makes It.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Wall street already is betting on the Santa Catalina Island channel swim, scheduled for Jan. 15.

One firm yesterday offered substantial odds that none of the contestants would get across. One wager reported was $500 to $2500 that Gertrude Ederle would be successful, but her representative, Dudley Field Malone, said theatrical engagements would prevent her from competing. Longer odds were quoted against the chances of Mrs. Clemington (Mille Gade) Corson and Mrs. Lottie Moore Schoemmel. William Wrigley Jr. has posted $40,000 prize money for the swim.

Kitten Saves Six Lives in Fire.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—A little kitten saved the lives of six persons in a dwelling house fire here today. It clawed at Meyer Rosenblatt's face until he awoke, but its little mistress, Blanche Solomon, six years old, perished, the only one of the family not saved.

GIRL STOLE TO CARE FOR FOSTER-FAMILY

Took Proceeds of Check to Provide Food, Clothing and Rent—No Prosecution.

It was the week before Christmas at the home of Mrs. Dora Stief, 906 North Eleventh street, mother of 14 children—nine lead, two at a city institution, and three living with her. Food, fuel and clothing were scarce, and rent was due.

Things brightened when Edna Clark, 16 years old, came to board with them. She was a half-orphan, making her own way in the world, and she had $5 saved, and proceeded to spend it for the family's necessities.

The need was still great, so Edna went last Friday to the Board of Children's Guardians, of which she formerly was a ward, and appealed for charity. An investigation was promised. As Edna walked out she saw a check for $22.50 on a desk. She took it, not realizing it was an allotment to a widow, caring for orphans. Had she known, she would not have taken it, she says.

After indorsing the check in the name of the widow, Edna cashed it at the City Treasurer's office in City Hall, and used the proceeds to purchase two baskets of provisions for the Stief family, a pair of shoes for one child, a toy for another, and to pay $9 rent to the landlord.

Then police, notified of the disappearance of the check, came and seized Edna and her purchases, recovering also the money paid to the landlord. Edna was taken to the House of Detention, proud that she had not spent a nickel of the money on herself. There will be no prosecution. The Board of Children's Guardians and other organizations will care for the girl and her foster-family.

Bank Robbers Escape With $6000.

VERNON, Tex., Dec. 18.—Three unmasked men robbed the Bank of Odell, Tex., 20 miles north of here, of approximately $6000 this afternoon and later fought off a posse near Altus, Ok. The robbers locked persons in the bank in the vault and drove out of Odell before an alarm was raised. Near Altus a posse, guarding the road, opened fire and the robbers replied as they turned and drove back towards Texas. None of the possemen was hit and apparently the fugitives sustained no casualties. Search for the men was continued throughout the night.

SUIT AGAINST SINCLAIR FOR TEAPOT DOME SHARE DROPPED

H. Leslie Parker, Wyoming Oil Man, Contended Interest Had Been Conveyed to Him By His Partner.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Suit brought by H. Leslie Parker of Wyoming against Harry F. Sinclair for an accounting as to Sinclair's disposition of a holding corporation, known as the Salt Creek Oil field in Wyoming, alleged to be worth $100,000,000, was dismissed in United States District Court today.

Parker brought suit last January to be declared owner of one-seventh interest in Sinclair's Teapot Dome holdings and of a similar interest in Mammoth Oil stock given in exchange for all or part of the Teapot Dome holdings. He said he had received the interest in the holding by conveyance from Marion N. Wheeler in 1924.

At that time Parker said he believed the damages to which he considered himself entitled would total at least $16,000,000. Parker and Wheeler, his partner, claimed that interests had been obtained by them from some of the pioneers in the Salt Creek Oil field, in which Teapot Dome is.

In the complaint it was alleged that Sinclair agreed with Albert B. Fall, former Secretary of the Interior, "to quiet" all outstanding titles to land or rights inside of Teapot Dome.

PHRASE IN INSTRUCTIONS OF DENVER JUDGE REVERSES CASE

Appellate Court Finds "One Court Has Held" Was Argumentative and Prejudicial.

Of 12 errors attributed to the trial Judge, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday held that 11 were trivial, but that the twelfth was sufficient for reversal of the conviction of a Denver bootlegger and his sentence to 11 months in jail and a fine of $500.

The consequential error was that Federal Judge Symes of Denver, in his instructions to the jury, had said "one court has held" that presence of liquor was prima facie evidence of violation and that the place in which liquor was found hence was a nuisance within the meaning of the Volstead act.

The Appellate Judges, Kenyon, Sanborn and Scott, held that the phrase "one court has held," made Judge Symes' instructions argumentative and tended to prejudice the jury.

BLEASE WANTS REED REPORT ON PEPPER EXPENDITURES

Asks That Senate Get Investigating Committee to Tell What Pennsylvanian Spent.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Senator Blease (Dem.) of South Carolina today asked the Senate to obtain a partial report from the Reed Investigating Committee covering the primary campaign expenditures of Senator Pepper (Rep.) of Pennsylvania.

Apparently referring to moves against seating William S. Vare, who defeated Pepper in the Pennsylvania primaries, and Frank L. Smith, Senator-Elect from Illinois Blease said he could not "see the difference between letting a man in who spent a lot of money and keeping another out who spent maybe more money."

SEEKS AID FOR ARMY BILL

General Staff Asked to Support Pay for Emergency Officers.

By the Associated Press.

WILLINGTON, Dec. 18.—Indorsement by the army general staff of his bill to increase compensation for disabled emergency wartime officers was sought today by Representative Roy G. Fitzgerald, (Rep.) of Ohio, in a letter to Major General Summerall, chief of staff.

Fitzgerald said later he wanted Summerall's approval in an effort to have the rules committee and the Republican steering committee bring the bill before the House at an early date. It now is near the bottom of the calendar. He declared opposition to the measure was weakening and that Secretary Davis of the War Department had withdrawn his opposition. It would permit retirement of emergency officers with 30 per cent disability or more, on the same compensation basis as regular army officers.

Passengers and Crew of Ship Saved

By the Associated Press.

GENOA, Italy, Dec. 18. — The crew and 256 persons aboard the Italian sailing vessel Guarneri were rescued early today by the Italian steamship Roma, says a wireless message received here. The Guarneri, whose masts had been ripped away, was abandoned.

MORE BRAIN, LESS BRAWN CRY GOES UP FROM NAVY

Qualified Flyers Scarce and Civil Engineers Sadly in Demand, Reports Show.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Less brawn and more brain are the need of the Navy.

The seagoing military arm of the Nation today gave notice it could use a number of men learned in the sciences of engineering and aeronautics. The Navy's plight was set forth in annual reports of Rear Admirals Gregory and Moffett, chiefs respectively of the Bureaus of Yards and Docks and of Aeronautics. Experts were so scarce, impairment of efficiency was threatened, they said.

Qualified flyers, Rear Admiral Moffett asserted, are scarce, rejections averaging 70 per cent. Rear Admiral Gregory advised drafting experienced civilian engineers. Each engineer, Gregory pointed out, is the watchdog of "probably $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 worth of Naval property," and "conditions such as these are not met with in private plants."

TELLS WIFE HOW TO SAVE BUSINESS, HANGS SELF

Chicagoan Advises Prospective Widow on Transactions Involving $500,000 Before Ending Life.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—Afraid to face financial difficulties, Samuel Adelman, 43 years old, owner of large business interests here, today wrote a long letter to his wife, telling her how to extricate his business from reverses, then killed himself by hanging.

"I have been wishing for a long time," he wrote his wife in the six-page letter, "just to pass away." He explained every phase of his business and how his wife should conduct it. The letter advised Mrs. Adelman on transactions amounting to $500,000.

CULT LEADER NOT IN COURT

House of David Contempt and Receivership Cases Delayed.

By the Associated Press.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Dec. 18. —"Queen" Mary Purnell, wife of Benjamin Purnell, leader of the House of David, religious cult at Benton Harbor, Mich., appeared before Federal Judge Raymond today in behalf of herself and husband who is ill, to show cause why they should not be held in contempt of court, and why a receiver should not be appointed for the colony. It was reported that Purnell, although ill, may live on for a year or more but his strength is ebbing slowly.

Attorneys for the defense, two cult members, presented a motion for dismissal of the suit to turn the colony into receivership brought by three former cult members. An attorney for the plaintiffs attempted to show that property of the cult had been deeded to two irresponsible parties and offered later as collateral for bonds under which Purnell is held on criminal charges. Five days were given the plaintiffs' counsel to prepare a brief in answer to defense counsel.

TRACE CAUSE OF EPIDEMIC

Dairy Employe in Ohio Found to Be Typhoid "Carrier."

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 18.—A typhoid fever epidemic, in Wellington, Lorain County, last August, which caused the death of 14 persons and illness to 149 others, was caused by one man, the State Department of Health announced today.

The report followed an exhaustive examination, which convinced investigators that the man, employed in a Wellington dairy, was a "carrier" of typhoid bacilli. He was directly responsible for a large majority of the cases which were transmitted through the milk supply, and indirectly responsible for practically all others, it is believed.

LONDON PAPERS DISTURBED BY CHINESE SITUATION

Consider Dispatch of British Fleet and Minister's Departure for Pekin Significant.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—While proposals of the British Charge d'Affaires at Pekin are under consideration by the diplomatic corps at that place, the British Minister, Miles Lampson, who has been in conference at Hankow with Eugene Chen, Foreign Minister of the Cantonese Government, has gone to Pekin to take up his new post. The document which the Charge d'Affaires has presented at Pekin has not been made public, but it is presumed it has to do with the future attitude of the Powers toward China.

Some of the London newspapers express apprehension over the coincidence of the departure of Lampson for Pekin with the dispatch to China of eight British destroyers and one cruiser from Malta.

The Star recalls Lloyd George's warning that the British Government might be pushed into "something impulsive and provocative in China." The paper adds it is significant that these moves coincide with the retreat of the Cantonese from Hangchow, capital of Chekiang Province, which they occupied for a few hours last Wednesday, and the reported intervention of Gen. Chang Tso Lin, Manchurian war lord, who demands that the Powers shall not recognize the Cantonese.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—A collection of historical and antique time pieces valued by experts at more than $150,000, has been presented to New York University by James Arthur of New Rochelle, N. Y.

There is also a library containing a historical treatment of watch and clock making. The clocks date back to 1742 and include at least one timepiece from almost every country on the globe.

SAN FRANCISCO, California.

GEORGE STERLING, that queer paradox of laughter and beauty and despondency and pessimistic wonder, got tired of it all not so many days ago. He tilted a poison dose, and as he drained it dry he drained out his life and soul. Away he went, sent on his way by his own hand, for just what reason or reasons his comrades have no certainty. They can only cogitate and surmise; for this Sterling was a poet, a very fine poet, and there often is no telling what motivates the lives of poets or their deaths.

This man of flesh and blood, known to the world by the label of George Sterling, is gone. The music and the excellencies of his words remain: you may go to your favorite library, and there, asking for a book of his, find one; you can do that now, and your great-grandchildren may be able to do the same, if they so wish; maybe their distant posterity, too. And there is no reason at all why that side of Sterling, artistically, should not be sufficient for you or anyone else. George Sterling was known as he was, widely, not because he was that sprite, George Sterling, who dashed around San Francisco and the cities of the coast, flying like a thing apart from humanity, tilting the goblet at his favorite tavern, being gay and merry and not caring much for conventions and their bounds. The Sterling of whom most people know was the singer of songs.

REINCARNATION

By GEORGE STERLING

Once by the sea her lips, laid hushed on mine,
Stirred faintly, saying, "I love thee!" Here, how still!
Nor in her eyes is that unchanging thrill
As of the starlight, solemn and divine,
Death being possessed of them, for if they shine,
'Tis by a sea that other shadows fill,
Where foileth ever her pursuing will
The unapproachable horizon line.

Alas! if irretrievably we part * * *
The spirit boweth with her weight of fears.
Ah! met again within the farther years,
Shall I not know thee for the ghost thou art?
Or will there be no wonder at the heart
And sudden starlight in remembering tears?
Am I not true? Have I not done
All things for thine, for thee alone,
O sun-land, sea-land, thou mine own?"

"Gee!" murmurs the listener. "Do you s'pose we'll ever get to California?".

"Hot chance," replied his companion.

Nevertheless, Sterling was in California less than a year later. His friend soon followed him, and with youthful enthusiasm and a bit of sheepishness they sought out this Western poet, Joaquin Miller, and he introduced them to his company.

"We learned from our new acquaintances," writes Sterling, "that they were in the habit of coming to the redwoods every Saturday afternoon, from April to November, and remaining there till Sunday evening. We thereupon announced, without invitation, our intention of becoming campers, too, and on the following Saturday I reappeared on the scene. I bore beefsteaks and port.

"Those were glorious week-ends, made the more delightful because they were so foreign to my previous experiences. The camp was a three-quarter circle of redwoods, sprung from the circumference of some enormous ancestor. We came in our oldest clothes and slept on the bare ground, tentless, in tattered comforters, which, with battered tinware and grimy frying-pans, we hid in the nearest brush for the period of our absence. Our Saturday evening's meal would consist of the beefsteaks we had brought with us, broiled on sticks of green laurel over the coals of our campfire and washed down with a quart lard-can of strong coffee. By 10 o'clock we would stretch out, our feet to the replenished fire, and sleep peacefully till the first light of day. So slumbered Shakspeare's ship-boy!

"We were not, however, all young in years. Our dearest friend and Nestor was a man old enough to be our father; but he had an ageless heart, and was in all ways as one of us—was even our best shot. He was Albert Bierce, an elder brother of Ambrose, and like him a veteran of the Civil War. He was a boy with us for those memorable days, though at last I had to write of him:

'Rest you, noble and strong and straight
As the shaft of the redwood tree!
It is not ill with the race of men,
If a man like you can be.'

"So we sprawled, fed and at ease, under the boughs of our friendly redwoods, speculating sometimes on the stars that shone through the foliage."

There you have a portrait of a man painted by himself, painted unconsciously while he is endeavoring to paint another. You find the ideas of the man and his simple tastes, for Sterling's tastes were always simple; you see the poetry he found in those California nights; you catch his philosophy in the above quatrain to Albert Bierce.

When Sterling came to California at about the age of 21, he found employment with his uncle who owned lands near those of Joaquin Miller. Sterling did not then turn to literature as a bread and butter business. He took a fling at many things; one of these was real estate. But that did not last too long.

His standing as a poet did not come too soon. He first gained recognition in 1903 when "The Testimony of the Suns" was published by a San Francisco bookman. It was a private venture, financed by Sterling. Six hundred copies were printed. Half of them were sold, for later Sterling told his intimate friends:

"I gave away 300 copies, and this stimulated the demand which sold the rest."

Two years later Sterling moved to Carmel-by-the-Sea, where he remained for nine years. It was in 1907, on the publication of the poem, "A Wine of Wizardry," in a magazine, that Sterling definitely, letting other things go, turned to writing. In 1911 "The House of Orchids" was published.

"Dante With His Fellow Poets," from the painting by Vasari.

Sterling as he appeared in one of his own plays given by the Bohemian Club of San Francisco.

So he was writing poetry and searching for beauty and all the time death was calling nearby. He was married in 1900 to Carrie E. Rand. Several years later a romance sprang up between Sterling and Nora May French, a California poet. In 1907, while she was a house-guest of Sterling and his wife at Carmel, she took cyanide and ended her life. At the time she was engaged to marry a British Army officer.

Then, in 1913, Sterling's wife divorced him. She divorced him, she said, because he had a poet's temperament.

He was gaining greater and greater fame as a fashioner of lovely words in lovely lines. But he was too able a man to let praise turn his head into believing the world had changed into a paradise. Applause did not cause him to miss the truth of life as he saw it lived. And if it had, he would have been jolted out of any such complacency in short order. For in 1918 death visited close by again; again by the cruel path of suicide. His former wife killed herself. It grieved Sterling deeply and he never ceased to brood over it.

Always, it seems, beneath his gayety and enthusiasm in living and searching for beauty, there ran a profound stream of sadness, all the more poignant because it was kept underground. So continually perturbed was the man who tells this gay tale:

"Well I remember that clear and potent liquid, for I was to feel its power more than once. The happiest of those occasions was perhaps when I drove up to his home to select a Christmas tree in the green arches farther up the road. I had as companions Jack London and Herman Whitaker, the novelist, and drove an ancient horse of great size and strength, called Unga bungus. Our vehicle was an ordinary wagon such as grocers used at the time, and we occupied its wide front seat.

"It was late afternoon and Joaquin was engaged in watering some of his rose bushes near the front fence. Naturally he saw us and called us in, and in a few minutes we were making merry over the moonshine—'and then some, and then some,' as the slang of the day had it, till, before we were aware, the spires and turrets of San Francisco lay dark against a royal sunset. We embarked, and proceeding to the redwoods, cut our tree, one not more than twelve feet in height, and thrust it in the wagon.

"Joaquin was waiting for us in the purple twilight, as we made to repass his hospitable door, and insisted on a saddle-cup. We had it, and more. He assured us there wasn't a headache in a gallon of the stuff, and accepting his statement as from the lips of a prophet, we bade fair to prove it, whether or no. Indeed, we rose to great heights, all four of us, that evening, and I would that I could recall even one thing we said. But it grew darker and darker outside, and at last we exchanged our farewells and departed, chanting hymns of victory. It was a wild ride homeward. I gave the venerable beast the rein, and he fairly leapt, with all the fervor of manger-longing, down the long slopes. It was a wonder that we came to no ill end; as it was, when we stopped at last to leave our Christmas tree at London's home, we found we had lost it en route!"

THAT is the side Sterling usually put up in public. A boy's spirit encased in this man who had got into his fifties. Sterling, rolling about in the grass, convulsed with joy over some boyish prank or other. A story is told of what Sterling did on that sad night that ended June of 1919, the night Mr. Volstead's sad joke sneaked down upon us. Sterling, on that night, flew like a disciple of Bacchus from one bright light to another in that part of San Francisco where gayety was brightest with reporters following in his wake to tell the tale in the next day's papers of what this poet had been about. And this same Sterling used to strip among the gray rocks of the Carmel coast. Striking through the water, his lithe body a very part of it. This Sterling whose face so resembled that of Dante that sculptors have remarked that were it to freeze into marble it easily might pass for the bust of the great Italian.

Not long ago Sterling found his last romance. She was a Mrs. Beatrice Worlock of San Francisco. They were to be married, and though no date had been set, all their friends knew of it. But this very romance is said to have preyed upon the poet's mind. A great deal of his last work wound itself about her. These verses held promise of great happiness. But they say of Sterling that while women played a great part in his life and in the inspiration of his writing, he never found love. Always he sought it as a thing of beauty; it was said he needed the maternal love of some woman who could understand his nature. But never had he found that which he sought, in its entirety. Fear that he would again fail in his quest may have been the motivating cause for his suicide.

At the time of his death Sterling was living at the Bohemian Club here. He had been ill for a time and had been unable to play host to H. L. Mencken, the critic and editor, who had come to visit him. But a few hours before the poet's death was discovered, Mencken had knocked on the room of Sterling's door, but got no reply.

When George Sterling's body was found there was no note of explanation or farewell. It is said that for long he had carried a bottle of poison with him to take his life if he ever saw fit.

The Old Absinthe House

NEW ORLEANS.

THE Volstead padlock has clicked on the door of America's oldest saloon. The Old Absinthe House, on the corner of Bourbon and Bienville streets in New Orleans, is out of business after 120 years spent in slaking of thirsts. And in all that time, just five years less than a century and a quarter, the Old Absinthe House has been the property of the descendants of Francisco Juncadella, the emigre Spaniard from the Catalan who first bought the place and installed the bar that is known all over the world.

America's oldest saloon! The Old Absinthe House was more than that. That ancient building on the corner of Bourbon and Bienville, in the heart of the Vieux Carre—the old French quarter—was a page on which was written one of the most vivid and colorful chapters in America's history. Beneath that ancient roof, with its slate and sheets of lead; within those walls of thin and narrow brick, brought to New Orleans in the holds of sailing ships, laid and faced with stucco; behind those great doors of heavy planks, hinged and braced with iron hammered out by the hands of slave blacksmiths, scenes have been enacted that have no counterpart today save in the pages of histories or of the romantic historical novel.

Soldiers and buccaneers, gallants in silk stockings and buckled shoes, with lace at the throat and wrists, with rapier at sides, have drunk at that bar and reveled there. Statesmen and jurists, fat merchants and weather-beaten masters of ships have trodden that ancient floor. And in the "room in the back," as in the rooms upstairs, ladies powdered and patched, with silken furbelows and painted fans, have coquetted extensively. From that bar men have gone forth to face one another with crossed rapiers and leveled dueling pistols. In those rooms swarthy men have met—Latin-American juntas, whose plottings have changed the map to the south of the Rio Grande.

AMERICA'S oldest saloon! At its bar, at its tables, Andrew Jackson drank. The Marquis de Lafayette, Jean Lafitte, the buccaneer of Barataria, and Pierre Lafitte, his brother; Dominic You, that blond Spaniard, who was their chief gunner and who fought with them side by side under Andrew Jackson at the battle of New Orleans.

There the bulk of William Howard Taft leaned against the bar and watched absinthe turn from devilish green to milky white in the days before the land was dry. There have gleamed the great white teeth of Theodore Roosevelt as he replaced on the bar an empty glass that had held absinthe frappe, and said: "Bully!" There, hour after hour, stood or sat O. Henry, then just Sidney Porter, a New Orleans reporter at $12.50 a week. There Lafcadio Hearn was wont to gather with a few of his intimates and talk of life and literature as the glasses came full and went back empty. There Mark Twain met with his Mississippi River friends and reveled in the days when "Mark Twain" was just a leadsman's call on the Mississippi River fleet, and Samuel Clemens was that prince of the valley men called a river pilot—the man who, with high silk hat and dia-

The Old Absinthe House Closes

THE NEW ORLEANS, HE Volstead padlock has clicked on the door of America's oldest saloon. There Lafcadio Hearn was wont to gather with a few of his intimates and talk of life and literature as the glasses came full and went back empty. There Mark Twain met with his Mississippi River friends and reveled in the days when "Mark Twain" was just a leadsman's call on the Mississippi River fleet, and Samuel Clemens was that prince of the valley men called a river pilot —the man who, with high silk hat and diamond breastpin and personal darkey valet, steered such boats as the Natchez and the Robert E. Lee. At that bar Alexis, Grand Duke of Russia, drank deep as the Romanoffs drank in the heyday of their power. Through that doorway peeped Jenny Lind when the Swedish nightingale was on her way, from her quarters in the building built by the Baroness Pontabela, to sing at the old French Opera House. There went William Makepeace Thackeray for his aperitif when the immortal British novelist was visiting in New Orleans and was driven out to the banks of Lake Ponchartrain for a dinner of the bouillabaisse that, he wrote, excelled that of Marseilles, where the dish was born. There drank Aaron Burr, who come down the river on a barge rowed by slaves, his head full of dreams of a new empire of the West. There came General Pierre Gustave Toutant Beauregard of the Confederacy for his Creole appetizer.

HISTORY? The Old Absinthe House reeks of it. One hundred and twenty years of it. Ever since the day Francisco Juncadella, that wild-eyed, bearded Catalan, came into New Orleans with the tide of other wild-eyed emigres from Santo Domingo and the other islands of the West Indies in those troublous times.

Why he had come, few knew. None asked questions. You asked questions at your peril in those days. But he opened his cafe. And the gentry came.

Carefully they would come down Bourbon street in those days, avoiding the mud as much as possible. They would close their parasols, carried against the tropic sun, as they teetered beneath the stone archway. They teetered more as they emerged, many a time. On the hot days they would sit out in the courtyard on chairs at little tables placed on the green flagstones that, too, had come to New Orleans as ballast in the holds of sailing ships. Their chit-chat sounded over Malaga or Madeira. Over the graceful-lipped wine glasses they would bend, to raise their heads and tell how the Governor's secretary had been thrust with the Creole colichemarde—that long, slender, deadly, triangular rapier with the three grooved sides—through the stomach—nay, the abdomen—"Sous le fanal de L'Opera." They would tell how the arrogant Marquis de Casa Calvo had returned the bow of a slave, saying: "Would a Marquis be outdone in politeness by a Negro?"

But when the drizzle steamed in the fetid marshes around New Orleans in those days, when the gutters transformed the muddy streets into great stagnant pools, then the ladies and the gentlemen self-consciously mounted the beautiful steep stairway of dark wood from the ground-level flagged courtyard to to the rooms above, their hands holding to the marvelous curved banister. On the balcony, beneath shelter, they gossiped.

Later the main back room was to acquire a sinister reputation. But a century ago one sipped there just as one sipped at home. Yet even then it looked sinister. There was the same superficial finery to that room that there was to fat Louis XV. There was the same slant on life to that room that people had who did not bathe, but who dueled over the vintages of wine, the set of a cravat, the honor of the Mississippi River, even. A German nobleman, visiting New Orleans, disparaged it, extolled the Rhine, and was thrust through the shoulder for his temerity, at the duelling ground beneath the oaks of City Park, that then was the plantation of the poet Allard. There was dirt, then, you knew. But it was hidden. And decorations of tawdry gold and absinthe did for the back room what perfume and silks and laces did for ladies and gentlemen.

OF COURSE, a century ago, ladies and gentlemen sipped absinthe. Then no sleazy-eyed bootlegger slipped you a slug of straight gin or green whisky. Absinthe was poured into the little glasses and water, slowly dripping into it, turned the brown volatile Artemisia Absinthium into a milky-greenish fluid. If you drank enough of that absinthe, your eyes turned that same milky-green—opaque. But most gentlemen did not drink much absinthe. They munched brandied fruits. They lolled their tongues in Bordeaux, in vintages from the Provence, in passionate hot wines from Sicily. Francisco Juncadella had these wines, and many more. He had all the wines that the eighteenth century knew. And the eighteenth century enthroned Bacchus as did the robed decadence of Petronius.

On December 2, 1820, Francisco took inventory of his stock. It is a curious document, now in the files of the Civil District Court at New Orleans. Yellowed, crumbly, 10 closely written pages of manuscript enumerate the contents of the moldy storage rooms, now empty. It is written in French, of course; sworn to before one Mark Lafitte, notary public, cousin of Jean Lafitte, the buccaneer. The values are in piastres.

Curiously, wines were valued far above liquors, that inventory shows. Tafia, a cheap rum from the West Indies, cost what would now be equivalent to about 50 cents a gallon. It was pirate rum. Red rum. Rum such as Cap'n John Silver swore at and by; rum such as they knew on the Spanish main. Rum such as Robert Louis Stevenson knew when he sent the ghost call echoing across Treasure Island: "Darby McGraw! Darby McGraw! Bring aft the rum, Darby!"

Jean Lafitte, however, one of the greatest pirates of them all, drank no Tafia at the Old Absinthe House. He sipped his absinthe there. He sipped Chablis with the wife of Governor Claiborne.

There at the tables of the Old Absinthe House the gallants sat and drank and chuckled at that story. It was the buccaneer's custom, on his way from New Orleans down Barataria Bayou to his Red House on Grand Terre off the Louisiana coast, to stop and dine at the Berthoud plantation with Madame Berthoud, the socially gracious and impeccable matron who presided over a plantation of 1200 slaves. The evening after Governor Claiborne had put a price upon his head Jean Lafitte had taken his farewell drink at the Old Absinthe House, had started down Bayou Barataria in his barge, rowed by armed and swarthy buccaneers, and stopped at the Berthoud Plantation for dinner. Mrs. Claiborne, the Governor's wife, was a guest there!

MADAME BERTHOUD, loyal and level-headed, introduced the guest to the Governor's wife as Monsieur Clement. Mrs. Claiborne, throughout the dinner, was charmed by the courtly manners and the wit of the gallant, much-laced gentleman. She only learned that she had dined with a pirate when she met Jean Lafitte in New Orleans after the battle of New Orleans, in which the buccaneer fought beside Old Hickory and was feted as a patriot.

Nor did the Governor's wife know at the time that the courtly pirate had responded to the Governor's offer of a reward for his head by placing a price on the Governor's head. And this was something more than an impudent gesture. The Governor thought so, at any rate, for it is written that he actually "became alarmed for his head and for some days secreted himself in his house lest the great reward might be an inducement to parties to kindap or capture him." And when afterwards he did venture into the streets he always had some person with him as a protector or bodyguard.

But it apparently was this piece of brazenness that made the Governor determine to eliminate Lafitte, no matter what the cost. Accordingly, the Governor ordered out a company of militia to Barataria Island, with orders to burn Lafitte's establishment and bring the whole crew to New Orleans for hanging.

The commander of this company, it so happened, was an old friend of Lafitte's. They had drunk together in the Absinthe House. It also happened that Lafitte outmaneuvered the invaders, captured his old friend and turned him loose again, but not until he made sure that the militia had been rendered powerless to harm him.

At that time the United States was engaged in the threatening War of 1812, but nevertheless the Government decided to send an expedition against the pirate. He was almost as much of a nuisance as the British, it seemed. So a naval detachment of six gunboats was thrown against the forces of Lafitte, and both the pirate's naval and land forces were routed. In some way, which is not made clear in the historical accounts, Lafitte escaped the clutches of the law that time. But he was again brought to justice in the early part of 1813 and was brought to trial in New Orleans for piracy. He and his cohorts employed the best legal talent in town and were freed.

RETURNING to Grand Terre, Lafitte again set up his piratical establishment and fought a naval engagement with a British man-o'-war on his own account. He proved such a ferocious foe that the British sought to enlist him in their service against the United States—offering exemption from any possible punishment and $30,000 in gold.

Through these negotiations, which Lafitte delayed as long as possible, the pirate chieftain learned of the impending attack on New Orleans. As soon as he could safely do so he sent a message to Governor Claiborne, warning him of "an affair on which may depend the safety of this country" and offering to the State the services of "several citizens who, perhaps, in your eyes, have lost that sacred title."

The Governor accepted his offer. General Andrew Jackson sent the pirate a safe conduct to New Orleans and Lafitte appeared in the role of patriot before the Governor and the General.

"I have offered to defend for you that part of Louisiana I now hold," said Lafitte. "I tender not only my services, but those of all I command; the only reward I ask is that a stop be put to the proscriptions against me and my adherents by an act of oblivion for all that has been done hitherto."

Jackson agreed. Lafitte and his gunners came to New Orleans to await the attack. And when it came they performed with great gallantry and effectiveness.

The morning of January 4, 1814, was ushered in with a discharge of rockets, the roar of cannon and the cheers of the British marching to attack the rabble of Kentucky and Tennessee backwoodsmen that Old Hickory commanded.

After the battle had gotten into its full fury the British noted that the fire from the third embrasure held by the Americans was particularly deadly. With the idea of silencing it and capturing the batteries a column was pushed forward between the levee and the river. But before they could complete the maneuver Lafitte, with a picked group of followers, sprang over the parapet and fell upon the enemy with his pirate cutlass. The British fled and the batteries were saved.

Lafitte's return to respectability marked his open return to the Old Absinthe House. Thereafter he sat with the blades in the courtyard, tittered over some wag's quips and drank his absinthe. He walked with bustled and panniered dames to the old French Opera House—for everyone walked, with slaves in front bearing flambeaux. Carriages could not brave that sea of mud. You walked along the precarious top of a bank, thrown up out of the street mud, topped with boards. Old Orleanians call sidewalks "banquettes" to this day.

AFTER the war between the States the character of the old place changed. Demi-mondaines smiled bravely where once gallants had flirted with maid and matron whose eyes twinkled from behind the fan. These women of the latter day had carriages—closed carriages. Their diamonds were large, their white slippers a trifle soiled. They would slip through the front room quickly. For at the bar stood men with bitter lips and eyes dull as the eyes of a corpse. The absinthe fiend that Paris knew so well had come to New Orleans.

These men would be laughing by this time of night; laughing unpleasantly, like imbeciles. They would stand in one group, shunned even by the whisky drunkards. Towards morning they would dispense first with the sugar, next with the water, in their absinthe. And early the next day—an absinthe fiend does not sleep well—they would come in sick, gagging, with palsied hands and mad, demented eyeballs.

"What'll you have?" The bartender would ask it cheerily, knowing perfectly well what they would have. The first drink went down with difficulty. The unhappy wretches would run agonized fingers through clammy hair, and mutter, with thick, parched tongues: "Well, guess I'll have just one more." That was morning. And that night, when the women smiled bravely as they sidled through the bar toward the room in back, they would hear someone of that little group in the corner say: "Well, I guess I'll have just one more." . . . .

Finally, of course, they had one too many, and died. And a new generation came along. The twentieth century. Folks still went to the Old Absinthe House. But they went there as one goes to the Cabildo, to the house built for Napoleon. Interesting, to be sure. But modern plumbing and cleaner saloons seemed more desirable. Tourists glanced curiously at the hole worn inches deep in the marble vase of the bar fountain, where water had dropped, drop by drop, for a century, dripping absinthe. They listened suspiciously to a story that is true—that the Old Absinthe House has never once been sold. Descendants of bearded, wild-eyed old Francisco Juncadella to this day live in Spain's warm, sun-kissed valleys and still draw revenue from that property that has passed down within the same family, instact. Tourists listened to these things and drank an absinthe, remarked on how much like licorice it tasted, and walked out and had luncheon at Childs' with rather a devilish feeling.

THE truth was that, like an old man, the Old Absinthe House no longer belonged. It had personality, as a grandfather has personality. But, like a grandfather, its ideas were reminiscent. New Orleans had changed. Society drank bourbon and rye and Scotch and Irish in its clubs. No longer was it respectable to be seen in a barroom, except with a deprecatory gesture—"Of course, I've never seen the place before . . . ."

Then came prohibition. The last vestige of barroom dignity was stripped. Mustachioed bartenders became furtive-eyed bootleggers. Instead of proudly mixing drinks where customers could marvel at their technique, liquor servers winked and jerked their thumbs at dark corners. Imagine Andrew Jackson, Jean Lafitte, Mark Twain, Theodore Roosevelt, ashamed to take a drink!

And now, broken, aged, worthless as the dregs of rich wine, America's oldest saloon is closed. The Volstead padlock locks the door. Somehow, you imagine the shades are happy that the curtain has fallen where once they reveled. It is unpleasant to see a shrine defiled.

What the British Peerage Is Doing to Fight the Pauperizing Effects of Taxation That Sometimes Exceeds the Value of the Property Taxed—Duke of Rutland's Tapestries Sacrificed.

By PERCY M. SARL
Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

LONDON.

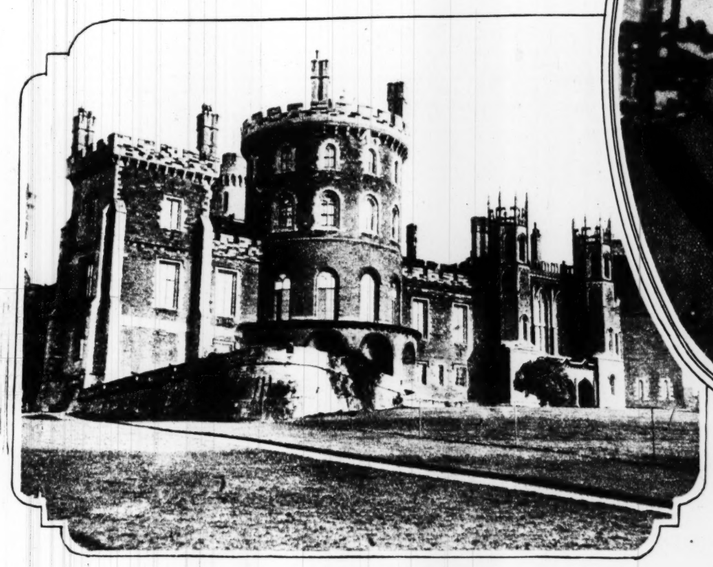
"PITY the Old Nobility!" is the cry which is being raised by the bearers of some of the proudest titles in Britain. And apart from those poor members of the aristocracy who lack the cash to keep up style commensurate with dignity, even the wealthiest peers are finding it difficult to make both ends meet in these days of intensive taxation, which, while affecting all classes, probably hits the owners of historic landed estates hardest of all.

Famous castles, parks, paintings, art treasures and other adornments of historic mansions are being sold almost daily to enable their erstwhile owners to meet the demands of the tax-collector, with the result that there are relatively few "big" estate owners left in the country. These, whether large or small, have had to turn themselves into companies in order to evade, or save, part of the taxes. No fewer than eight dukes (out of Britain's 26 wearers of the strawberry leaved coronets), four marquises, a dozen earls and many other noblemen are now, for all revenue purposes, "companies," some "limited," others "unlimited," but all "private companies" with a definite commercial aim in life and as such, may no longer be called the "idle rich."

Hard things have been said by radicals about "ducal tax-dodging," but logically there was nothing else the gentlemen could do if they wished to avoid being crushed beneath the millstone, and most economists admit that the killing of the golden-egg-laying ducal goose would be bad for the national treasury.

The Duke of Devonshire.

Lady Diana Manners.



Belvoir Castle, Rutland's seat.

The Duke of Rutland.

THIS state of affairs is the almost inevitable corollary of the present taxation system, instituted largely by David Lloyd George, when the ex-Premier was Chancellor of the Exchequer in 1910, and considerably extended by subsequent Chancellors to meet the world war expenditure and post-war liabilities. Lloyd George was frankly out to break up the great historical estates, and this he has succeeded in doing to a great extent, even if he has not secured that "more even distribution of wealth" which was his political ideal.

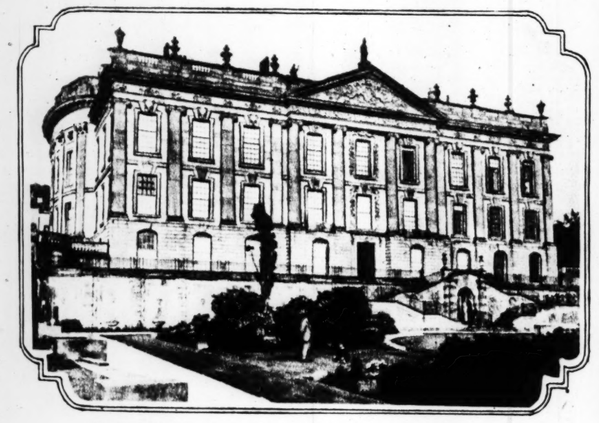
The wealthy raised howls of protest over the pre-war income tax rate of one shilling and eight pence in the pound (about 40 cents on $4.85), with super-tax on large incomes, and "confiscatory" death duties and inheritance taxes, but as a result of the war Britain's income tax "standard rate" stands today at four shillings and six pence, or $1.09, on every pound of income.

Roughly, the present scale of income tax is that all incomes of over $675 (figuring roughly $5 to the pound), in the case of a bachelor or spinster, or $1125 for married folk, pay $1.09 to the pound, or 22 1-2 per cent. There are certain exemptions, abatements and allowances, and variations under different schedules of income, earned and unearned, which reduce the percentage for sums up to $2500 annually, but the full $1.09 is levied on all amounts over $2500.

Then there is an additional "super-tax" on incomes of over $10,000, ranging from $1.05 on the first $2500 to $1.25 on excesses up to $125,000. Incomes over $125,000 pay $1.45 on all poundage in excess of this figure. So that for every pound of income over $125,000, or 25,000 pounds, the "unfortunate" recipient has to turn over to the tax collector exactly fifty-two-and-a-half per cent (plus, of course, the graded amounts to $1.09 downwards, on the rest of his income).

This sort of thing presses heavily enough on folk whose incomes come in the form of regular dividends, or commercial profits, but the position of the land-owning magnate is more serious for the capital value of his estate is "assessed" by officials, and the revenues therefrom do not always come up to expectations. In addition, all landowners and householders have to pay local "rates," or taxes on the officially assessed "rateable value" of the property, which, varying according to the poverty or affluence of the district in which it is situated, rarely falls below 75 cents or $1 to the pound, and in poverty-stricken industrial areas sometimes exceed the actual value of the property.

The heavy "death duties" and "inheritance taxes" also fall more severely on the landowner of the "old nobility" type, for ancient castles and agricultural land will not always fetch their "official" or historic value. The tax collectors insist on cash, and will not accept a proportionate section of a big estate, even if it were offered in payment. Commencing with a modest one per cent on fortunes of $500, two per cent on $2500, three per cent on $5000, four per cent on $25,000 and five per cent on $50,000, the death duties department claims at an ever-increasing rate up to 25 per cent on fortunes of $1,250,000, 28 per cent on $2,500,000 and 30 per cent on estates of $5,000,000. Fortunes (or estates) of over $10,000,000 pounds are mulcted forty per cent.



Chatsworth House, the Duke of Devonshire's ancestral home.

THE inheritance taxes further hit the "landed gentry" for in the case of an heir to a title and historic estate worth say $5,000,000, after forty per cent has been taken by the death duties office, the heir, who has probably inherited the greater portion of the estate, has to produce a further sum, anything up to twelve and one-half per cent of his total inheritance, in respect of this inheritance.

When Lloyd George set out to break up the big estates, he certainly hit on the right method, for as can clearly be seen it only needs two or three sudden deaths of successive heirs (as frequently happened during the great war) to reduce a $5,000,000 estate to nothing. For the difficulty is, and has been, that it does not always follow that a big estate can be profitably realized to meet tax demands. So the historic castles, furniture, art treasures, etc., are being sold, and most of the "stately homes of England" are rented some portion of each year to wealthy "plutocrats" to meet the tax collector's call.

The late Duke of Rutland, for example, left an "estate" valued officially at just under $5,000,000, but his heir, who inherited the greater portion, is selling his famous Gobelin tapestries, his "town house," and all its art treasures to pay for the privilege of being Duke and ruler of such a handsome estate. Actually, the Manners family (the Duke's surname) have been reckoned as "poor" for quite a while, and the famous beauty, Lady Diana, daughter of the late Duke and sister of the present peer, did not hesitate to set about earning her own living. The Rutland estate includes magnificent old Belvoir Castle, on which it would be difficult to put a sale figure, but it is far too big and too expensive a place for anybody to want to rent it. The Dukes of Rutland have not been able to live in it themselves (only occupying a tiny section when they had nowhere else to go) on account of the cost, and they have been unable to find suitable tenants. Still the estate and castle must be "kept up" because it is an heirloom and cannot be sold.

THE same applies to many of Britain's most famous mansions, and even the late Duke of Norfolk's estate, an exceedingly valuable one, which was returned for estate duty at nearly $35,000,000, was unable to produce the requisite forty per cent. Only the most careful management by the Duchess of Norfolk, and the fact that the new Duke was a boy who would not need a large personal income for some years (he is only 18 now, and he succeeded in 1917) enabled the claims of the tax collectors to be met—by annual instalments—without breaking up the estate. The Duchess rented her famous London residence (to several Americans in succession) and last year she tried to obtain a tenant for historic Arundel Castle, but could find nobody willing to pay $30,000 a year, plus the cost of upkeep, for the privilege of residing in the finest Norman castle in Britain.

SOME measure of relief has been obtained by wise peers turning themselves into companies, and this practice may prevent the total break up of the relatively few remaining big estates. Companies are not liable for death duties, or super-tax, or inheritance tax. The holders of shares therein are, of course, liable in respect of their "dividends" therefrom, but a company operating on business lines can charge up large sums for maintenance, development and management of an estate which a private owner cannot do. By turning an estate into a company, the principal owner can allot a bunch of shares to his heir and other relatives, equivalent perhaps, to the amount they would have received on his demise, but which, provided he does not die within three years, would be totally exempt from inheritance tax. The noble "company owner" would naturally see to it that his receipts from the concern were not sufficiently high to make him liable for "excessive" super-tax, and his heir would be in the same position as regards the bulk of the estate.

If not exactly a case of being able to eat one's cake and still retain it, this method is at least an ingenious substitute.

It was the late Earl of Warwick who was the first great nobleman to think of the scheme, and he "incorporated" himself as far back as 1889, when taxation was relatively "trivial." The Warwicks were not too wealthy for the ownership of Warwick Castle and other historic residences, and it was generally considered rather a "sensible" thing for the Earl to do. It was some time before any other peer followed his example, but then came Lord Howard de Walden, who had about $15,000,000 and a $25,000,000 bride, and others. Today, as stated earlier, eight dukes, four marquises and a dozen earls have emulated Warwick. The most recent are the Duke of Devonshire and the Earl of Rosebery.

Devonshire has incorporated the "Chatsworth Estates Company" for $11,520,000 and he is regarded as one of the wealthiest men in the country. Chatsworth House, Derbyshire is his most famous mansion, but he also owns Bolton Abbey, Yorkshire (where he entertains King George every year for the shooting), Compton House, Eastbourne (and, incidentally, best part of the town of Eastbourne) and a great castle in Ireland.

The Earl of Rosebery, ex-Premier and owner of no fewer than three Derby winners, married a Rothschild heiress, and from her estate alone their children were adequately provided for. His heir, Lord Dalmeny, incorporated himself some time back, in respect of his own personal possessions, but of course he is in with his father on the latest "flotation," Rosebery Estates, which deals with the bulk of the property he will inherit with the earldom in due course. Incidentally, the articles of association of Rosebery Estates, which is capitalized at the modest nominal figure of $1,812,500, especially prohibit any invitation to the public to subscribe for shares or debentures. Rosebery is a Scottish peer, and it is open to question whether this provision was designed to keep the public out of a presumed "good thing" or to prevent some future Earl playing ducks and drakes with the family estates by selling out to a confiding public.

Other Dukes who have taken the businesslike precaution to incorporate as companies are their Graces of Portland, Buccleugh, Marlborough, Sutherland, Grafton and Montrose. Marquises are "The Most Nobles" of Northampton, Linlithgow, Zetland and Granby (who is now Duke of Rutland, so is doubly incorporated). Earls include their Lordships of Moray Leven and Melville, Mexborough, Ellesmere (exceedingly wealthy), Ilchester, Lucan, Dudley, Strathmore and Kinghorne, the father of the Duchess of York, who may be grandfather of a King of England some day. Viscount Wimborne, Lords Leaconfield, Methuen, Saltoun and Hylton are among the most prominent of other peers incorporating.

THERE are, of course, rich peers and poor peers, and it does not follow that all those to incorporate are wealthy "tax dodgers." Some of the estates are run, for sentimental reasons, on bare working costs, and if it were not that their owners had other sources of income, could not be run at all. Naturally, all sources of income are put into the "company," and by careful administration the present holders hope to perpetuate the estates with the titles.

All Dukes are not as wealthy as their Graces of Devonshire and Portland, for example. He of Portland is the owner of Welbeck Abbey, one of the most luxurious and, probably, the most unsalable, mansions in the country. Welbeck has marvelous underground ballrooms. In fact, a regular underground palace, built to the orders of a former Duke who hated publicity and couldn't stand strangers driving up to his doors.

Portland is popular, as also are Devonshire and the Earls of Rosebery, Derby and other noblemen, whom one would never accuse of such a crime as "tax-dodging." Such men are actuated by the desire to preserve their ancestral halls for their successors, and under the present schedule of taxation they do not see how it can be done otherwise. They do not wish to burden their heirs with a white elephant like Belvoir Castle, for example, which keeps the really poor Duke of Rutland struggling to convince the tax collectors that he is not a millionaire, except in income-tax form figures.

It must be said, in conclusion, that the majority of these titled owners of historic estates regard their property as a debt of honor and do not rely upon the family estates in the country to provide them with an ever-increasing income. They consider that they have a duty to their tenants and dependents.

"Joaquin was waiting for us in the purple twilight, as we made to repass his hospitable door, and insisted on a saddle-cup. We had it, and more. He assured us there wasn't a headache in a gallon of the stuff, and accepting his statement as from the lips of a prophet, we bade fair to prove it, whether or no. Indeed, we rose to great heights, all four of us, that evening, and I would that I could recall even one thing we said. But it grew darker and darker outside, and at last we exchanged our farewells and departed, chanting hymns of victory. It was a wild ride homeward. I gave the venerable beast the rein, and he fairly leapt, with all the fervor of manger-longing, down the long slopes. It was a wonder that we came to no ill end; as it was, when we stopped at last to leave our Christmas tree at London's home, we found we had lost it en route!"

THAT is the side Sterling usually put up in public. A boy's spirit encased in this man who had got into his fifties. Sterling, rolling about in the grass, convulsed with joy over some boyish prank or other. A story is told of what Sterling did on that sad night that ended June of 1919, the night Mr. Volstead's sad joke sneaked down upon us. Sterling, on that night, flew like a disciple of Bacchus from one bright light to another in that part of San Francisco where gayety was brightest with reporters following in his wake to tell the tale in the next day's papers of what this poet had been about. And this same Sterling used to strip among the gray rocks of the Carmel coast. Striking through the water, his lithe body a very part of it. # PRIME MINISTER to KING COTTON

"Hester Says"—And the World Listens to the Grand Old Man of the New Orleans Exchange Whose Word Is Law Wherever Cotton Is Bought and Sold

By MEIGS O. FROST

Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

A NEW ORLEANS AN 80-year-old man comes to his desk every morning at 10 o'clock in New Orleans to start his day's work. The result of that work is felt all over the world, wherever a bale of cotton is raised or bought or sold. That man is probably better known internationally than any other man in Dixie. He is the Grand Old Man of the world of cotton. He is Colonel Henry G. Hester, these past 56 years secretary and superintendent of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange. He is the man who founded and sends all over the world the weekly "Hester's Report," without which no man in the cotton business would think of doing business, any more than the captain of a ship would think of sailing from port without chart and compass and sextant. He has been with the New Orleans Cotton Exchange since its birth; he will be with it until his death. And now, for the first time in his long career, he has submitted to being interviewed.

Two words mean all the world in the cotton market.

"Hester says"——

Every Friday, on every week of the year, the wires and cables carry all over the world Colonel Hester's report of the cotton brought into sight, or the cotton classified as "mill takings." And all over the world men ask: "What does Hester say?" that day.

"What does Hester say?" You hear the question asked in New Orleans, New York, Houston, Galveston, Dallas, Memphis, St. Louis, Mobile, Atlanta—in every cotton market in America. You hear it asked in Liverpool.

"Was sagt Herr Hester?" the German cotton men ask in Bremen.

"Qu'est-ce que dit Monsieur Hester?" the French cotton men ask in Marseilles.

"Que dicen el Senor Hester?" query the men who know cotton in Madrid and Barcelona.

And where the Nile flows through the Egyptian sands, where Alexandria and Cairo rise with their busy exchanges, men ask what Hester says; ask it in Arabic and all the polyglot tongues of the Levant. They ask it in the varied tongues of Asia at Bombay and Calcutta. They ask it in the strange language of the Mikado at Tokio and Yokohama.

"What does Hester say?"

FOR what Hester says is official. He is the only individual whose unchecked report on cotton the United States Government accepts as official. Time after time Uncle Sam has sent his emissaries down to New Orleans asking the help of that one-time newspaper reporter whose word is awaited by cotton men everywhere, all the time.

A one-time newspaper reporter, he was 24 when the cotton men of New Orleans, founding the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, took him from his newspaper run. All the trained reporter's passion for accuracy is his.

"All my life I have gone on the belief that two plus two equals four," he says. "I have seen hundreds who spent their lives trying to make two plus two equal three and three-quarters or four and one-quarter. But when they seem to do that, I know something is wrong."

It is that simple creed that two plus two equals four that has made "Hester says" the gospel of cotton all over the world. That, plus the sort of sterling personal code of honor that New Orleans knew in the old days when Colonel Hester was young; the code under which New Orleans merchants forced into bankruptcy, felt that nothing but suicide could wipe away the stain.

IN 56 years, during which Colonel Hester has been the unquestioned authority on cotton, he could have played the market and made millions. But in those 56 years he has never owned a bale of cotton nor has he ever put a cent into the market.

His opportunities? Let one example suffice:

Remember those days of 1915, soon after the World War broke, when cotton was bankrupt? When the "Buy-a-bale" movement swept the South and king cotton was seated on a street corner with his tin cup held out for the pennies of charity? When cotton went down to 6 cents a pound?

It was a hot midday of that summer when Colonel Hester sat at his desk—the desk that is known to cotton men all over the world—checking figures. The reports of various experts had shown that the cotton consumption that year could be only 12,000,000 bales. Colonel Hester made a total of the column of figures in front of him. They showed a cotton consumption of 14,000,000 bales. He checked his figures. Two plus two equals four.

"I went down on the floor of the Cotton Exchange," chuckles Colonel Hester. "It was a mighty hot day. Most of the members were out at lunch or having a drink at the Boston Club. I mounted the rostrum and announced the year's consumption as 14,000,000 bales. Nobody paid much attention. I walked down on the floor, gave the figures to the boy to put on the board, and watched him chalk them up. Still nobody showed any interest. As I walked out I stopped beside a member of the exchange. 'That's the most important announcement I ever made in my life,' I told him. He looked at the figures on the board. 'Why?' he asked. I said: 'Well, just before I came down here I wired that announcement to the New York Cotton Exchange. You just watch what comes out of New York by wire in the next hour, and you'll see why.'"

THEY saw why. Any cotton man alive remembers that day when cotton climbed up out of the mud, the days after, when it went to 15 cents a pound, went higher, sagged now and then, but climbed again after every sag, and at last perched high up in the cotton man's dream of heaven, past 40 cents a pound.

"Nobody was there to check your figures that started that climb?" I asked Colonel Hester. Nobody was, it seemed.

"What would you have made if you had telephoned a broker or had a friend buy a thousand bales of cotton for you before you sent that wire to New York or posted those figures in New Orleans?"

"Anywhere from $200,000 to $1,000,000, depending on where I got off," smiled Colonel Hester. "But I didn't. I never owned a bale of cotton in my life. I never speculated a copper cent in the market. And if any man on my office staff ever did, I'd fire him. If my board of directors didn't back me up in firing him, I'd put on my hat and quit the job myself.

"All over the world cotton men know that no man connected with the reports that go out of this office has one cent's interest in those reports outside the salary he draws for accuracy. Yes, I suppose we might have been millionaires, up here, with our sources of accurate information and our knowledge of the market. And we aren't millionaires. But we have our honor."

Yes, Colonel Hester has his honor.

Colonel Henry G. Hester.

AND those who believe that a prophet's honor is all outside his own country don't know Henry G. Hester. It is true that when such a distinguished guest of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange as the Baron Mitsui of Japan came to New Orleans, the first New Orleans man for whom he inquired was Colonel Hester, with a request for "the privilege of being presented." It is true that princes of finance from England and the continent usually ask first to meet Colonel Hester when they reach New Orleans. It is true that rich cotton men from Egypt and India, visiting the United States, have made special trips to New Orleans to shake hands with Colonel Hester and talk cotton with him. But it is also true that in New Orleans itself the Grand Old Man of cotton is esteemed as one of the world's great.

What sort of man is this? Every working day in the year you can see him coming down to the New Orleans Cotton Exchange. Short, stocky, with silver-white hair, ruddy face, keen blue eyes behind rimless glasses, resonant voice. Eighty years old, he is groomed and tailored like a man of 30. His thoughts are seldom of the past; almost always they are in the present and the future. He would rather talk about airplanes and radio than about the stage-coach and mounted couriers. Let him tell his own story, just as this wizard of cotton facts, stopping for a moment in the midst of the work that has brought him world-wide fame, told it to the first interviewer to whom he has ever given anything but a market interview in all his 80 years.

"I suppose my life has been that of a natural man," said Colonel Hester. "It has been governed by the Golden Rule: Do unto others as you would have them do by you. Speak well of others, otherwise remain silent concerning your neighbor.

"My aim has always been to succeed in whatever I undertook, and never to undertake anything without a determination to see it through, turning neither to the right nor to the left until the end. When I accepted the superintendency and, a few months later, the secretaryship of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, embracing the two offices which I have held for 56 years, scope was afforded for my life's ambition to make the South the authority for facts concerning the growth and distribution of its great staple, cotton.

"Before my time, we had to look elsewhere for much of our cotton information. We produced the cotton, a small part of which was then consumed in the South, and when it was carried away, all we knew concerning it came from north of the Mason and Dixon line or from abroad. We sat here in the South, patiently waiting for them to tell us what they knew.

"While my chief ambition for more than half a century has been wrapped in cotton and the success of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, which continues to be my chief aim in life, many other matters have claimed my attention.

"Perhaps it may be considered singular, but it has always been my invariable rule never to carry business outside my office. I never think of exchange or cotton at home or elsewhere away from business surroundings. But during business hours I give it my exclusive thought and attention. The Masonic division of time is, to my thinking, ideal; so many hours for duty, so many hours for friendship and other pleasures of life, so many hours for rest. To sum up all my scheme of life, a sentence is enough: Be honest to yourself and to those you love.

"I HAVE had a pleasant life, interspersed with grief and sorrow for the loss of loved ones. But who that has reached the age of four-score years has not suffered from like causes? The years have gone by steadily, but so gradually that I have scarcely thought of age, like my dear, gentle, little mother, who slept her last sleep within a few months of 95, and who never complained of age.

"My sons have passed on after reaching manhood, and I have but one child left, a daughter. But grandchildren and great-grandsons—three sturdy little fellows—have enlarged the scope of my affections. Are not these worth living for?

"I have never ceased to have an interest in public matters. I have served upon many public boards. Among others, years ago, as member and chairman of the Louisiana State Board of Arbitration and as member of the New Orleans Sewerage and Water Boards at the inception of the system; on the staffs of three Governors of Louisiana, with the rank of Colonel, for about 15 years.

"I AM a Mason and an Elk and a member of various clubs. But while these are all valuable and interesting and pleasurable, my chief club, in which is centered my pride and joy, is my home. And my little wife is the president. How, in all conscience, can a man grow old mentally with so much to be thankful for, especially if he has the confidence and affections of his neighbors at home and abroad? Is not the age of the body secondary? And should it count for so much in the scheme of life which is God-given?"

"Colonel Hester," I said, "you are hale and hearty at 80. How do you stay so at an age when so many are wrecks? I notice you clamp on that cigar as though you enjoyed it. They tell me you have emptied a glass now and then. What are your ideas on eating, drinking, sleeping, tobacco?"

Colonel Hester smiled broadly.

"When a man commences to think he is old, be he 50, 60, 70, or over, he is old," the veteran said, "and inevitably his thoughts are reflected by his body. This is a truism.

"The Good Master said: 'Take no thought for your life what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not life more than meat and the body than raiment?'

"I have always had what I desired and enjoyed, and have always believed that ill effects from eating (of course, not in excess) have been mainly due to fear. A normal man should be safe, whatever nourishment he may desire. It has often been said that the older a man is bodily, the fewer hours he sleeps. That may be so. But I enjoy eight hours' sleep out of the 24 as much today, at 80, as I did at the age of 16.

"As to habits, tobacco and so forth, St. Paul says: 'Know ye not that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are whom ye obey.' There is nothing more pitiful than a man who has formed a tobacco habit or a liquor habit or any other habit that he cannot control. With him it should be a matter of 'touch not, taste not, handle not.' Otherwise, he is handicapped in the struggle for success, and sooner or later is doomed to be numbered amongst the vast army of 'has-beens.'"

"COLONEL," I asked him, "you've seen the Southern girls when they wore crinolines and chignons. Now, here at the corner of Gravier and Carondelet streets, in the heart of New Orleans' business district, you're surrounded by an army of Southern girls, working for their living, wearing short skirts and rolled stockings and about one-tenth of one per cent of the clothes their grandmothers wore. To say nothing of rouge and lipsticks and cigarettes and the Charleston. What do you think of the change?"

Colonel Hester's blue eyes twinkled with mirth.

"The difference in the Southern girls of today and those of a half a century ago," he said, "is in many respects as great as the change in the times. They think and act from a broader standpoint than their grandmothers had. And yet they are just as sweet and lovable as they always were. Their adoption of short skirts and work-a-day habits was at first a shock to the old-timers. But gradually they came to be looked upon as sensible and practical. The girls of today have come into the business marts to stay. They make as good wives and mothers when they marry as their grandmothers ever did. And they know more.

"And so it is with the business men of today, compared with those of 50 years gone by. The difference is as great as that between daylight and darkness. The slow, methodical ways of the past have given way to push and activity. Business no longer seeks given channels from force of habit. It must be fought for and retained by keen competition. The radio, improvements in telegraphy and steam, the telephone and control of electricity in many other ways have almost annihilated time and space.

"The man in New Orleans today talks to his correspondent in Liverpool, and is answered in from three to five minutes.

"The old-time merchant thought in thousands; the merchant of today thinks and acts in millions. It would take many columns of printed matter to tell the differences between the business men I know today and the business men I knew in 1870, when I first took this job, a youth of 24. Lessons of the past have been thrown into the scrap-pile. Were it possible for the old-time merchant to return to modern life, he would have to commence at the bottom to adapt himself to the methods of today. And yet, are we any happier than our ancestors? Do we enjoy life more? Quien sabe? We live, eat, sleep much the same, but life is on a higher plane. We are, or should be, nearer to God and correspondingly grateful for His good gifts."

"What would be your message to the young men starting business these days, Colonel Hester?" I asked him.

"No matter what your station in life, always remember there is abundant room higher up," he said. "Bend your energies to whatever may be the work at hand. Keep in mind that pay-day, while most desirable and convenient, is not the most important day of the month or week. Don't worry about your future. It will take care of itself. For the man who makes himself fit there is always room higher up."

A LIFETIME in business. Fifty-six years on the job. That job today pays Colonel Hester such a salary that he never need worry. But he started that job, with the birth of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, on a salary of exactly nothing a year.

It was 1871. Henry Hester was a New Orleans newspaper reporter, specializing on the financial and market run. As the yellowed old minutes that record the birth of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange in their copper-plate handwriting show, 18 New Orleans cotton men, buyers, factors and brokers, met "at the office of the Life Association of America, 46 Carondelet street on the 17th of January, 1871, at six and one-half o'clock p. m."

"It was resolved that a cotton exchange should be established in our city, to be called the New Orleans Cotton Exchange," the minutes record.

E. H. Summers, president of the old Union Bank, was elected first president of the Exchange. There were some 30 applications for the job of superintendent, a job later including the secretaryship. Henry G. Hester was not an applicant. As a reporter he was on a salary of $40 a week—enormous then—and made some $25 a week additional on his telegraphic correspondence. What did he want with a job? He was sitting on top of the world.

Next morning, after that historic meeting, President Summers offered him the job.

The salary was $2500 a year, out of which he must pay an assistant. Hester laughed and turned it down. President Summers expostulated.

"Mr. Hester, sir," Summers said, "you know several exchanges have been formed here and all have gone out of business. We have put up a fund of $10,000 to start this one. Twenty-five hundred is all that we can afford to pay. We stand to lose that $10,000 if this is not a success."

The young reporter smiled genially at the bank president.

"I have my own ideas about how that job should be run," he said. "I would only take it if I had a free hand to work out those ideas. What do you people want me to do?"

"Frankly, we don't know, Mr. Hester," said President Summers. "That is exactly why we want you to come with us, so we can find out what is to be done."

"If you can gamble your $10,000 I can gamble my time," chuckled the young reporter. "Forget about the salary. I'm going to see what I can do with this job."

What he "did with that job" the whole cotton world has known these past 56 years.

150 Years Ago Tonight—Washington's Darkest Hour

All Seemed Lost When the Bedraggled Continental Army Fled From Fort Lee—But Before the Week Was Out He Had Recovered New Jersey and Changed the Trend of the War.

"Washington Crossing the Delaware" from the celebrated painting by Emanuel Leutze.

An episode of the New Jersey campaign.

Washington leading his forces personally at the Battle of Princeton.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY years ago today, 2000 ragged soldiers of Washington's Continental Army pulled down their colors and beat a hasty retreat from Fort Lee, on the west bank of the Hudson River. To the victorious British Army led by General Howe they abandoned 140 cannon, large and much-needed stores of ammunition and even their tattered blankets. They barely escaped with their lives. It was, perhaps, the darkest hour of the American Revolution which struck on that December 19, 1776.

The loss of the fort itself was not of such great consequence, but coupled with the loss, three days earlier, of Fort Washington, on the opposite bank, and with the routing of the bedraggled army, it constituted a savage blow to waning American hopes and ushered in a gloom the like of which this nation has never suffered before nor since. It is with this week of gloom, brightened in the end by Washington's master strokes of strategy, which turned crushing defeat into brilliant victory, that this story is concerned. It is written by a Canadian, Professor George McKinnon Wrong, head of the department of modern history of the University of Toronto, and is taken from his book, "Washington and His Comrades in Arms," recently published by the Yale University Press.

Professor Wrong, who is a member of the American Historical Society, has conducted long and exhaustive researches into the events of Colonial days, and especially into the military exploits of George Washington. In this extract he tells how, after a succession of such disheartening reverses as the battle of Long Island, the surrender of New York, the surrender of Fort Washington, the evacuation of Fort Lee and the flight across New Jersey, the revolutionary hero managed to save the day by his crossing of the Delaware on Christmas night—150 years ago this week.

AFTER the fall of New York there followed a complex campaign. The resourceful Washington was now, during his first days of active warfare, pitting himself against one of the most experienced of British leaders—General Howe.

Fleet and army were acting together. The aim of Howe was to get control of the Hudson and to meet half way the advance from Canada, by way of Lake Champlain, which Carleton was leading.

On October 12, when autumn winds were already making the nights cold, Howe moved. He did not attack Washington, who lay in strength at the Harlem. That would have been to play Washington's game. Instead, he put the part of his army still on Long Island in ships which then sailed through the dangerous currents of Hell Gate and landed at Throg's Neck, a peninsula on the sound, across from Long Island.

Washington parried this movement by so guarding the narrow neck of the peninsula leading to the mainland that the cautious Howe shrank from a frontal attack across a marsh. After a delay of six days, he again embarked his army, landed a few miles above Throg's Neck, in the hope of cutting off Washington from retreat northward, only to find Washington still north of him at White Plains. A sharp skirmish followed, in which Howe lost 200 men and Washington only 140. Washington, masterly in retreat, then withdrew still farther north, among hills difficult of attack.

Howe had a plan which made a direct attack on Washington unnecessary. He turned southward and occupied the east shore of the Hudson River. On November 16 took place the worst disaster which had yet befallen American arms. Fort Washington, lying just south of the Harlem, was the only point still held on Manhattan Island by the Americans.

IN MODERN war it has become clear that fortresses supposedly strong may be only traps for their defenders. Fort Washington stood on the east bank of the Hudson, opposite Fort Lee, on the west bank. These forts could not fulfill the purpose for which they were intended, of stopping British ships. Washington saw that the two forts should be abandoned. But the civilians in Congress, who, it must be remembered, named the Generals and had final authority in directing the war, were reluctant to accept the loss involved in abandoning the forts and gave orders that every effort should be made to hold them.

Greene, on the whole Washington's best General, was in command of the two positions and was left to use his own judgment. On November 15, by a sudden and rapid march across the island, Howe appeared before Fort Washington and summoned it to surrender on pain of the rigors of war, which meant putting the garrison to the sword should he have to take the place by storm.

The answer was defiance; and on the next day Howe attacked in overwhelming force. There was severe fighting. The casualties of the British were nearly 500, but they took the huge fort, with its 3000 defenders and a great quantity of munitions of war. Howe's threat was not carried out. There was no massacre.

Across the river at Fort Lee the helpless Washington watched this great disaster. He had need still to look out, for Fort Lee was itself doomed. On the nineteenth Lord Cornwallis, with 5000 men, crossed the river five miles above Fort Lee. General Greene barely escaped with the 2000 men in the fort, leaving behind 140 cannon, stores, tools, and even the men's blankets. On the twentieth the British flag was floating over Fort Lee and Washington's whole force was in rapid flight across New Jersey, hardly pausing until it had been ferried over the Delaware River into Pennsylvania.

Treachery, now linked to military disaster, made Washington's position terrible. Charles Lee, Horatio Gates and Richard Montgomery were three important officers of the regular British army who fought on the American side. Montgomery had been killed at Quebec; the defects of Gates were not yet conspicuous; and Lee was, next to Washington, the most trusted American General.

The names Washington and Lee of the twin forts on opposite sides of the Hudson show how the two Generals stood in the public mind. While disaster was overtaking Washington, Lee had 7000 men at North Castle, on the east bank of the Hudson, a few miles above Fort Washington, blocking Howe's advance farther up the river.

ON THE day after the fall of Fort Washington, Lee received positive orders to cross the Hudson at once. Three days later Fort Lee fell, and Washington repeated the order. Lee did not budge. He was safe where he was and could cross the river and get away into New Jersey when he liked. He seems deliberately to have left Washington to face complete disaster and thus prove his incompetence; then, as the undefeated General, he could take the chief command.

There is no evidence that he had intrigued with Howe, but he thought that he could be the peacemaker between Great Britain and America, with untold possibilities of ambition in that role. He wrote of Washington at this time, to his friend Gates as weak and "most damnably deficient." Nemesis, however, overtook him. In the end he had to retreat across the Hudson to Northern New Jersey. Here many of the people were Tories. Lee fell into a trap, was captured in bed at a tavern by a hard-riding party of British cavalry, and carried off a prisoner, obliged to bestride a horse in nightgown and slippers. Not always does fate appear so just in her strokes.

In December, though the position of Washington was very bad, all was not lost. The chief aim of Howe was to secure the line of the Hudson, and this he had not achieved. At Stony Point, which lies up the Hudson about 50 miles from New York, the river narrows and passes through what is almost a mountain gorge, easily defended. Here Washington had erected fortifications which made it at least difficult for a British force to pass up the river. Moreover, in the highlands of Northern New Jersey, with headquarters at Morristown, General Sullivan, recently exchanged, and General Gates, now had Lee's army and also the remnants of the force driven from Canada. But in retreating across New Jersey, Washington had been forsaken by thousands of men, beguiled in part by the Tory population, discouraged by defeat, and in many cases with the right to go home, since their term of service had expired. All that remained of Washington's army after the forces of Sullivan and Gates joined him across the Delaware in Pennsylvania, was about 4000 men.

Howe was determined to have Philadelphia as well as New York and could place some reliance on Tory help in Pennsylvania. He had pursued Washington to the Delaware and would have pushed on across that river had not his alert foe taken care that all the boats should be on the wrong shore. As it was, Howe occupied the left bank of the Delaware, with his chief post at Trenton.

IF HE made sure of New Jersey he could go on to Philadelphia when the river was frozen over, or, indeed, when he liked. Even the Congress had fled to Baltimore. There were British successes in other quarters. Early in December Lord Howe took the fleet to Newport. Soon he controlled the whole of Rhode Island and checked the American privateers who had made it their base. The British issued proclamations offering protection to all who should within 60 days return to their British allegiance, and many people of high standing in New York and New Jersey accepted the offer. Howe wrote home to England the glad news of victory. Philadelphia would probably fall before spring, and it looked as if the war was really over.

In this darkest hour Washington struck a blow which changed the whole situation. We associate with him the thought of calm deliberation. Now, however, was he to show his strongest quality as a General to be audacity. At the battle of the Marne, in 1914, the French General, Foch, sent the dispatch: "My center is giving way; my right is retreating; the situation is excellent; I am attacking."

WASHINGTON'S position seemed as nearly hopeless, and he, too, had need of some striking action. A campaign marked by his own blundering and by the treachery of a trusted General had ended in seeming ruin. Pennsylvania at his back and New Jersey before him across the Delaware were less than half loyal to the American cause and probably willing to accept peace on almost any terms. Never was a General in a position where greater risks must be taken for salvation. As Washington pondered what was going on among the British across the Delaware, a bold plan outlined itself in his mind. Howe, he knew, had gone to New York to celebrate a triumphant Christmas. His absence from the front was certain to involve slackness. It was Germans who held the line of the Delaware, some 1300 of them, under Colonel Rahl, at Trenton; 2000 under Von Donop, farther down the river, at Bordentown; and with Germans, perhaps more than any other people, Christmas is a season of elaborate festivity. On this, their first Christmas away from home, many of the Germans would be likely to be off their guard, either through homesickness or dissipation. They cared nothing for either side. There had been much plundering in New Jersey, and discipline was relaxed.

Howe had been guilty of the folly of making strong the posts farthest from the enemy and weak those nearest to him. He had, indeed, ordered Rahl to throw up redoubts for the defense of Trenton, but this, as Washington well knew, had not been done, for Rahl despised his enemy and spoke of the American army as already lost. Washington's bold plan was to recross the Delaware and attack Trenton. There were to be three crossings. One was to be against Von Donop at Bordentown, below Trenton, the second at Trenton itself. These two attacks were designed to prevent aid to Trenton. The third force, with which Washington himself went, was to cross the river some nine miles above the town.

CHRISTMAS DAY, 1776, was dismally cold. There was a driving storm of sleet and the broad, swollen stream of the Delaware, dotted with dark masses of floating ice, offered a chill prospect.

To take an army with its guns across that threatening flood was indeed perilous. Gates and other Generals declared that the scheme was too difficult to be carried out. Only one of the three forces crossed the river. Washington, with iron will, was not to be turned from his purpose. He had skilled boatmen from New England. The crossing took no less than 10 hours, and a great portion of it was done in wintry darkness. When the army landed on the New Jersey shore it had a march of nine miles in sleet and rain in order to reach Trenton by daybreak. It is said that some of the men marched barefoot, leaving tracks of blood in the snow. The arms of some were lost and those of others were wet and useless, but Washington told them that they must depend the more on the bayonet. He attacked Trenton in broad daylight. There was a sharp fight. Rahl, the commander, and some 70 men, were killed and a thousand men surrendered.

Even now, Washington's position was dangerous. Von Donop, with 2000 men, lay only a few miles down the river. Had he marched at once on Trenton, as he should have done, the wornout little force of Washington might have met with disaster. What Von Donop did, when the alarm reached him, was to retreat as fast as he could to Princeton, a dozen miles to the rear, towards New York, leaving behind his sick and all his heavy equipment. Meanwhile, Washington, knowing his danger, had turned back across the Delaware, with a prisoner for every two of his men. When, however, he saw what Von Donop had done, he returned on the twenty-ninth to Trenton, sent out scouting parties, and roused the country so that in every bit of forest along the road to Princeton there were men, dead shots, to make difficult a British advance to retake Trenton.

The reverse had brought consternation at New York. Lord Cornwallis was about to embark for England, the bearer of news of overwhelming victory. Now, instead, he was sent to drive Washington back. It was no easy task for Cornwallis to reach Trenton, for Washington's scouting parties and a force of 600 men under Greene were on the road to harass him. On the evening of January 2, however, he reoccupied Trenton. This time Washington had not recrossed the Delaware but had retreated southward and was now intrenched on the southern bank of the little river, Assanpink, which flows into the Delaware. Reinforcements were following Cornwallis. That night he sharply cannonaded Washington's position and was as sharply answered. He intended to attack in force in the morning.

Then followed a maneuver which, years after, Cornwallis, a generous foe, told Washington was one of the most surprising and brilliant in the history of war. Instead of taking the obvious course of again retreating across the Delaware, Washington decided to advance, to get in behind Cornwallis, to try to cut his communications, to threaten the British base of supply and then, if a superior force came up, to retreat into the highlands of New Jersey. There he could keep an unbroken line as far east as the Hudson, menace the British in New Jersey and probably force them to withdraw to the safety of New York.

ALL through the night of January 2, 1777, Washington's camp fires burned brightly and the British outposts could hear the sound of voices and of the spade and pickaxe busy in throwing up intrenchments. The fires died down towards morning and the British awoke to find the enemy camp deserted. Washington had carried his whole army by a roundabout route to the Princeton road and now stood between Cornwallis and his base. There was some sharp fighting that day near Princeton. Washington had to defeat and get past the reinforcements coming to Cornwallis. He reached Princeton and then slipped away northward and made his headquarters at Morristown. He had achieved his purpose. The British, with Washington intrenched on their flank, were not safe in New Jersey. The only thing to do was to withdraw to New York. By his brilliant advance Washington recovered the whole of New Jersey with the exception of some minor positions near the sea. He had changed the face of the war.

ALWAYS believe your author. Reading, if you intend to read, ought to be a matter of selection; and then implicit faith in the writer you have selected. If Livy tells you Hannibal conquered the Alps by pouring vinegar on them, there is only one way to enjoy Livy as a historian—believe him. Especially at Christmas time must ye have faith. At Christmas time the whole world should be childlike—which is: Broad, ample, tolerant. If I tell you this story of John Jones, you must believe it is so. Not because it is so as I tell it; but because, in one million other inscrutable ways that I know not of, it is so.

The coming of winter in New York is a curious thing. It buffets, misleads, antagonizes, bewilders the little city folk. They are turned aside from their natural courses by it. Later they accustom themselves. But at first, when the blind force of winter in revolt assails them from every quarter, the city folk stand baffled and impotent, while a spirit of despondency whimpers through them.

This Christmas Eve, the first storm of the winter was three days old. John Jones, struggling along through the snowfall of the early dusk, was especially discontented. Anyone, touched with philosophy, will understand what I mean when I say John's discontent arose from the fact that he wanted nothing. It is written on old stones and the skins of ancient sheep that man, to drive himself on in the pursuit of his spirit, must forever want something.

Now, John was a thirty-five-year-old bachelor. He came of an old Connecticut family, which, depending on the family, may mean that he made money carefully and made plenty of it. This, in truth, he did. He was tall, muscled lithely like an Indian, vigorous, practical. His long, boldly molded, adequate head was fronted by a handsome, deeply graven face, a trifle mature.

"Sh-sh-shoestrings, sir?"

At the corner of Fortieth street and Fifth avenue she stood, trembling, against a doorway. He looked vaguely down at her, and in the frosty light of the arc lamp, dimmed by the swirling snow, saw two great, mournful eyes in a pinched white face. The eyes stopped him.

"Sh-sh-shoestrings," her lips chattered.

HE NOTICED that she was a gawky, ill-clad girl, about 13 years old. The wind whipped his thick overcoat around his legs. For the life of him he could not think of anything to say. He was sorry he had stopped.

"I—I don't know. I don't suppose so," he finally stuttered.

She made a little pathetic gesture, throwing her hands outward. "I s'pose not. Nobody wants shoestrings. Not on a night like this."

There was a pause. To another passer-by she raised her quavering voice.

"Shoestrings, sir?" and the lump passed into the storm.

John Jones made no effort to move on. For some inscrutable reason he stood stockstill before her, trying to think what he should do. He was absolutely alone in the world; he couldn't take her home, as they do in Christmas stories, and put her in a nice, clean, warm bed, and all that. He

John Jones made no effort to move on. For some inscrutable reason he stood stockstill before her, trying to think what he should do. He was absolutely alone in the world; he couldn't take her home, as they do in Christmas stories, and put her in a nice, clean, warm bed, and all that. He lived at a club. He supposed he ought to do something for her. You always did in cases like this where you got yourself interested. At least he knew the traditional beginning.

"What is your name, little girl?"

"Ah, yes. And where are your parents?"

She shook her head, preferring, with the innate delicacy of the poor, to give the information mutely. Her parents were dead.

"But where do you stay?"

"To Mrs. Lawson's, when I stay," she answered meaningly.

He stamped his feet and brushed the snow from his collar with a silk handkerchief. As the handkerchief was making its third trip down his left-hand lapel, it was suddenly arrested while John Jones submitted to an idea.

"Do you mind coming along and eating dinner with me, Catharina?"

The great eyes looked up at him dumbly. "I don't mind. I'm hungry," said the throaty voice. "Where do you eat?"

"At the Supreme—a hotel."

She drew back. "My clothes," said the eternal.

"Nonsense. People go there dressed no better than you are," he said, taking her arm and carrying her along with him.

"No, they don't," she protested.

"Yes, they do."

"No, they don't."

"Yes, they do."

AND so they came to the hotel and the quiet little table in a far corner. It was early and the Christmas roisterers of New York, loud and full of champagne, had not as yet gathered in the Broadway resorts.

She sat demurely across the table from him, her entire front swathed in a huge white napkin, her knuckles bent and hidden under her legs, her rich, red lips slightly opened in amazement, her great dark eyes fixed solemnly and wonderingly upon the slightly scowling face of John Jones.

He spoke from the menu, without looking up: "We'll start off with some oysters. Olives—celery—cream of tomato—broil three of those bass—tell him some lemon sauce (Cathareena wondered who "him" was that the waiter was to tell; she felt vaguely that God didn't run the hotel, but maybe He did—on Christmas)—a planked steak rare—enough for two—a couple of those (wink) rice birds—some ice cream—Camembert cheese—is it running? Very well—nuts—raisins—coffee—Oh, yes, bring her some buttermilk."

All the while he was ordering the dinner, the thought kept tantalizing John Jones' mind: "What on earth can I say to her to put her at her ease?" He admitted to himself he did not know how to "make conversation" for starving thirteen-year-olds who—

"How old are you, Catharina?"

"I'm eleven, sir."

Here Jones did an ungallant thing. "My! You look older than that," he exclaimed.

"Yes, sir." Then she enlightened him: "I worked."

Jones, for the only time in his life, confronted the child-labor problem.

"Er—how long have you 'worked?'" he said.

"Ever since I know," answered Catharina faithfully.

John Jones' answer was to swallow a cocktail he had hastily poured out from his hip flask, using the action to cover a swift closer survey of the girl. She was not an ugly girl. Indeed, she had a peculiar beauty, as of something strange and wild in her blood.

"I thought you'd be ashamed to bring me here. Are you?"

"Why—what on earth—no, of course not, Catharina."

"You see, I've covered myself up the best I can with the napkin; and I'm keeping my hands hidden, sir."

"My name is Jones; John Jones; Mister Jones," he announced, with relief.

"Yes, sir—Mister-er-er," she answered mildly.

The oysters were served and, after tasting tentatively, she ate eagerly, the soup greedily, the fish with interest. When the steak came, the waiter cut it into slices and gave her three. Then Catharina with her left hand pushed her plate toward John Jones.

"Please, Mister-er-er, you cut it up smaller for me."

He looked at her curiously. And she, catching his gaze, gave him her own curious gaze in return. John Jones fell to cutting her steak. When he returned her plate he noticed that Catharina ate with her left hand, keeping her right hand under the table out of view.

JOHN JONES, so practical that he was ideal (from certain points of view), began to feel a new quality in his brain. Here, in common, ordinary everyday life, in the commission of a most commonplace piece of charity, in the plain glare of electric lights in a perfectly respectable and well-ordered restaurant, he began to suspect, more and more strongly, some sort of pervading and potent mystery.

While continuing to eat, he devised a crafty expedient. At least he would find out what was the matter with her right hand.

"Let me help you," he said. Reaching over, he bunglingly tipped a glass of water so that it almost spilled. With a little cry, Catharina suddenly darted her hidden hand toward the glass.

There was no thumb on her right hand.

John Jones at once became merciless and intense. He leaned across the table and looked searchingly at Catharina, who shrank timidly back into her chair and placed her hand quickly out of sight.

"I never noticed you had lost your thumb," said Jones remorselessly.

"Yes, sir—no, sir. I—I kep' it hid." She seemed embarrassed, yet the pose of her head denoted a sense of security.

"How did you lose your thumb?" he pursued tenaciously.

"It was in a suspender factory in Connecticut. I looked old for my age, and they put me on a machine where I had a stick to measure off the length of the suspender with, and a knifeblade that come down and cut it off when I stomped on a thing. And the knifeblade cot my thumb one day." She stopped, with a gesture indicating the further uselessness of talking about it.

BY THIS time both Jones and Catharina had forgotten all about the dinner. Jones, who was interested in several factories in Connecticut, asked:

"What was the name of the man who owned the factory?"

"I don't know. It just has a name—not the man's name. He was a rich man, and lived all over." Thus Catharina epitomized the triumphant social march of the rich man's wife and daughters.

The girl's face across from him lapsed into gloomy abstraction. "You got to lose somepin'," she said.

"What is that?" demanded John Jones.

"Why," she answered, and her eyes were now shining. "I said you got to lose somepin'. As you go along, I mean. Things kind of get away from you and you never get 'em back exackly."

Jones said, quietly and soberly, "Then you don't agree with other philosophers as to the law of compensation?"

"Huh?"

"I say, you don't believe you get other things in exchange for the ones you lose?"

"Cer'nly you get other things," Catharina declared. Then, across the table breathed at him in a low, husky voice: "That's the way I came to get Her, losin' my thumb."

John Jones was on the trail of a mystery. Yet he was a phlegmatic, practical man.

"Whom do you mean by 'her?'"

"Why, I mean that little lady that come to me in place of my thumb! She ain't more'n a foot or so high—I think she's a fairy that took the place of my thumb, I do—an' she—" Catharina stopped suddenly in self-conscious dismay, and began picking at the table cloth with her good hand.

WITHOUT looking at the young girl (whose eyes, he felt, were boring holes in his skull), John Jones reflected that to lose one's thumb must bring about a severe nervous shock. In fact, he had read of an engineer who had gone crazy because of such a mishap. A great deal of a human being's strength must lie in the thumb, and so, when that member is gone, a sort of nervous weakness must set in. This, combined with Catharina's (no doubt) prolonged hunger, had evidently had its effect. Catharina was mildly lunatic, which explained her eyes.

John Jones rehearsed the usual formula for indulging persons who were, as he put it, "off their base." Beginning gently, he inquired:

"Why does she come to you?"

Still without looking up, and seemingly lost in meditation, he heard the rapt and eager words: "I say, because I lost somepin'. She comes to people that have lost somepin'—only to them that's lost somepin'." The words had a monotonous insistence about them.

"What makes her come?"

"Why—sometimes—you thinkin' of her."

"I really don't know. Maybe you just think of anybody excep' yourself. Maybe that makes her come."

The very immaculate Mr. Jones coughed slightly. "And what does she do?"

"Well, I just can't exactly say, Mister-er—er. She kind of takes me out of myself, somehow. When I'm sick an' cold and can't make a cent and everybody goes along past me a-gruntin' out 'Nope!' at me, why—why—She comes. And She says to me, 'Catharеena, I can't help you unless you help yourself; but if you help yourself, why, then I can help you.' And then, sure enough, I go do somepin' I wouldn't of thought of doin' if she hadn't come, and it always helps me. You see, at first it ain't exackly pleasant. She most always leaves you when you think she ain't done enough for you. But that there's best for you; you get feelin' that way, and it makes you want to do things. Then you go do 'em, and everything turns out right. Why," Catharina concluded, "that's how I come to meet you tonight!"

"What do you mean?"

"Why, sir, I been so hungry—you don't know how hungry! Why, for days! And I was over on the East Side at Ninety-eight street and she says to me, 'It's Christmas, and you know you can always get a Chris'mas among the poor people, so what you hangin' around among 'em for now? The hard people to get it out of is the rich people, and as long as they's a chance left you want to go after them.'

"So I came over to Fift' avenoo and I felt so scared when you stopped and kep' standin' there and wouldn't move on. I just knowed She meant you."

JOHN JONES, vaguely stirred by something, coughed carefully and said: "But, Catharina, you—ah—you say She makes one dissatisfied. I'm sure I wouldn't care to meet her if She does that. Because, you see, I am now quite satisfied. And it would be too disturbing—even for Christmas Eve. Too disturbing." He ate a spoonful of ice cream, but Catharina, whom he had hoped would fall upon the delicacy, disregarded it entirely.

"Look here, Mister," she said, in her compulsive, throaty voice—a voice that may have come from the streets or may have come from her heart—"She'll come to you if you've lost anything. Ain't you never lost anything? Anything important, I mean, like a thumb?"

John Jones, in his most immaculate fashion, dipped his spoon into his cream and scowled magnificently. "I regret to disappoint your vagary, Catharina, but I must confess I ain't never lost nothing at all."

At his words, a clear, silvery laugh, so perfect and so tiny that it seemed, indeed, not to be an expression of this human world, tinkled up at him from the center of the table.

"Oh, yes, you have lost something, John Jones," said a sweet, rich voice. It was a voice of such confined and dainty volume, compared with human voices, that it seemed miraculous it should be heard in that cafe full of chattering and noise. Yet John Jones heard it distinctly.

"My God! Irene!" he breathed.

Again the laugh broke in. And the very laugh itself haunted him.

"Yes, you've guessed right, John. That's part of your loss—Irene."

YOU probably have never seen a carefully dressed young clubman stare over a white bow tie at the supernatural. Yet, if you ever do, you will observe a very sincere kind of awe.

"I say"—he peered—"can it be you, Irene?" The laugh and the voice had come upon him like a ghost.

"It can be, John. Yet not merely Irene," She answered cryptically.

Then She stepped right up and out of a sugar bowl. She was barely over a foot high, perfectly developed from tip to toe, exquisitely gowned in Lilliputian garments of choicest texture and most admirable fit, her hair done up in an old-time fashion, and a dainty toque catchily above her brow.

"Irene! Irene!" he cried hoarsely. And John Jones' voice broke as if, in those few moments of recognition, his heart had broken first.

"Did you lose nothing in losing me? You threw me over because you were busy," she pursued. "You even had the kindness to tell me so. You remember? When you said: 'You only stand for beauty in my life, Irene, and I have no time for that nonsense now—but, later, I might come back, if you care to, then?' You remember? And you were only 21 then."

John Jones became very lonely at the words. He became very lonely and very intense. "Irene," he said, under his breath, so no one else would hear, "Irene, I love you."

Artie on Gifts.
He Has Novel Ideas.
Why Not Use Auto Parts?
The Old Car Is Junk, Anyway.

"ARTIE," I said, "I wish you'd have that old Lizzie in the back yard junked. You always have all the time in the world to tinker with the new car—but when I ask you to have the old Lizzie moved away you haven't a minute to spare."

"See Santa first," he answered blithely, "see Santa first. Since I've seen that collection of fruit jar rings, bottle tops, coffee cans, test tubes, old boxes, lead pencils and peanut shells you're painting up and covering with ribbons to make Christmas presents, and since I've read the page of Christmas present suggestions in the Ladies' Weekly Splurch, I've had several ideas. Why not utilize the old Lizzie—convert her into gifts? That'll put her in the used car class again."

"For instance," he continued, "you and your women friends exchange dozens of coat hangers every Christmas. You have so many of them with such a variety of sachets in them, that during the month after Christmas I have to put on a gas mask every time I open the closet door. Do you remember the time I hung my coat that I wear to the office on one of them? The boys never got through—oh, well, I don't like to think about it! But since you do make those things, why not use those odd pieces of pipe from the car? Fill 'em full of sachet, wind ribbons around 'em and embroider 'em with French what-nots—or whatever you call 'em—and you'll have a coat hanger any woman would be proud to hang her silk stockings on. And if she doesn't happen to recognize it as a coat hanger she can pass it on to some other woman next year."

"I read in the Ladies' Weekly Splurch that no gift can bring more joy or happiness into the home at this season of the year than a fire screen. I don't know why I've never liked those things myself. They always get between me and whatever I want to look at in a room. They'd screen anything but a fire.

"BUT you explained to me the other day that when you give a Christmas present you don't consider whether it's a thing you'd like to own yourself. It's simply a Christmas present. So why don't you take the old hood to the Lizzie, hammer out the dent made where you ran into the telephone pole and that banged-up place where the fire plug rose up and got in your way and paint a bunch of daisies and a fire plug with morning glories on it, with a few butterflies or something like that and you'll have—as the Splurch would say—'A dainty, artistic fire screen that will have charm with its sophisticated simplicity.'

"Of course, you can make pillows out of the cushions. Remember that pillow shaped like a butterfly covered with overstuffed taffeta that looked as if it had inflammatory rheumatism that Mrs. Wouldbegrand gave you last year? After I made a mistake and rested against it I had a pattern on my back for the next 24 hours. Now, you can cut those cushions into all sorts of shapes—frogs, lizards, flapper dolls and colonial ladies covered with silk sewed into stiff ridges, and you'll have a flock of pillows that no man would dream of lying on or lie about dreaming on.

"You can make sweet little powder boxes out of the tail lights, with satin gathered over them, and the headlights can be converted into quaint bowls—is quaint the right adjective this time? Painlessly remove the lens, amputate the light and line with pink silk, edged with forget-me-nots. On the outside paint a conventionalized design of a speed cop chasing an automobile. Fill the bowl with stones from around the door of the garage and lily bulbs and attach a verse.

"Didn't you tell me last week that anything was a present if it was done up in a fancy box with a verse attached? I've noticed that a lot of people are buying thumb tacks with landscapes painted on them and darning balls decorated with yards of roses, dressed up with a card with a sentiment on it—6 cents for the thumb tacks—94 cents for the sentiment.

"Now, why not use the stray bolts from the Lizzie? Let's send one to the McGoofs. We used to taxi them to all the picnics the crowd had last summer. We haven't seen 'em since they bought their new Hodgepodge super eight. Now, why not send 'em the bolt in a little blue box-bolt out of the blue—if you can get near enough to some store counter to buy one before Christmas—cover it with pink baby ribbon bows and mistletoe and attach a card with a verse something like this:

"I hope this dainty little bolt
Will give your memory a jolt
So think of rides you owe to me
While gazing on your Christmas tree."

DIDN'T I say a word during this long lecture from Artie? Yes, I said several words, but I haven't set them down because I'm economizing on exclamation marks—saving them to use when I receive my Christmas presents—although his last suggestion deserves a few.

"I've noticed," he said, "that you women are fond of sending each other little mottoes framed and decorated with mother of pearl lines to cheer up or suggestions for moral conduct during the coming year. Now, why don't you frame the old speedometer?"

Ring at Queen's Luncheon.

IN RECOUNTING the trial of my divorce suit, I forgot to include a couple of examples of the sparkling repartee between counsel for the opposing sides, which, I believe, are well worth publication. At one stage of the proceedings my lawyer, Attorney Dumb, made the remark that Hugga's lawyer, Mr. Wheedle, looked as if he had forgotten to shave that morning.

"So do you!" replied Attorney Wheedle, without an instant's hesitation.

"I'll bet your wife wishes she was single," said Attorney Dumb.

"Yours is!" retorted his opponent.

Not long after this tour de force Mr. Wheedle objected to Mr. Dumb's habit (amounting almost to a knack) of snapping the various court attendants' suspenders. It really was annoying, both to the attendants and the rest of us, the noise was deafening.

(Editor's note: Consult William Hoisbird on "What Shall We Do With Our Suspender Snappers?")

"If the Court pleases," said Mr. Wheedle, "I believe this trial could be gotten through with a great deal more pleasantly if counsel for the plaintiff would pay less attention to the attendants' suspenders."

"I would like to belt you in the jaw!" exclaimed Mr. Wheedle.

"You look like a horse!" said Mr. Dumb.

"Is that why you keep riding me?" asked Mr. Wheedle.

THIS badinage probably had no effect on the outcome of the trial, but as a result of it the two attorneys were later persuaded to give up the profession of law and join the staff of the Harvard Lampoon.

Like Jack Dempsey, I became popular in defeat, and when I returned to New York I found awaiting me an invitation to attend an exclusive luncheon at the Plaza in honor of the Queen of Rumania. Those excluded were the assistant bell captain and Joe Muriosi of the men's washroom.

I found Marie a woman of a ready, quick wit, a woman who spoke Rumanian with only a trace of accent. She was plainly dressed, in a Mother Hubbard and Plus Fours.

"Po'k chops: dat's ma dish," she said to the waiter. "Bring me some o' dem po'k chops and sweet potatoes. An' make de po'k chops nice an' brown. Nice, brown po'k chops is somethin' Marie don't like nothin' else but."

"Oh, dat watahmelon! Oh, dat watahmelyon hangin' on de vine!" said her majesty, beating time with an oyster opener.

"Friends," said Col. Grenfall, "it is a coincidence that royalty should visit America in this year of all years, the year of the Sesquicentennial Exposition as well as the hundredth anniversary of the Youth's Companion. This reminds me of a story told me last night by my good friend Junius Gabbett, who calls trains at the Grand Central Station."

"What does he call them?" interrupted the Queen.

"Trains," replied Col. Grenfall with an amused smile. "You will stop me, I trust, if you have heard the story before. It seems there were"——

Col. Grenfall was paged at this point; it developed there was a taxi at the Fifty-eighth street entrance and the door stuck.

(Author's note: Must have been.)

The Queen, responding, said the only disturbing feature of her trip had been the announcement of the athletic break between Harvard and Princeton, which had apparently plunged the entire country in gloom and which she called the most important event in United States history since Marc Connelly, playing alone at Coldstream, missed a putt that would have given him a 124.

There was no answer, unless you except a mocking little laugh. After the laughter a change came over the fairy's voice.

"I don't care now whether you love Irene or not, John. You used to tell me you didn't. But it is as bad for Irene as it is for me—now," she said, "I only wish that for my sake you would be more honorable. When you left me you were still an honest man—but can you say as much now? I think not."

"Why, where is she? Irene, I mean. What are you? Aren't you—aren't you Eleanor Canton now?"

He tried to smile, but hardly succeeded. "This seems to be a Christmas Eve's meeting of my old loves, doesn't it?" he asked nervously.

She did not answer.

HE PLUCKED intently at a piece of bread, and, with head lowered, began: "I don't know what you want here tonight, Eleanor, but I am glad of the chance to see you again—and—and to tell you that your influence has been one of the noblest things in my life. Whatever of my work has stood for honor, is due to you."

"It could have been more," interrupted the little lady. "A practical man like you doesn't have much honor until he has known a good woman—and even then sometimes it doesn't 'take.'"

"True, it would have been more, Eleanor, if I had kept you by me, all these years. Let me see—I was 24 then. Why I didn't," he murmured pathetically, "I can't understand."

The little lady seemed to soften her attitude. "You didn't keep me by you, John, if the truth must be told, because you were ambitious. Ambitious—and abominably selfish. Now, if my coming here tonight has done you any good, I am glad. But it can only have done you good if it has made you feel a little bit humbled. You need softening, John, and the only way it will ever be brought about is for you to realize that you are not a success. Why, any of the women you loved is greater than you! You have shortcomings that outweigh your good qualities."

"What shortcomings?" asked John Jones. He was a bit hurt and resentful. "Name one."

"Selfishness."

He sneered. "The same old femi-

Not long after this tour de force Mr. Wheedle objected to Mr. Dumb's habit (amounting almost to a knack) of snapping the various court attendants' suspenders. It really was annoying, both to the attendants and the rest of us; the noise was deafening.

(Editor's note: Consult William Holabird on "What Shall We Do With Our Suspender Snappers?")

"If the Court pleases," said Mr. Wheedle, "I believe this trial could be gotten through with a great deal more pleasantly if counsel for the plaintiff would pay less attention to the attendants' suspenders."

"I presume counsel for the defense wears a belt," retorted Mr. Dumb, sarcastically.

"I would like to belt you in the jaw!" exclaimed Mr. Wheedle.

"You look like a horse!" said Mr. Dumb.

"Is that why you keep riding me?" asked Mr. Wheedle.

Even Judge Ogle could not suppress a smile, but quickly recovered his dignity and pounded on his desk with dental floss.

THIS badinage probably had no effect on the outcome of the trial, but as a result of it the two attorneys were later persuaded to give up the profession of law and join the staff of the Harvard Lampoon.

Like Jack Dempsey, I became popular in defeat, and when I returned to New York I found awaiting me an invitation to attend an exclusive luncheon at the Plaza in honor of the Queen of Rumania. Those excluded were the assistant bell captain and Joe Muriosi of the men's washroom.

I found Marie a woman of a ready, quick wit, a woman who spoke Rumanian with only a trace of accent. She was plainly dressed, in a Mother Hubbard and Plus Fours.

"Po'k chops; dat's ma dish," she said to the waiter. "Bring me some o' dem po'k chops and sweet potatoes. An' make de po'k chops nice an' brown. Nice, brown po'k chops is somethin' Marie don't like nothin' else but."

"Oh, dat watahmelon! Oh, dat watahmelon hangin' on de vine!" said her majesty, beating time with an oyster opener.

"Friends," said Col. Grenfall, "it is a coincidence that royalty should visit America in this year of all years, the year of the Sesquicentennial Exposition as well as the hundredth anniversary of the Youth's Companion. This reminds me of a story told me last night by my good friend Junius Gabbett, who calls trains at the Grand Central Station."

"What does he call them?" interrupted the Queen.

"Trains," replied Col. Grenfall with an amused smile. "You will stop me, I trust, if you have heard the story before. It seems there were"——

Col. Grenfall was paged at this point; it developed there was a taxi at the Fifty-eighth street entrance and the door stuck.

(Editor's note: Probably something the matter with it.)

(Author's note: Must have been.)

The Queen, responding, said the only disturbing feature of her trip had been the announcement of the athletic break between Harvard and Princeton, which had apparently plunged the entire country in gloom and which she called the most important event in United States history since Marc Connelly, playing alone at Coldstream, missed a putt that would have given him a 124.

JOHN JONES COMES TO LIFE

There was no answer, unless you except a mocking little laugh. After the laughter a change came over the fairy's voice.

"I don't care now whether you love Irene or not, John. You used to tell me you didn't. But it is as bad for Irene as it is for me—now," she said. "I only wish that for my sake you would be more honorable. When you left me you were still an honest man—but can you say as much now? I think not."

"Why, where is she? Irene, I mean. What are you? Aren't you—aren't you Eleanor Canton now?"

He tried to smile, but hardly succeeded. "This seems to be a Christmas Eve's meeting of my old loves, doesn't it?" he asked nervously.

She did not answer.

HE PLUCKED intently at a piece of bread, and, with head lowered, began: "I don't know what you want here tonight, Eleanor, but I am glad of the chance to see you again—and—and to tell you that your influence has been one of the noblest things in my life. Whatever of my work has stood for honor, is due to you."

"It could have been more," interrupted the little lady. "A practical man like you doesn't have much honor until he has known a good woman—and even then sometimes it doesn't 'take.'"

"True, it would have been more, Eleanor, if I had kept you by me, all these years. Let me see—I was 24 then. Why I didn't," he murmured, pathetically, "I can't understand."

The little lady seemed to soften her attitude. "You didn't keep me by you, John. If the truth must be told, because you were ambitious. Ambitious—and abominably selfish. Now, if my coming here tonight has done you any good, I am glad. But it can only have done you good if it has made you feel a little bit humbled. You need softening, John, and the only way it will ever be brought about is for you to realize that you are not a success. Why, any of the women you loved is greater than you! You have shortcomings that outweigh your good qualities."

"What shortcomings?" asked John Jones. He was a bit hurt and resentful. "Name one."

"Selfishness."

He sneered. "The same old feminine cry. Great God! Who isn't selfish in this world?"

He heard a cough, a slight throat noise, mucous and sinister, and as he heard it, his jaws set like iron, his tongue clung to his teeth. His face turned the unhealthy white of lilies.

"I wasn't, John," said a mournful voice through the fairy's lips. Her eyes were deep and sad and she suddenly seemed very young. In a pitiful fashion, one hand pressed against her breast. "I wasn't selfish."

JOHN JONES bit his lips and shivered slightly. Then he raised his shoulders and his eyes. But he made no attempt to answer her.

"You have another one of the signs of a selfish man—a poor memory," continued the little lady.

"That isn't fair. I did remember—you, Belle. But I hoped—I was hoping — I — kept hoping — you wouldn't come here tonight."

"You may have remembered me, John," went on that mournful voice. "But did you remember that I was not selfish?"

"I forgot that."

"Well, don't let it bother you. You know, it doesn't matter now. Do you know where I am?"

The roisterers had begun. There was a burst of drunken laughter from a table near by. One of a group was performing antics with an empty champagne bottle.

"No," said John Jones, without looking up.

"I am dead."

"For he's a jolly good fellow,
"For he's a jolly good fellow,
"For he's a jolly good fellow—as nobody can deny!" came from the next table.

"The baby, thank God," said the mournful voice, with a touch of cruelty, "is dead, too."

For an instant, he had the intention of being cruel in return, but he cleared his throat and spoke steadily: "Belle, this is Christmas Eve. If you were alive tonight, so help me God, I would marry you."

"You wouldn't marry me then, when I begged you to. John, did you ever sacrifice yourself for anything?" said the little woman, abruptly.

THERE came a final regardless cough. It was abrupt; it dismissed him. It aroused in him a kind of senseless fury, although his eyes were full of tears; and he looked over at Catharina wildly.

"She died of consumption. How was I to know? Anyway, was it my fault? I would have married her." Then he controlled himself. "But you do not understand these things," he muttered.

"I understand them," said a heavy, yet soft, contralto voice. The fairy's words hung in the air with a curious, velvet quality.

"Mrs. Trellys! You!"

"Well, you might have expected me—tonight—with all the others," she drawled. The foot-high lady, in some subtle mimic fashion, had the air of a svelte, mature woman of about 35.

"You don't look a day older," said John Jones, neatly. "And—let me see, it was five years ago. I was 30 then."

"No figures, please." She swung a fan languidly.

As he gazed there came suddenly an expression he had never seen on Mrs. Trellys' face.

"A bit out of sorts?" he asked.

SHE lifted her hand sharply. "Each of us tonight has but a minute or two. Don't make me lose time, John, it is this"—she tore tiny patches from her fan—"Don't ever again fall in love—or think you are in love—with a woman of 35 who is already married. I can look back and see now. You were lucky—I was lucky—to have it go along as decently"—she hurried—"and as respectably as it did. I—each of us is here tonight to try to help you, you know—I want you to promise me not to—to do that sort of thing again." She fairly blurted the rest, and her voice became sharp, nasal, strained, losing its own quality. "Oh, I know you were going to say how much I taught you—how much I helped you"——

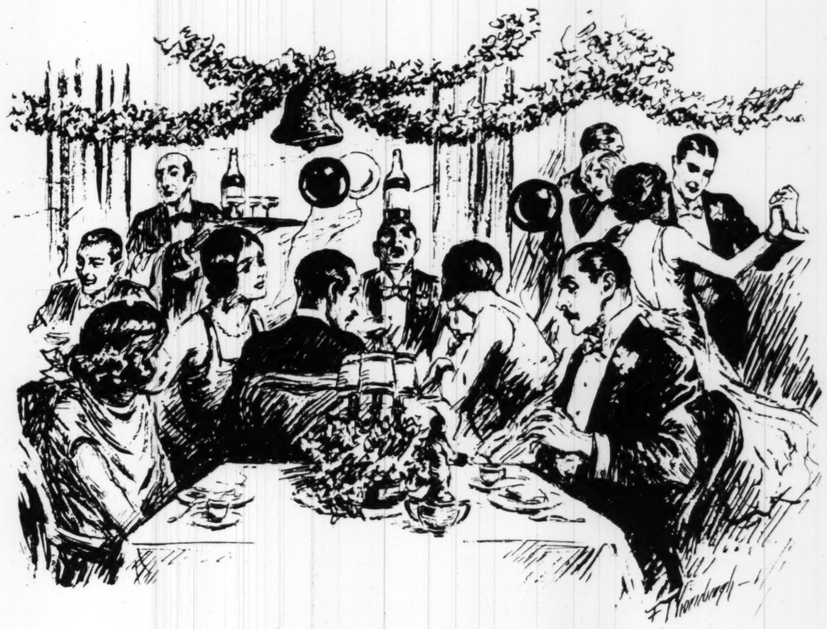
"Only I was going to say 'inspired' me," interrupted John Jones gently.

She laughed a bit hysterically and answered rapidly: "The kind of work you do doesn't require inspiration. It works out itself like a problem in algebra. And you do not need to go to the kind of woman I was to get your inspiration, anyway."

"I think you are treating yourself a bit too harshly," he said.

"Do you?" There was a distinct pause. Then: "It would be better for you if you treated yourself that way awhile. John, dear, why don't you wake up? Don't you realize how poorly you've done all this?"

"Mrs. Trellys, this isn't like you. You used to be always patting me on the back for—Mrs. Trellys! Molly! What do you mean by 'all this?'"



"Oh, yes, you have lost something, John Jones," said a sweet, rich voice.

"I saw the ship go 'round the bend. Good-by, my lover, good-by."

At a nearby table they were singing.

"She did inspire me, just the same," said John Jones doggedly to himself.

"Good-by, my lover, good-by," droned the chorus.

In one startling moment John Jones felt horribly sick over the significance of the song's words, that smote him inexplicably, emotionally. Alone. He stared around him, with such dismay on his face amidst that gathering of gleeful souls that his expression was almost comic. John Jones alone. All, all alone. The pity of it and the tragic endlessness of it oppressed him. The tragic justice of it he ignored. What, in God's name, had overtaken him?

HE LOOKED at Catharina and a quick stab of pity reached his heart. Her big eyes still stayed fixed upon him, and though she said not a word, he read all her poor, threadbare life in them. A sort of communion followed on this thought. Hang it, how was he any better off than this poor, little, lonely ragamuffin? Lonely! He, too! John Jones all alone! He felt silently to pitying himself again. Irene was just his first love, he thought. But then, my God, first love! Eleanor had been the serious, honest attempt of a young man of 24—an extraordinary start toward the fundamental probity of human life. Belle had been passion—ravaging, direct, terrible, like white flame—while it had lasted. Molly Trellys, the sophisticated aftermath. Yet a man is never anything more than a boy to the woman who knows how to make a boy of him. How odd that they had each fallen in three-year cycles in his life—21, 24, 27, 30. Irene at 21, Molly Trellys at 30.

"Goo'-by, my—hic—lover, goo'-by!"

This sort of thinking seemed to purge his brain. He grew clearer. He looked around in grimness after all, he reflected, there was a bitter satisfaction in taking your own medicine when you had to. By a paradox of human nature, this reflection tempered him, sweetened him. He looked up at Catharina and, "Poor little devil," he said under his breath; then,

"Oh, here's the way She comes to me!" shouted Catharina, who had spoken for the first time.

John Jones, however, was still in a tremor of old memories. The fairy waited patiently, a smart little toe, twinkling like a wren's eye, tapping the tablecloth. (Those of you who conceive of fairies as being flighty and ethereal little things are wrong. Most fairies, being feminine, are intensely practical. Read over your fairy tales again; you will find that elves, good and bad, are invariably level-headed.)

"Come, come, John Jones," she said, and though her tone was imperious, it was charming and tinkled softly in his ears.

He turned his head and looked down at her. Then he smiled sadly.

"I hope you will pardon me. I—I am a trifle upset."

"Yes. I see. I did it."

He stared. "And you—you are all these women!"

"All—and more."

HIS hand fell to the table, and his mind, half occupied with the dainty vision before him and half occupied with the old aching thought of his own lonesomeness in the world, balanced itself mutely.

"Well, haven't you anything to say?"

He waved his hand in an idle, broken negative.

"Tell me, just how do you feel?"

"Lonely."

"Selfish, as ever," was her comment. "Don't you feel a sort of disgust with yourself?"

"That"—he twisted his hands—"may come later." For the first time in his life, as he said those words, John Jones thought of his emotional future. He saw the rising years of gloom ahead of him, each changing from an innocent neutral to an appalling black as it approached, endured and passed him. And selfish to the last, the agony of his own hopeless predicament burst upon him full force in the gay restaurant. He realized that he, whom temporal affairs could not stir, would hereafter face spiritual skirmishes that would keep him agitated, constantly and profoundly.

"I can't stand it!" he broke out at her, suddenly interrupting his own thoughts. His eyes glared madly in the hideous suddenness of his defeat—a defeat following upon a silent, unseen struggle beneath that black broadcloth coat and white lawn tie. John Jones overcome by ghosts! "I"—he came at her hoarsely—"I won't be alone! I need help, I tell you." It sounded to him as if he were shouting, yet he knew his voice to be a hard, low whisper. "You brought all this on."

"I did." Something in her pert manner of saying it was so delicious that it loosened his tense attack.

"In God's name, if I am so bad, how is it I can see you?"

"You are not so bad," she replied.

LIKE the opportunist he was, he melted at her attitude and whispered:

"You—you are all these women I have loved—all of them in one—and that one perfect. Can't you stay with me?"

She answered his madness with a sober question:

"How on earth could I?"

"You could grow up to me—couldn't you?"

She laughed. "Impossible."

It did not seem to John Jones that he was idiotic when he said:

"Then—maybe—I could grow down to you?"

She shook her head sadly.

"Why not?" he demanded. "Why isn't there some way to adjust this?"

"Why, John Jones? Because—I am the symbol of perfection. I shall always be unattainable to you. You cannot get all the best qualities of all the women you love rolled up in one bundle—of Me."

He started to interrupt her. She warned him with a serious look. "John Jones, what are you going to do?"

He flung his hand up to his eyes, as if threatened by a sword, then slowly drew it down and blankly and deliberately stared around him. She had vanished. Faces, yellowy-white, twitched into masquerade grins where the drinkers sat—Irene, Eleanor, Belle, Molly Trellys—John Jones. Alone. All alone.

The light had died out of Catharina's eyes. She yawned sleepily, twice, thrice, a half-dozen times. But the fascinated man across the table paid no heed, and she laid her head back on her chair and went to sleep.

Suddenly she was awakened by a brutal, wrenching grip which closed down over her hand, and she heard a terrible whisper in her ear: "But I've got you, you, Catharina!"

She started to cry, but checked herself when her drowsy eyes saw that it was Mister-er-er.

"Come along with me," said John Jones. She arose and they started upstairs, toward the clerk's desk.

"Sir?" said Catharina, wonderingly, and still half asleep.

He smiled down at her a curious, saddened smile. "You're going to be my little girl from now on, Catharina," he said.

"Yes, sir."

AT THE desk he nodded to the clerk. "Ring up the Nurses' Club and have a nurse sent down here, will you, please?" said Jones. "To"—he grabbed the register and wrote "Miss Catharina Josephina Martin, City"—"to whatever room you assign this young lady." Then he turned to Catharina and led her to a quiet seat in a corner of the lobby. "Now, just for this one night, Catharina, you're going to have a great big room here and a nice, kind woman to wait on you and keep you from being afraid. And then tomorrow morning early—remember, early, now, because it's Christmas morning—you must be up waiting for Santa Claus."

"And won't you come, too, Mister Jones?"

He smoothed her hair. "You must call me John."

"And won't you come, too, J—John?"

"Yes. I'll be here with Santa Claus."

Over at the desk the clerk stared hard at the register, then stared hard at the corner of the lobby. He thus betrayed a great deal of emotion for a hotel clerk. But he had a justification. Instead of a period after the word "City," John Jones—or Santa Claus—had dropped a big wet tear.

Japanese Convert to Christianity Now Called Heretic by Christians

TOKIO, Japan.

THERE is a man out here in Japan who was, many years ago, stoned because he taught among his own people the teachings of Christianity, and now he is called a heretic by the Christians. His story is the story of the change the renaissance in the Christian religion which, in its counterpart in the Occident, has to do with things which interest men and women in the church who are called, on the one side, fundamentalists, and on the other, modernists.

Mr. Kaiseki Matsumura is a well-known scholar and a romantic figure in the religious world of Japan. His book, "Fifty Years of Devotional Life," was recently published. Through its pages, the scholar laments the failure of missionary methods that were adopted by early Christian workers in Japan. He maintains that, had foreign and Japanese Christian workers adopted his views, the Japanese nation today might have been almost wholly converted to Christianity.

INSTEAD, out of its some 70,000,000 souls, not more than some few scores of thousands—not a drop in that vast bucket of humanity which is seeking an outlet for its overflow where the spillings will not dampen someone's floor, where such an overflow is not wanted—are Christians, or at least apparent converts to Christianity in one of the multitude of forms in which it is brought to the "heathens of the East."

Matsumura has had an eventful life, not without its dangers, as a Christian worker since he was converted in 1868, a youth of 18 years. Today he is grown older and somewhat philosophical.

When he was converted, Matsumura took the religion that was served to him. Under its banner he worked without questioning, without doubting or reflecting, until he reached middle age. His was a pure faith. But then he was beset with doubts and perplexing questions. He began to wonder about the religion he had accepted so implicitly. His is the problem facing many Orientals today as they take over the religion and culture of the West.

In this frame of mind, he retired to Kamakura, by the sea, not far from Tokio, and began an exhaustive study of the Christian Bible. Since that time his views of Christianity as it is taught by professional religionists have been somewhat altered, he says.

Now, he does not believe, for example, in the Virgin Birth, nor in many other doctrinal points generally regarded as the essential points in the basic faith of believers. He parted with his Christian colleagues on account of these differences of opinion and finally established a religious movement of his own in 1916, erecting the present "Haitendo," a chapel for religious services, in Shibuya, a Tokio suburb.

He has now about 3000 followers, Matsumura stated, in discussing his work, and religious services are held every Sunday morning. He preaches the first and third Sunday each month. He has an average congregation of some 300 Japanese.

As he continued his studies, he wrote books. Matsumura is now the author of some 50 works, chiefly on religious subjects, but including several on history. Among the best-known here is "A World History," in five volumes. Among the most popular are "The Life of Lincoln" and "Rishino-koso" or, "The Foundation for Self-Making," which has gone into 72 editions, some 72,000 copies having been sold.

While Matsumura San denies that the Bible is the actual word of God, he believes in a Christian God, eternal life and personal discipline, as preached by Jesus of Nazareth.

"The fundamental doctrines of the Bible have been upset in recent years," the sage declared in a recent interview, "and the intelligent class of people everywhere no longer take the Bible literally.

"There are many extraneous matters in all religions," he continued, "including Buddhism, Shintoism and Confucianism. The point I want to emphasize is that I am not concerned with these extraneous matters as other religious workers in all religions are. I only preach a straight religion, without this mixture of ritualistic affairs. I believe in God, eternal life, neighborly love and personal discipline, as seen and preached by Jesus. Therefore, of course, I still maintain that I am a Christian.

"I WAS stoned while preaching in a church in the provinces in the days when the persecution of Christians was most severe, and those stones are preserved to this day in the church where I spoke."

A peculiar feature of the worship in the little chapel is the use of some objects used in Shintoism, the national religion of Japan. On the platform an altar has been erected, on which stand a mirror and "gohei," or sacred staff, to which white paper streamers are attached, similar to the staff used by a Shinto priest in the rites of purification.

Back of these objects is a curtain, on which four characters are inscribed. "Ko Ten Jo Tei," signifying, God Is In Heaven. Matsumura explained that these are not objects of worship and said they are merely to make newcomers feel at home.

Pauper's Death Recalls Famous Tichborne Case

SOUTHAMPTON, England.

THE famous Tichborne case, which half a century ago roused the fiercest controversy throughout England, and practically divided the country into two camps, is recalled by the death at the Shirley Warren Poor Law Institution, Southampton, of the widow of Arthur Orton, claimant to the Tichborne estates.

Mrs. Orton, who was 77 years of age, was known to her fellow inmates as Mary Tichborne, and is described as having been a cheery soul, with a certain refinement of manner. One who knew her well said: "She always insisted that she ought to have been Lady Tichborne, but she was reluctant to discuss either her husband or the case."

Mrs. Orton always maintained, however, her faith in her husband's right to the title and estates. She followed her husband's practice in using the name of Tichborne to the end. In the poor law records her name appears as Tichborne, and her death certificate was made out in that name.

She came to Southampton from Islington in the '80s, and had been in the custody of the local guardians for more than 30 years.

Arthur Orton was sentenced to 14 years' penal servitude for perjury on February 28, 1874, on the 188th day of the longest criminal trial recorded in England. He died in 1898.

Christmas Cards of British Royalty

LIKE nearly everybody else in the civilized world, the King and Queen and other members of the English royal house celebrate Christmas and give presents. But since providing gifts for such an array of great personages and lesser personages as Kings and Queens must remember would tax even a royal exchequer, they are forced, like the rest of us, to resort to the expedient of meeting such obligations with Christmas cards.

Each member of the royal family has his or her individual card, and each year an order is placed with the art publishers to their majesties for the required number. The paintings for the decorative designs this year are reproduced on this page.

The King's card depicts the entry of King Henry V and his bride, Catherine of Valois, into London. The painting is by Howard Davie, noted English artist. Magnificent pageantry marked the coronation celebrations of Queen Catherine, which ceremony took place in Westminster Abbey on February 24, 1421. The gayly decorated streets were thronged with people, masques were held in open spaces and choirs sang hymns to the Queen as she passed on her way to the abbey, preceded by children who strewed her path with flowers. The whole day was one of triumphant processions.

The taste of the Prince of Wales this year ran to the heroic, as evidenced by his selection of Bernard Gribble's painting of the "Prince George III." As flagship to Rear Admiral Robert Digby, the Prince George III was engaged in the relief of Gibraltar in the battle off Cape St. Vincent, January 16, 1780, which resulted in the destruction of many Spanish ships and the surrender of the remainder to the British. In this action Prince William Henry, third son of King George III, and afterwards King William IV, received his baptism of fire, serving as midshipman on the Prince George.

The Spanish Admiral, who had been taken prisoner, went on board the Prince George and was there presented to the Sailor Prince by Admiral Digby. After the conference between the Admirals, when Don Juan de Langara was about to leave the ship, great was his astonishment when the Prince, in the capacity of midshipman, reported the Admiral's barge alongside. "Well does Great Britain merit the Empire of the Sea," he exclaimed, "when the humblest stations in her navy are supported by Princes of the blood."

A bit more directly in line with the spirit of the season is the Yule log scene chosen by the Duke and Duchess of York to accompany their greetings. This is also from a painting by Howard Davie and depicts the old British custom of making merry at Yuletide before the open fireplace, in which immense logs were kept burning all night.

The Queen's card, "Bluebell Time," painted by Flora Pilkington, and Princess Mary's card, "The Time of Flowers," by the same artist, suggest Easter rather than Christmas, but are attractive as works of art in any season.

WATCH YOUR THROAT!

The warning signal

MORE serious illnesses than you can count on the fingers of both hands start with the warning signal, an irritated throat.

A tickle in your throat is nature's way of saying "Look out—Danger ahead: the bacteria are getting the upper hand!" Naturally, too, because the throat is the open door for infection. It is the ideal breeding place for disease germs.

And in spite of this, so many of us neglect throat protection! A good, healthy body will be able to throw off the attacks of many bacteria, but very often the human system is not in the proper condition to fight them back.

When you think of your throat in this way, it seems amazing that more people do not take the proper precaution against illnesses that start with throat infection. Particularly, when the safe antiseptic, Listerine, is as near at hand as any corner drug store.

Be on the safe side these winter days. Use Listerine regularly as a mouth wash and gargle. Also, then, you will be on the polite side with regard to that insidious condition, halitosis (unpleasant breath).—Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, U. S. A.

M'CARL CHARGES RECKLESS USE OF ALIEN FUNDS SEIZED IN WAR

SMALL SALARIES, LARGE EXPENSES

Funds Were Taken From Treasury and Placed in Banks at Lower Interest Rate.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Declaring that Comptroller General McCarl's report of the administration of alien property had disclosed the "worst system of looting this country has ever known," Senator Borah (Rep.), Idaho, predicted today an investigation would be ordered by the Senate after the Christmas holidays.

Senator Borah declined to discuss the details of the report, saying only that it shows the need of a thorough investigation.

The Senate already has authorized the inquiry, but has not provided funds to cover the expenses. Senator Borah brought this to the attention of the Senate some time ago and after the holidays he plans to press his request for a $50,000 appropriation.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—President Coolidge has in his possession a voluminous report by Comptroller McCarl on the administration of the $500,000,000 worth of alien enemy property seized during the war.

Senator Norris has called on the President to present the document to Congress, but it was stated at the White House that Mr. Coolidge had not decided whether to do so. It has sent copies to the Treasury and to Senator Borah, chairman of the committee authorized to investigate what Borah has described as "the worst sink hole of iniquity in the Government's history.

Both the Treasury and Senator Borah refused to reveal what McCarl's accountants found in the records of the Alien Property Custodian's office, but the correspondent has come into possession of a transcript of the report. Among the facts disclosed are the following:

Excessive amounts aggregating millions were paid for attorneys' fees, for commissions to depositories and other expenses.

Corporations supposed to be liquidated were permitted to continue for years, for the benefit only of officers and attorneys.

Salaried government employes were paid additional amounts from trust funds.

Expense Limits Disregarded.

Limitations placed by Congress on expenses of administration were disregarded in big matters and small. Funds were left for years in the possession of certain individuals without any serious attempt at collection.

Interest on trust funds was withdrawn from the Treasury, which paid more than 4 per cent and deposited in banks paying less than 3 percent.

The securities taken over were so scattered through abnks and trust companies throughout the States that administration was expensive and difficult.

Individual trust accounts are incomplete.

Large expense accounts compensated for small salaries.

Government employes rode in private cars at the expense of trust funds.

Annual reports did not list the entire force on the payroll. (This is the only reference to the $200,000 private payroll which included for a time a social secretary of the President's wife.)

Investigation Cost $200,000.

McCarl spent a year digging in the Alien Property office at a cost estimated at $200,000. His report ranges from the $7,000,000 American Metals case, which brought former Attorney-General Daugherty and former Alien Property Custodian Miller to the criminal bar, to the traveling expenses of Miller's secretary, Fred M. Wilson from whom he now wants to collect $106 for duplicate per diem allowance.

The Comptroller points out that
